And not only that! "Kid Galahad" himself . . . has had standing because of his high regard for women . . . is a new actor, only 22, called Wayne Morris, who appears destined to join the ranks of top stars on the strength of this one picture.

The new leading lady who holds his romantic interest is an upcoming girl, too . . . . Jane Bryan, who scored a triumph in "Marked Woman" as Bette Davis' sister.

A great story and a magnificent cast "Kid Galahad" looks like one of 1939's very best!

Robinson plays a prize-fight manager, Miss Davis is his girl friend "Fluff", Humphrey Bogart is Eddie's rival manager. Robinson is none too straight; Humphrey is an out-and-out crook.

They kill each other off, near the end of the story, to the great approval of everyone concerned. Best meanwhile "Kid Galahad" has moved up to the championship, and has won the heart of little Jane Bryan, who plays Robinson's kid sister. And "Little Caesar" dies happy, because he has developed a world-beater.

It's a splendid human story, to be enjoyed by everyone. Of course, you expect . . . . and get . . . great performances from Miss Davis, Robinson and Bogart. But keep your eyes on this new boy, Wayne Morris, and see if you don't join the predictions that stardom for him . . . and for Jane Bryan as well.

The same program today and Monday, with this excellent feature attraction, the latest Belle News Flashes includes the only scenes taken of the clash between strikers and police near the Republic Steel plant, South Chicago, they are presented for you uncut, uncensored by permission of the authorities. It is a film document that has stirred the United States and that is worth the serious consideration of all thinking Canadian people. "Egghead Rides Again", a colorful Western Cartoon will be exhibited on the same program. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.10 and 9.20 p.m. Tuesday attraction starts at 2.55, 7.35 and 9.30 p.m.

Orthodox Leaders Mourn Patriarch

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, July 24 (CP-Havas)—Leaders of the Orthodox Church today mourned the passing of their patriarch, who died a few hours after the Lower House of Parliament ratified the Italian Concordat he and the Church opposed.

Patriarch Varnava died at midnight, shortly after conclusion of his losing battle for an adverse vote on the pact with the Holy See. He was 57 years old.

It was expected attempts would be made to reconcile the church to the accord after taking it to the Senate for ratification. This assurance was given by Premier Milan Stoyadinovitch.

Apprentice Gardener Plan is Approved

Branford, Ont., July 24 (CP)—Government approval of a plan for training apprentice gardeners was received today by the Brantford Parks Board. Part of the cost of training the gardeners by Ontario Agricultural College will be paid by the Provincial Technical schools for rehabilitating young men and women.

According to the plan agreed to by J. F. Marsh, Ontario Deputy Labor Minister, young men will be employed by the Parks Board here from May to October and sent to the O.A.C. the remainder of the year. It is expected other Parks Boards will adopt the scheme.

LANCE ISAACS' LAST GOAL IS A WINNING ONE

Indian Lacrosse Star Dies of Heart Seizure in Dressing Room

DUE TO EXERTION

Brother Bill Also Collapses When Told of His Brother's Death

Toronto, July 24.—(CP)—Lance Isaacs' last goal is a lacrosse game was recorded as a victorious one today.

The 36-year-old Indian star of the Toronto Marlboros died in his team's dressing room at Maple Leaf Gardens last night during halftime intermission in a game with Brampton Excelsiors. A heart seizure brought on by extreme heat and exertion was given as the cause of death.

He died shortly after he had scored a goal, the Marlboros' seventh, and the Brampton counted the game he called and chalked up at 7-5 Toronto victory. The Brampton boys went to let Lance's last goal in life be a victorious one," said Conny Smith, manager of the Gardens.

Lance Isaacs, from through Canada, was sitting in a corner of the dressing room, passing from exertion of play in the third period, with two quarters of the game when he suddenly gasped: "Tony, help" and collapsed. Death was due to an acute collapse, said Dr. W. W. Bell of Toronto. He understood he had been drinking a lot of water during the game.

The player's 23-year-old brother, Bill, also "a member of Toronto Indians, fainted in the hotel of Lance's death. He had to be given medical attention. Bill later was called upon to console his brother's wife who had been hurrying to the Gardens to see the last half of the game but arrived a few minutes after he died. She was prostrate with grief.

Lance was born on the Six Nations Reserve near Brantford, Ont. He played lacrosse with the Brantford Indians, Canadian Homemedale Champions; Burlington Seniors, and last winter in Rochester, N.Y. Statistics released yesterday showed he had scored 26 goals for Marlboros this season, 2nd only among the leading scorers. He added two goals to this total last night.

C. O. B. L. Jottings

Down again, up again, out again! Just about describes the keen struggle being staged by Kingston and Oshawa for top position in the O.C.B.L. On Wednesday the Peries repulsed their half-game margin after losing it to the motor men when they met last week.

Napanee Gibbards greeted Oshawa Wednesday with fourteen hits in the big display of the season. Six sensational runs proved the margin that later visited their final challenge could not overcome. Biddle relieved Ogden in the fifth and gave up only 13 hits and 4 walks. All 13 runs were scored while he was in.

Peterborough smeared Tommy Jamieson's pitching record when they pounded him out in the fifth this week. He was the first time Joe Daly's little fellow had been chased to the showers this season.

Jack Maunder of the Sudbury Star whispers that Hughie Brennan, the former Napanee catcher now with Lake Shore Athletics, is seriously exchanging vows. (Ted Reeves please note.)

Bi McIver, with Belleville last year, is pitching nearly for Provo Minos in the Nickle Belt league and has not lost a game. Cec McIntyre and Mel Little, who were with Belleville in 1935, are both with Wright-Hargreaves in the Temiskaming Baseball League.

Peterborough are transferring a home game with Oshawa to Oshawa in connection with the coming centennial celebration.

Doug Meek, Red Auburnville, and Jack Turner of Oshawa, Al Clarke of Peterborough and Walt Gerow, Jr., of Napanee and Letty Noakes of Belleville, are the O.B.L. players who attended the Toronto Maple Leafs' baseball school this week.

Harold Buck, Kingston outfielder, went out of the way around the bases in Wednesday's game when his attempted catcher was heaved wild to the outfield.

Russ Kitchen will likely get the nod for the return game with Kingston today while Oshawa will probably start Jack Turner against Napanee.

Peterborough claimed they would protest an eighth-inning decision in Wednesday's game when Umpire Jeffers was put behind the plate after he had been tagged out at the plate. With a big lead off second, Jeffers called for third on a passed ball and continued home when Bennett was slow in fielding. He was called out at the plate but the ground rules are one base on a passed ball. After the dust gets settled it is not expected the Oshawa management will enter into the business of protesting, which is quite a trolling after all.

GUNS HALT C ARRERS OF CANADIAN AND U.S. DESPERADOES

Victor Gray Pete Trazler Tom Penmarkenzie

Four desperadoes, two in Canada and two in the United States, have their lurid careers brought to a halt with their shootings by Canadian police officers and by United States border worker. Sought for the murder of Sergeant Fred Davidson at Sudbury for more than 10 days, Victor Gray, alias Seymour, was killed and Tom Penmarkenzie, his companion, seriously wounded when they walked into an ambush prepared by provincial police near Spanish River, 25 miles east of Sudbury. The two men are alleged to have shot and killed Davidson as he approached an automobile from which the bitter cense plates were being removed. In Oklahoma Pete Trazler, the southwest's most dangerous gunman and his companion, Fred Tindel, were captured by an oil field worker when they had kidnapped Trazler's pistol from the lap of Tindel as he dozed in the back seat of an automobile in which he was being taken to Oklahoma City. Trazler is captive, J. E. Denton shot and killed Tindel and wounded Trazler. The killing of one criminal and the capture of the other brought to a close the gigantic search which had been organized following the prison break of nine desperadoes from Kaufman prison farm near Weldon, Tex., two weeks before. Trazler and his companion had a posse of 800 persons in hot chase through the swamps before it is thought he was finally overtaken by the Oneida Yacht club of Rochester, N.Y. Terry Picks Wrong Restaurant To Use 'Mealticket' Hubbell As Cubs Plaster Giants 11-3

White Sox Also go to Town Defeating Yankees 8-6;

DETROIT SPLIT

Cardinals Behind Old Jess Haines Topple Dodgers

By BID FEDERAL

Bill Terry picked the wrong restaurant to use his "mealticket" this time and the kidding Cubs are sporting a two-game lead over the Giants in the National League race today.

Terry has grown so used to toting Mealticket Carl Hubbell anywhere in the National League lunch wagons and dining halls as good as money in the bank, that it's become a habit.

But the Cubs held their bargain day on base hits at Hubbell's expense yesterday and upset pre-game calculations of the baleful left-hander "alibi who had about conceded the opener to the ex-Giants.

In the first inning the Giants beat out Curt Davis out with a two-run barrage. Then, however, the Cubs called on Johnny Charley Root and backed up his 8¼-inning, five-hit relief pitching with an 18-hit attack of their own that punched Mealticket Hubbell full of holes. They wound up with a top-sided 11-3 decision.

White Sox Down Yanks.

The Cubs however, weren't the only pebble on the Giants' beaten yesterday, the White Sox, chasing after the Indians in the junior flight, big things against the Yankees. Despite Joe DiMaggio's 26th homer and a couple of other four-base wallops the Sox slugged Murderers' Row 8-6 to cut the Yanks' lead to six games.

The Cardinals sent Jesse Haines to the wars and turned him into a skitter to whip the Dodgers 4-1.

Hon Hogsett made it two in a row for the Browns under the Ben Tomlinsky by blanking the Senators with five hits for an 11-0 victory. The Athletics trampled the Tigers 16-4 in the opener of their double-header and then lost the nightcap 8-5 in 11 innings. The Red Sox scored early to topple the Indians 6-4 and the Reds trounced the Phillies 6-3. The Pirates and Bees were idle.

JOE KELLEHER BEST HURLER AS KIWANIANS WIN

Practically Cinch Play-off Berth by Beating Shannonville

ALLOWS ONE HIT

Ronsky Hits Homer in The First to Start Team Right

Hurling one-hit ball, and batting of a scratchy nature, Joe Kelleher pitched the Belleville Kiwanis Juniors to a 5 to 1 victory over the Shannonville team in a South Hastings League fixture at the latter village last evening to elevate the Kiwanis kids into fourth position and a potential play-off berth. It was the second victory of the current season of a seven dozen games played by the local juniors.

The visiting Kiwanis Juniors started the winning ball rolling in the initial frame, as Johnnie Ronsky, first baseman of the aggregation up to the plate and connected with pitcher Ken Gray's third delivery for a mighty home run, the juniors continuing until they had pushed four runs across the plate in the initial frame. Ronsky's second hit of the game in the fifth inning drove home his team's fifth and final run. The game was terminated in the fifth inning on account of darkness, however, but was a legal constituted game of five full innings.

Harler Well Supported.

Kelleher was given some splendid support in the early stages of the game as the Kiwanis kids played a stellar game in the field. He walked only two and struck out five while he gave safe hit, a mean hit that deflected off the shortstop's glove for a called hit from the bat of Coutts, the homsters' catcher. Juby struck out eight for the Shannonville team, but his wildness, as he hit two visiting batters and walked four outstanding Kiwanis Juniors batting, The Kiwanis kids played errorless ball.

The Kiwanis juniors are playing an exhibition game tonight in Millcreek County on Monday night at the Park Grounds following which they meet the Shannonville squad in a return game next Wednesday evening in a game that will determine which team wins a play-off berth in the South Hastings League.

TORONTO BEATEN IN 12 INNINGS

Syracuse And Leafs Change Position With Loss

(By the Associated Press)

It seems that even Newark Bears have their problems. But nobody is pitying manager Oscar Vitt.

While most of the International Baseball League Managers wonder where they can dig up that 'certain' 300 hitter to put the entire punch in the attack, Vitt pounders his head on what slugger he'll have to bench for the day.

It used to make room for first-baseman Babe Dahlgren sent down by New York Yankees early in the season, they picked pint headed Gene Kelleher, a third-baseman, who happened to be leading the loop, batsman at the time. The reason for that was George Mc-Quinn. McQuinn, it appears, was the league's best first-sacker, the year before.

So, Dahlgren shifted to the hot-corner, Kelleher benched and McQuinn remained at first base. Today Dahlgren and McQuinn are both hitting around the .300 mark, and with Joe Gordon and Bill Richardson, at short and second, respectively, round out the hardest hitting infield in the minors.

The Bears were in their glory last night as they sent their league-lead scoring to 19 1-2 games and a 12-6 triumph over the second place Montreal Royals. The Bears walloped out 15 hits.

Syracuse and Toronto changed positions with the Chiefs going into third by virtue of a 5-4 win over Rochester, while the Leafs were being nosed out by Jersey City in a 5-4, 12-inning thriller.

Baltimore and Buffalo evened their current series with Buffalo Bisons taking the opener, 6-5, in the ninth to win 7-5.

AAJMAA JUNIORS STOP PERCIVALS

Dracup Allows Only Six Hits And His Team Climbs

Garnering four big runs in the initial frame, the Aajmaa Juniors climbed up a notch nearer the last play-off berth in the local Senior Softball League as they continued on to down the Percival Store nine by the score of 8 to 2 at Coleman Flats last evening.

With Harold Dracup, their youthful mound ace, in rare form in pitch atr hit ball the Aajmaas kept the Percivals off the score sheet except for the seventh frame, when the losers rallied to score two on two hits and a walk. Dracup retired the side in order in the second, fourth, fifth and eighth innings and was going strong as the final out was completed. He allowed six hits, all of which were fairly well scattered. Al Philp being the only Percival player to get more than one safely, his efforts being two singles.

Stan Acne led the Aajmaa kids at the bat with three hits in four tries, while Rowbotham collected a brace of hits, off the deliveries of Wal Clark, Percival moundsman, who was knocked for an even dozen hits. Hits by Moon and Reynolds in the big fourth three more runs in the fourth, after scoring single run in the first and terminating their counters with one more in the sixth. Rowbotham crossed the plate four times for the winners with timely runs. Thrasher and Goyer scored the Percivals' two counters.

This evening the Corbin Locks are playing an exhibition game at Coleman Flats versus a Kingston softball team, while the Senior Bell-Sargent and the Corbin Locks tangle in a regular league fixture.

AUBURNS SCORE 21-4 WIN OVER LOCAL ROVERS

Peterboro Club Score Raft of Goals in Every Period

CREIGHTON STARS

Winners Use Quick Passing Attack With Deadly Shooting

Scoring with consistency in each period the Peterborough Auburns took a full out of the Trenton-Belleville Rovers by the score of 21 to 4 in a Central Ontario Lacrosse League fixture played at Peterborough last evening. It was the Auburns' ninth consecutive victory in the league without a tie.

Although the home club scored the Rovers 4 to 1 in the opening period, the visitors were practically out-locked when in close and on top of Creighton, Hughes, Boelle and in position to shoot. "Red" Creighton led all scorers of the night as he collected seven different times with Miller and "Mick" Magee getting a trio of counters each, and the veteran Ira Dundas a brace of goals.

Rovers' defencemen, scored two of the Rovers' goals when Anderson and Lalonde getting one each. Both of these backs were credited with assists on two goals, however, Anderson being witnessed by some 700 fans and was remarkably clean throughout, only one penalty being handed out, that misdemeanour going to Dallin of Rovers, there being a minor offence in the first period.

Creighton Real Good

Early in the initial frame Lalonde, Rovers' defence, broke through the Peterborough defence to draw Creighton out of the net, but like every witness when the veteran "Buster" Whitton, of Belleville hockey fame, came out of no place to save the day. Creighton gave a sensational exhibition of goal-keeping in this period as the Rovers carried the play in the early stages. Using an effective defensive game in the second stanza, however, the home squad baffled the Rovers' defence and raced in on Fox to score six goals, as the visitors bagged their only counter in this period with Miller being the marksman.

Reverting to a systemized attack and passing game in the third period the Auburns unleashed a similar attack in the third period, with only Miller and Creighton finding the range but the latter could not combine with Buster Whitton and Ira Dundas of his team's goals. Miller, Vilcrall, Hughes and Ira Dundas were also out for the Auburns while Fox, Rowbotham and Lalonde starred for the Rovers with the remainder being fair against a better team.

The Auburns' next home game will be played on Wednesday night when they meet Belleville at Hardwood Terriers as their opponents. The Belleville squad—goal, Fox; defence, Hudon and Riley; centre, Lalonde; homes, Day and Rowbotham; defence, Boelle and Logie, Clay, Robinson, Tache and Anderson; forwards, Hughes, Creighton; defence Miller and Chute, centre, Dundas; homes, G. Vilcrall and Magee; manager, Dallin; subs—Magee, Crowe, Parker, Whitton, Belleville—goal, Fox; defence, Hudon and Riley; centre, Lalonde; homes, Day and Rowbotham; defence, Boelle and Logie, Clay, Robinson, Tache and Anderson; forwards, Hughes, Creighton; defence Miller and Chute, centre, Dundas; homes, G. PEARCE INVITES PADDON TO RACE

Sydney, Australia, July 24 (CP-Reuters)—Lester Pearce, Australian professional sculling champion, has received a challenge from Phil Bowden, holder of the world's championship, inviting him to Toronto to race for the title in September.

Pearce stated Paddon would have to pay his own expenses but no stake would be needed.

"I am prepared to row for the title for nothing," said Pearce.

Paddon left Australia to meet Toronto he would also need a chance of winning a stake. It is said he would have trouble in getting his expenses in view of the criticism which followed his victory in the Australian race.

Some critics considered that "Snowy" Bolton, from whom he won the title, was not given a fair race and that he suffered from the wash from Paddon's boat.

It is likely efforts will be made by Paddon's supporters to arrange a race with Pearce either on the Richmond River or on the north coast of New South Wales, the Parramatta River (Sydney), or at Toronto.

The success and future of rugby football in Belleville hangs in the balance, no longer will the promoters of the fall classic go down in their dip to provide recreation for the players and entertainment for the citizens with continued drain on the purse strings of one or two. With the exception of hockey and Eddie Thomas has been footing the bills locally for years with personal cash layouts annually, other lines of team sport have slowly passed out of existence in Belleville, simply because the general run of the fans will not take an active interest in the sponsoring of civic sport in this city.

President P. C. MacIntyre, of the Belleville Rugby Football Club, has called a meeting of local sportsmen to be held in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday night in hopes that some interest in the sponsoring of the fall classic may result. Rugby football is a comparatively new sporting venture in Belleville, insofar as playing the game is concerned strides is concerned. The pastime is gaining in popularity in the schools, especially in the upper schools, such as the Collegiate, St. Mike's, O.S.D. and the Albert College. If the sport fans of the city as was naturally demonstrate their interest in the city rugby team at the "Y" on Monday night it will naturally signify the fans do not desire the game, or perhaps we should say are not interested in the advancement of athletics in our city.

If the Belleville intermediate football team is dropped from the O.R.F.U., such an exodus would mean there would be no future for boys playing football in our upper schools, which might force them to leave Belleville in quest of opportunity elsewhere, that is if they are desirous of playing the game after graduating. There is no interest advertising medium any city can attain that gives greater dividends than a good city team in competition sport, such as football, hockey, baseball, lacrosse and other lines of team sport. We have found the answer to appeal to local fans to assist in the sponsoring of sport in Belleville, but unless the spirit of enthusiasm is shown on Monday night it's curtains for football in Belleville.

It was "kids' night" in local sporting circles last twilight, the Kiwanis juniors winning over Shannonville and the Aajmaa juniors triumphing over the Percivals at softball. Joe Kelleher's one-hit pitching was a feature of the ball game at Shannonville and that of Harry Kelley at Coleman Flats. For once the Kiwanis kids got off on the right foot, that is they slowly stepped to the plate to meet one of Ken Juby's fast ones for a clean home run and then to the dust had settled the Kiwanis kids had pushed four runs across to go on and score another in the second and to win 5-1. Shannonville's best lucky break came in the fourth when Pearce either on the Richmond River or on the north coast of New South Wales, the Parramatta River (Sydney), or at Toronto.

Looking for as much practice as possible the Kiwanis kids have engaged the Milford team, champions of Prince Edward County, to play an exhibition game at the Fair Grounds on Monday night. The Milford club carries a number of former Picton, Intermediates and should prove stiff opposition for the kids.

Amateur wrestling, under the promotion of the Midway A. C. of Toronto and with Buddy Brouse, of this city as matchmaker, will be tried as a Belleville offence, Monday, Rover defenceman, played a sterling game he did for the locals, while Miller, locals, while Miller, Mick Magee and the fiery Ned Vitarelli looked the best for the homesters. The Auburns' quick passing attack, inside of the Rovers' defence soon proved too smooth and prolific for the Rovers to cope with. The Rovers are in town to the Norwood Terriers on Wednesday next at which time they hope to better their position.

With Harold Dracup in the driver's seat all of the way, Red Anderson and the Aajmaa Juniors upset the Percival Store's softball wagon to win 8-3 last evening. Dracup pitched a fine ball and was given splendid support. Incidentally the win elevates the Aajmaa juniors into stocks considerably, but they must win two of their remaining three games to finish in a play-off berth providing Percivals lose their two remaining games. The Aajmaa kids scored four big runs, which proved enough.

Although the Trenton-Belleville Rovers absorbed a 21 to 4 lacing at the hands of the Peterboro' Auburns last evening, the Rovers made it interesting all the way. It was the Auburns' ninth consecutive victory in as many league stars. The veteran "Buster" Whitton made his initial appearance of the season with the Auburns and showed the gallery he could still manipulate the old gutted stick with the best of them. Doubtless Whitton will be used by the Peterboro' hockey club this winter, that is, if Joe Dwyer hasn't "packed" the veteran in the fall, in 1926 when the O.H.A. warned "Nix, Joey, ship some of 'em back."

One of the surprising features of last night's game was the clean game afforded the fans, only one penalty being handed out and that to Dallin, manager of Rovers, Hover defenceman, played a sterling game for the Rovers in the nets, while Miller, Mick Magee and the fiery Ned Vitarelli looked the best for the homesters. The Auburns' quick passing attack, inside of the Rovers' defence soon proved too smooth and prolific for the Rovers to cope with. The Rovers are in town to the Norwood Terriers on Wednesday next at which time they hope to better their position.

NAZI SUBMARINE CAUSES BRITISH EXCITEMENT

Excitement was caused in England upon report of a German submarine in Portland Sound off Portland Bill, England. According to one report the sub spent two days beneath the waters of the English channel prior to being spotted by the British destroyer Wolfhound, bringing it to the top by dropping depth-charge bombs. But the admiralty later said a German sub merely happened to pass as the destroyer dropped a practice charge.

"I Want My Man"

By MARTHA SIMPSON

The town gossip, known as "Old Ironsides" because of her heavy steel bones, seated herself in the cane rocker of Mrs. Jones' kitchen.

"Don't you just love the smell of newly-baked bread?" she asked exuberantly, her beady black eyes swimming richly and her heavy face beaming.

"Yes," replied the demure Mrs. Jones, lifting a pan of bread from the stove. "But I'm rather glad to see this is the last loaf."

"I'm, I suppose you are," symbolized the gossip. "Now you can sit down and eat a while and we'll chat a bit about things."

Little Mrs. Jones seated herself very gently on the edge of the kitchen chair while "Old Ironsides" rocked expectantly. Then she turned her head undecidedly for a few moments, and then began: "I think it's a shame the way the girls carry on today. Why, you'd never believe how silly they are until you have one of your own. Take that Sadie, of mine, now—why, from morning till night that child hasn't a sensible thing in her head. She gets up in the morning with just a few minutes to spare; she slips on a few flimsy rags and plasters on some paint and calls herself dressed. She drinks a cup of coffee and chews a bit of toast and calls herself fed; and then she rushes off to the train as fast as he spindle legs can take her.

She goes into the office and types all days; but I doubt if she puts a moment's thought on her work; it's all on parties and those outlandish stories that I wouldn't have told of no kid nor kid of mine, and I'm glad I ain't got no child or child in those wild times—but she managed to bow up with this Jimmy fellow, and let me tell you that this Jimmy boy is about the same type, travels fast and light-hearted.

"They're all up to it. It ain't like it used teh be when we was young. But the certain shame of it is that these wild girls get the men. Now if for some reason they stopped getting the men, they'd have down a bit; but with the men coming free and easy, everything's hunky-dory with them."

"Yes," sighed Mrs. Jones. "I suppose it's all true. I suppose that's why I doesn't care about anything else. I'm so anxious as to whether or not she'll get a decent man—you hear so much about these heart-breaking affairs now-a-days, and with the girls as frivolous as they are, goodness knows what's going to happen to them. They'll get it soon run off with any man that stares at them even though it's only a glass eye he's staring with."

"Indeed!" broke in "Old Ironsides." "I know of one young lady who saw a man in the subway she thought she'd like to know. Of course, she couldn't speak to him, but the young lady had a good head, unconscious you know, of thinking her eyes, very calchingly, too, and my land, that man followed her for some stations and then spoke to her and today he's married to her. Queer!—Queer world! And the old gossip shook her heavy head.

"I'll admit there isn't much formality to the present generation. They point at things and babble at the top of their voices. I asked Sadie one day, 'Why do you talk so loud?' and she came right back in a voice that would startle a mule, 'Oh, ma, how am I gonna make myself heard in a vee, quiet voice when everybody else is screeching at the top of their voices?'

"I know several young fellows that I'd like to have interested in Sadie. But she doesn't like to the idea of me fixing it up for her. She says, 'Let me pick my own. Those of yours are dead ones.' I do hope she does pick out a good man."

The conversation was interrupted by the slamming of the front door. There was a stirring of two pairs of feet, a whispered conference. Then a girl's voice broke out, "Oh, ma's a darling."

"Why," gasped Mrs. Jones. "that's Sadie. So early in the afternoon. Something must be up. Oh, I hope it's nothing serious."

The curtains between the kitchen and the living room was spread apart and Sadie's head appeared with tousled hair and rouged cheeks. "Oh, mom, I want you to meet Mr. Minton," thrusting wide the curtain, "my husband. We were married this afternoon."

Little Benny's Note Book

Saturday afternoon ma said to pop. Really, Willyum; no wonder there so much violence in the world. I went by the Little Grand this morning, you know the Little Grand where the children all go to the movies, and really, the posters outside were positively blood-curdling. One of them is still haunting my mind. It was so gory and ghasly.

Yes pop what was it all about? pop said, and ma said, It seemed to be mostly about horses. They were kicking and rearing and galloping and falling in all directions, and the most frocious looking Indians were stabbing them with bows and arrows without compunction. It certainly cant be any fit picture for a child's tender mind, and yet I'll bet anything that place is crowded nite now with cheering yelling children, having their values of life distorted, she said.

It must be a picture about wild horses during frontier days, pop said. But are you sure the picture isn't today? he said, and ma said, What's the difference, today or any other day, the principal is the same.

It's today all rite, pop. It's called Pawnee Bill's last ride and this is the day. Saturday, I said, and pop said, Then by golly I'll take you to see it. I've got an idea that the picture isn't half as wild as the poster, and that is our chance to find out, he said.

I suppose you'll be disappointed if it's not twice as wild, you're sure funny, ma said, and pop said, I admit I have a feeling for wild horses, but I wouldn't have a taste for one driving the house, get your hat, Benny.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

The majority in the Street are looking for better markets in July. Develop over the next two or three months and acquisition of some of the more promising securities is recommended. In the past week the Industrial information that made its appearance was of a most constructive nature.

The Shawinigan earnings for the first six months of this year showed a marked improvement over the similar 1936 period and estimates are that better than $1.50 a share will be shown for the full year, which would be exactly twice current dividend paymnents.

The Brazilian Traction earnings show a very marked improvement. The gross earnings for June of this year were the highest since January 1930 and the net earnings the highest since January 1931, which would appear to indicate that the company's full year's earnings should make excellent reading for shareholders and assures satisfactory dividends from time to time.

At last the industrial news has been of a nature to lend confidence to the market, but the list has not reflected this. As long as the business picture continues favorable, the market will, in time, reflect the betterment as the trend of industry is what in the final analysis shapes a market trend.

Gypsum, Lime and Alabastine Canada, Limited.

At a special meeting of the shareholders of the Gypsum, Lime and Alabastine Canada Limited held in Paris on July 22, the resolution to remove the present board of directors was defeated by a majority of nearly 30,000. It is to be hoped by all concerned that the eternal strife that has been surrounding this company for more than a year will cease and, that the directors will start at once to eliminate some of the criticism that has been brought out. Financial Service is indicating that immediate action will be taken to correct the shortcomings.

The shareholders are interested in a management that can increase sales and enhance earnings. There is plenty of room for improvement to take place here and it is felt by many quarters that Mr. George A. Dobbie, the president will bring about the desired changes, and before many years go by, the common shares should be on a dividend basis.

The Gypsum Lime and Alabastine Canada Limited has a total funded debt of roughly four million dollars which can probably be refunded under present conditions to an advantage. The working-capital position of the Company has improved $400,000 over the past four years and a glance over the various balance sheets reveals that a small surplus is now carried as against a deficit of $280,354 in 1933. Further gains in this connection can also be looked for, with deception eliminated, and with the management improved there seems to be no good reason why Gypsum, Lime and Alabastine could not regain its former prominent position in the trade especially with the outlook for the building industry improving.

HEAVY CASUALTIES

Japanese Say Chinese Let Only Half Column in and Then 'Opened up'

Tientsin, China, July 26 (AP)—Japanese army headquarters reported tonight that fighting was raging at a gate in Peiping's outer wall after Chinese permitted half a column of Japanese troops to enter the gate and then fired on them.

The Japanese column of about 500 men intended to enter Peiping by the southwest gate to "protect Japanese citizens". The Japanese here said the Chinese announced they would permit the entry, then let half the Japanese troops come in and opened up with machine guns and grenades.

Casualties Reported Heavy.

Heavy Japanese casualties were reported both inside and outside the gate.

(There already is a Japanese Embassy guard of about 500 men in Peiping.)

Chinese reports said the Japanese "attacked" the gate, soon after the Japanese ultimatum demanded Chinese troops quit Peiping and its environs or face drastic action.

Reports of the new clash followed Japanese air bombardment of the 38th Chinese army division at Langfang, midway on the Peiping-Tientsin railroad.

CAT PICKS CRAZY PLACES TO SLEEP

Kitchener, Ont., July 26 (CP)— Smoky Joe, the toughest cat that ever relped from a back fence, is the new mascot of the Kitchener Fire Department. Smoky is the successor of a large number of animals that couldn't stand the hard life around a fire hall and retired from mascotting.

Underneath Smokey's nondescript coat of hair that has a constant affinity for fresh paint beats a lion's heart, the firemen declare. Fireman Danky Vogt describes Smokey's unfailing this way: "He's a great cat but he picks the craziest places to sleep.

The first day Smokey took over the job he curled up for a nap on the rear axle of the fire chief's car. The chief came out in a hurry and Smokey was catapulted from under the rear wheel and rolled half way down the drive. But the cat took it in a spirit of fun.

Last week Smokey went to sleep under the exhaust pipe of a fire truck. Engineer Bill Hendrie started with a roar and Smokey Joe took the full blast of the exhaust in his canal appendage. The firemen admitted Smokey relped a bit but he lost his sorrows in a few mouthfuls of salmon and forgot all about it. Discussion helped people who, wa

Racket 'Busting' Sensational

That was last March 26. The city applauded another climactic triumph in the 35-year-old Thomas E. Dewey's meteoric career as special rackets prosecutor in the city of New York. That was a climax to the Five Finals. Quietly, Dewey went back to work in his clean-cut and tasteful quarters in the Woolworth building directing his staff of 40 aides in gathering new evidence.

Then, when ready, he "cracked down" again and again, without warning, striking fresh terror into the "invisible empire" of organized crime—aimed not alone at the flashy gang-type criminal, but also at the mild-appearing racketeers who like to think of themselves "respectable" and not as Public Enemies. Dewey is now getting results in legitimate business to the tune of more than $100,000,000 a year in New York City.

STUCK THUMB IN FAN TO STOP IT

"Come with the Wind" said Mark Lum, Belleville Chinaman and popular laundryman as he said this morning as he and ruefully at a badly lacerated thumb. Mark on his morning rounds entered a home where an electric fan was running full blast. The lady of the house asked Mark to stop the fan, and Mark obliged by placing his thumb in the whirling blades.

A few seconds later he entered a drug store where his wound was dressed.

"Bad thumbee, pretty dumbee", soliloquized Mark as the druggist bandaged the injured digit.

USES SUN UMBRELLA TO REACH SAFETY

Necessity is still the mother of invention, and the new ideas are often turned to good account as was evident in the Bay of Quinte yesterday just previous to the heavy wind. A youth in a canoe with a lady companion in an effort to keep ahead of the gale had the inspiration of unfolding a sun umbrella to the breeze as a sail. The light craft surged over the water to a safe landing just moments previous to the first squall.

At the annual meeting of the Canadian Bandmasters' Association held in Owen Sound on Saturday, Lt. CHICAGO SURGEON NOT CURATOR OF ZOO

"A wonderful country" said Dr. W. Ditmar, famous Chicago surgeon, who has been sojourning in Belleville during the past few days and who left for his native city this morning.

"The only trouble I have had," he said, "is telling my friends that I am not the Dr. Ditmar, curator of the New York Aquarium."

AIR MAIL POSTAGE IS ON INCREASE

Recent trans-Atlantic air flights by the new monster British air liners have made Belleville residents air conscious, it is indicated at the Post Office by records that during the past few weeks the air mail postage despatched from there has been increased considerably, attributed to have been caused by the interest aroused by the successful over ocean flights.

APPLE CROP SUFFERS THROUGH HIGH WIND

One effect of yesterday's rain and wind storm in this section and Prince Edward County will be the loss of considerable unripened apples and other fruit shaken from the well laden trees by the heavy gale. It was stated in later reports received today...In Prince Edward County, J. L. Nicol of Wellington, estimates that a loss of about one-fifth of the crop in apples will be suffered.

POLE BROKEN OFF AS CAR CRASHES

Front Spring Breaks Rendering Steering Apparatus Useless

When the left front spring of an automobile broke, the sudden force of the impact resulted in the vehicle veering from the road and crashing into a hydro pole on North Front St. at midnight Saturday night. The pole was snapped off at the base and the motor car, driven by Charles Burd, Foxboro, was found leaning over the broken pole. Mrs. Burd received slight contusions while Miss Doris Burd complained of bruises when Constable Arthur Booth and P. C. Arnott arrived to investigate. The injured persons were taken to the surgery of Dr. J. J. Robertson, where medical attention was afforded the injuries, none of which were serious. Subsequent investigation proved there had been a flaw in the broken spring permitting the axle to drop and interfere with the operation of the vehicle.

At American courist, who gave his name as Joseph Genest, Ohio, was apprehended travelling at an excessive rate of speed on East Dundas St. and Cannifton Hills on Saturday afternoon. The accused was escorted to the police station where the matter was amicably settled between the motorist and Chief Ketch.

William Dingman, 257 1-2 Ann St., reported the loss of his bicycle to police authorities on Saturday night. Mr. Dingman parked his bicycle in front of his home and in a few moments. Upon his return the "bike" was gone and has not been recovered as yet.

BERNARD WRIGHT SERIOUSLY HURT

William Masterson Arrested on Charge of Criminal Negligence

Bernard Wright, 12, Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Edmond Langevin, 14, of Hungerford, Thanksgiving were severely injured on Saturday night, two miles east of Tweed on the Bonarlaw side, and are in Belleville General Hospital. William Masterson, 20, of Hungerford, driver of the car with the other car said to be involved in the accident, was arrested by Chief Orville Hayes of Tweed shortly afterwards on a charge of criminal negligence. He appeared before Justice of the Peace, Charles H. Kerr, and was remanded without plea for trial.

The Wright lad suffered a dislocated hip, extensive lacerations of the neck, a puncture wound in the left breast and a possible fracture of the neck and left shoulder. He is progressing well. M. G. Dales of Tweed, being given first aid at the scene of the accident, rushed to Belleville Hospital. In that institution he was attended by Dr. J. J. Robertson. Mr. Dales said today, that his condition was "fair." X-ray pictures have been taken of the boy's injuries to determine further injuries.

Edmond Langevin 14, sustained a concussion and his condition is reported "good" today by the Belleville Municipal Band master. Wright, 16 driver of the car and Raymond Langevin, another of the party, below, but not sufficient to cause their admission to hospital. Masterson was not injured and his car was not damaged, while the Wright car was a complete wreck.

It is stated by Chief Hayes, that Masterson, driving the 'bus car, was driving ahead of the Wright car on the Rogers Road and started to left, turn into an old laneway. The Wright car in going off the end of a large culvert, landed on bank that it collapsed. News of the accident spread rapidly and the occupants of the Wright car were extricated from the wreckage by the help of Chief Hayes was early on the scene to investigate with the above results.

Gashed-in Forehead From Golf Stick

Golf is a grand game, but like all other sports is best played in its natural environment, at least so thinks Bert Coburn of Picton. Saturday Coburn called on the pro at Bull Duff Coopey who is interested in golf and owns a fine power boat.

In the Cooper garage, Buff was pursuing a mighty club. He demonstrated his golfing ability. Coburn stood by watching the Cooper drive, and here disaster entered the scene. Cooper's "follow through" missed the ball and struck Coburn above the eye inflicting a nasty wound. He was rushed to Picton Hospital where doctors inserted several stitches in the wound.

WILL INTERVIEW PREMIER ON C. I. O.

J. E. Rhiner of New Service First Plane Holiday at Northern Lake

J. Earle Rhiner of the Pittsburg staff of International News Service who will call upon Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn personally to obtain for his bureau an interview on the Premier's stand on the C.I.O. question, passed through the city, early this morning en route to Magnetic and other northern lakes of the county, to forget the busy copy desk on a two weeks' fishing holiday.

Mr. Rhiner expects to visit "one of the most interesting men in present day news, Mr. Hepburn", on his return from the northern jaunt.

"Premier Hepburn is as high in favor with residents in the United States as is President Roosevelt in the Democratic constituencies", is was declared by the visiting reporter whose specialty has been the political end of the day's news. "They admire that guy down there just the same as they admired Roosevelt when he came out and took hold after his election".

The Premier's reputation whose name has recently become a familiar one to editorial and copy headline writers of metropolitan dailies was gained through his stand in connection with civic activities, one of the most important of the year's stories from an editorial viewpoint, it was stated.

33 Years in Journalism

Mr. Rhiner, whose thirty-three years as reporter, feature writer, political commentator and desk man is a graduate of defunct New York Sun. For some years he was "Lee man" on that renowned paper, graduating later to the copy desk of the New York American and other Hearst-owned papers. He has made his own statement, covered most of the big stories of the day, and at the time of the Thaw case carried the running story from the start, even on a direct wire from a telegraphers "bug" on his desk to the editorial room of the paper. His knowledge of telegraphy was gained from spare time study under expert instelage, a study he recommends to other aspiring younger reporters. "Telegraphy is much more preferred than short hand", in his opinion.

On a busman's holiday, Mr. Rhiner, who is travelling with three Pittsburg friends, is accompanied by his wife and son Junior, upon which he hopes to record some of his Canadian impressions during his visit to the eastern section of Canada.

Familiar with the western province, he has used that locale as background for a number of the exploits of the famed Royal Canadian Mounted Police, in occasional off-routine feature stories.

Canada Interesting Country

"Canada is one of the most interesting countries of the world", declared the bespectacled news chief during his brief stop over in the city while arrangements were made for regular supplies of live bait to be shipped to their camping spot. The people are ever kind and interesting and courteous. Our service is always glad to get good Canadian stories, because the big dailies eat 'em up. That Mad Trapper' story seems like ages ago now but was the biggest of all was the Nova Scotia, Moose River, cave-in (the disaster.) They couldn't get enough of that copy down there.

Newspapers, whose offices are now dressed in marble, tile and chromium fittings have progressed far from the cobwebby dinginess of the past decade. The baggy-kneed reporter is out as far as newspaper work is concerned and the college graduate, preferably with some background of journalistic training is far preferred in the desk work, types of news gatherer who used to scratch notes on a torn envelope. Radio, with its allied telephoto service is being used with increasing popularity, and attempts are being made at present to have copy transmitted directly to the key of the linotype machines after the preliminary editing. Composition has become so keen of late, and the reading public so blase that fortunes are being made in the search for new service. Immense sums are paid by the larger dailies for a single "beat" story. Nine out of ten young men out of college almost, would prefer to be reporters, or editorial writers, or particularly columnists. Even the rural correspondent of late years has had to spruce up and dress his stories with new ideas in order to have them accepted by the "desk". Mr. Rhiner has found.

CANADIAN TOURIST SPENDING FREELY

Is 'Among Best of Customers,' Says Store Manager

"While United States visitors are good customers, and do leave much of their currency behind, don't lose sight of the fact that our own Canadian tourists are also heavy spenders and good customers, probably more than those from the States," declared the manager of one of the city's largest department stores on Saturday.

"As a fact, from our experience, we would rather have the Canadian customer than others; they're easier to please and appreciate what they want."

"Our business at the camp could be called almost wholly Canadian. Canadians are in fact outspending the United States tourists five-to-one," declared Vernon Orr, manager of the city tourist camp this morning. Since we've started they have been the mainstay of the camp. The Americans want to rush right through the city; the Canadians like to stop and spend a little for a while in their own country."

Trade lists from the south of the border has fallen off this year, indicated, it is believed, by the fact that this year not so many United States war veterans are going overseas instead spending their bonus money as they did last year. Many of the millions of dollars handed out by bonuses last year found their way into local cash registers, but from the tone part this has been pretty well spent, it was stated by the camp manager.

Belleville Boys Helping to Harvest Tobacco Crop in Essex

Perfectly satisfied with working conditions, wages and the manner in which they have been treated, Gordie Cook and Harold Thompson of this city, who have been working for some days past in the tobacco fields of Essex County, helping in the harvesting of one of the heaviest crops on record, were on their way back to St. Thomas and the tobacco fields today after a week end spent in the city.

Men from all sections of the Dominion have been lured to the tobacco counties during the past week or so by the promise of steady work, even if but temporary, and fair wages. There will be little trouble in the harvesting of the crop in spite of efforts being made to organize the workers. Wages have run as high as $40 per week for the month of July, it is stated. At the start of the harvest so scarce was help that it was believed sum damage would be caused the drying crop with no men to get it into the barns. This condition has been remedied by the sudden influx of workers.

It is estimated by the workers that some 20,000 men will be employed this week on the harvest. Though a demand has been made for $5 per day, wages range from $2 a day and board to $3.50 per day.

ORDER IS REFUSED

Reported Chinese Defeated at Longfang And in "Full Rout"

Tientsin, China, July 26—(AP)—Lieut.-General Kiyoshi Kataoki, Commander-in-Chief of the Japanese forces in North China, was declared today to have served an ultimatum on the 29th Chinese Army demanding all troops be withdrawn from Peiping and the surrounding area by noon Wednesday.

"Non-compliance with this demand," the Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported Kataoki told General Sung Chehyuan, Commander of the 29th Army, "will compel the Japanese Army to take all steps necessary" to force their withdrawal.

Unconfirmed reports declared Sung, deputy chairman and commander of the Hopeh-Chahar political council, had refused the ultimatum and ordered the 36th "not to withdraw but to resist".

Direct headquarters announced all available Japanese strength—including bombing planes—had been assembled for punitive action against troops the Japanese charged attacked a railway detachment at Langfang barracks last midnight.

Japanese army headquarters here said the Chinese had been defeated in force at Langfang and were in "full rout" to the northwest. Japanese officers in Peiping (90 miles the pursuit, striking the Chinese with machine guns and bombing their concentrations.

Domei reported the terms of the Japanese ultimatum were:

"The 37th Division stationed at Wanpinghsien, Papaochan and Nanyuan must withdraw south of Tuesday to withdraw to the south. Soldiers of the 37th Division stationed at Peiping and other points in the zone of hostilities must have left the zone by noon Wednesday, and entire 37th division must thereafter be withdrawn to Paotingfu (90 miles south of the Peiping Zone)".

Compliance, the note was reported to have conditions, with the ultimatum the Chinese intention to prevent aggression in the north China crisis."

Chinese reports stated the Japanese had dispatched reinforcements to their Wanpinghsien post-office situation is unchanged this morning after news was received of the defeat of 2,000 Japs who were in the vicinity of Wanpinghsien that the first Sino-Japanese clash occurred July 7.

Latest reports indicated hundreds of Japanese soldiers and civilians had been killed in the Langfang fighting, some reports having said to have been blown literally to bits during the bombardment and the town damaged.

SCHOOLS TO USE OLD TALKIES

Educationists to Review 15,000 Shorts in Movie Vaults

New York, July 26 (CP)—Will H. Hays, czar of the movie industry, has appointed a committee of leading educationists to review the 15,000 sound film "shorts" lying in the vaults of Hollywood motion picture companies, to select those of educational value for use in schools.

After reviewing all the "shorts" said Dr. Mark A. May, director of the Institute of Human Relations at Yale University who is chairman of the committee, the educationists will make recommendations to the Hays office for educational films to be made in the future.

"Of the 15,000 'shorts' which have been produced," said Dr. May, "it has been estimated that 2,000 of them can probably be used as is, and perhaps another 2,000 could be used after alteration.

"The travelogues, of which there are not less than 1,000 good ones, and the episodes from American history will undoubtedly be very useful in connection with the teaching of geography, history and civics in the lower grades."

Friendly Predators

Wisconsin's new law prohibiting the use of steel traps on polse, pests, bears, or perhaps human beings as mentioned above ground should be gratifying to those who have striven to educate the public to understand that the hawks and owls for which those traps are set are friends of mankind.

Most states of the American Union have on their statute books laws protecting all hawks except three—the small sharp-skinned and Cooper's hawks and the large goshawk, which have the reputation of preying upon poultry, game birds, and songbirds. These laws are largely based upon painstaking research by the United States Biological Survey by naturalists and food habits. Pennsylvania's lawmakers at one time enacted a hawk bounty law, and the results were so dire that it was hastily repealed. Vermont devoured the bounty crops and bounty hunters shot everything in sight.

The pity about pole traps and hawk-killing contests is that the first victims are the large-winged gliders mescalled "fen hawks," "marsh hawks" and "blue hawks" whose loss hurt the farmer. Audubon societies and other conservationists are gradually making the facts known.

Huge Stone Gift To Royal Couple

Amsterdam, — Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard received today one of the most unusual presents ever given to a young couple. It was a huge stone weighing about three and a half tons, which arrived at Prince's palace at Soestdijk, having been dragged on a truck by a number of oxen from the neighboring town of Amersfoort.

The stone came from Lippe, the birthplace of Amersfoort possesses one found in the neighborhood centuries ago, which the country admired recently. The town, not wishing to offer its example, decided to present the best thing ordering a duplicate of it from Germany.

SIR CHARLES SAUNDERS

Sir Charles Saunders, made a name for himself but better than fame made wealth for the nation with his development of the famous Marquis wheat. As one writer puts it, thousands of square miles of the golden fields of North America stand as memorial to this great cerealist of the Dominion.

Saunders who was knighted for his work in development of agriculture, was of the type whom the world honors sooner or later. Great discoverers win their reward for sacrifice of their time and interest, because the fame is but the reflection of their gifts to the world.

The ear of Marquis wheat picked in 1903 by Saunders has years ago become millions of dollars yearly more than would have been possible without Marquis wheat.

Saunders' name should live. Those who developed the wheat we know are not known as Saunders is. They came down through the ages, but who developed the wheat or corn from the grasses which grew in the Orient? Long before the day of the Pharaohs of Egypt wheat had become the mainstay and staff of life for man, for wheat has been found in the tombs of the ancient kings. While those who developed this wheat to the position it occupied in the Pharoahs' days are unknown, with Saunders it is different, he was in a governmental post and his production stimulated wheat wealth by millions yearly, transforming entirely agricultural. This is a day of statistics. He could not avoid fame and honor.

THE WHITE GRUB

Have you ever noticed when visiting the country during the season of preparing the land for seed that the best farmers allow their poultry to run loose in the fields? A city man, accustomed to think of hens as kept in wire-encircled yards, might think there was a little bit of carelessness there, but the very reverse is the case. The busy hen is doing a most useful work, comparable with the value of the eggs she lays.

Watch the hen pecking away industriously behind the ploughman as he turns the sod. Sometimes the pigs join in the game. They are feeding on the enemy grubs that have been developing in the pipelines in which the mother bettles laid their eggs, and which the ploughshare has uncovered. Occasionally the robins, quails and skunks take a hand in helping the farmer in thus ridding his soil of the pests.

The White Grub is one of the worst of these. Ordinarily it lives on grass roots but it likes potatoes, the roots of corn, wheat, asters, geraniums, strawberries and roses. Entomologists of the Dominion Department of Agriculture made an examination of many farms in Eastern Ontario two or three years ago and found an average loss of $188 per farm.

The May beetles which lay the eggs that become the white grub are burly brown insects which fly about at night. In 1934 a major flight of them caused much destruction by defoliating trees and shrubs in over 4,000 square miles of southern Quebec.

The people of Canada are dependent upon remedies other than those provided by nature for the extermination of pests and insects. Over $8000,000 worth of insecticides are made yearly, according to the General Manufacturers Branch of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Department of Trade and Commerce.

APPRENTICESHIP

A trend in education has been seen in Wisconsin, as elsewhere, where youth seeing that all cannot be school teachers, lawyers or business executives are turning to the skilled crafts in greater numbers under the supervision of the Industrial commission administering the State Apprentice Law. ast week in thirty three state public employment offices, a placement office was opened.

Though the apprenticeship law of Wisconsin has been on the books for 26 years, boys and girls leaving school rarely wanted to learn a trade. It is said that too many were continuing in school to overcrowd the professions of law and medicine, the teaching profession was saturated and most of those who did not continue their schooling wanted office jobs. Few went into shops or ere content with the steady progress in the building trades. Only the depression brought the adjustment of youth to the law which was enacted to overcome just this situation.

The contract in Winsconsin provides for employment for three, four, or five years or in some trades like the machinist and metal occupations, it specifies the actual number of hours of actual training. To qualify for a journeyman carpenter or bricklayer requires four years.

Wisconsin girls find a demand for dress making, millinery or beauty shops. The boys are learning undertaking, watch-making, baking.

SHAW'S BIRTHDAY

Today George Bernard Shaw is 81 years of age. Before the public since the early nineties as a dramatist of note he has never failed to keep his place before the thought of the world. His tartness and sharpness of tongue remain even into the eighties as he yet writes for the stage and for magazines on social problems and speaks in interviews on almost every subject in a gripping way.

SEVERAL HOUSES HAVE BEEN BUILT IN BELLEVILLE during the past two years under the provision of the Dominion Housing Act, and several more are under consideration at the present time with plans prepared and ready for final approval at Ottawa. Houses built under the Dominion Housing Act must conform to certain regulations and be rather a high type of dwelling involving an investment of four or five thousand dollars at least. Increased interest in the government housing proposition indicates return of confidence in Canada's present and future prosperity in willingness to invest four or five thousand dollars in a modern home. A government report shows that loans made under the act up to June 30 totalled eight million, seven hundred and ninety-nine thousand, two hundred and sixty-six dollars. ($8,799,266). These finances housing accommodation for 2,000 families, the average loan per family being, approximately $4,400. In June the average loan per unit was $4,000. Numerous loans were made for amounts below $3,000, the minimum being $1,700.

NOT HALF THE STORY OF ANTHONY ADVERSE or Gone With the Wind, and twice as good as both of them put together, is the book McAree, Globe and Mail columnist, pays to "Northwest Passage" by Kenneth Roberts, just published by Doubleday Doran. This is a story of Major Robert Rogers, a powerful figure in the wars between the English and French and Indians on this continent, commander of Rogers' Rangers, an irregular fighting force of down east backwoodsmen, mostly Maine and Massachusetts men, who put fear into the hearts of the Indian tribes by frequent forays and burning of Indian villages far from the frontier, in reprisal for Indian scalp-raising raids on the English settlements. Major Rogers went with the British in the war of independence, honors received and denied in colonial history. This book remedies that, and if it is half as good as McAree says it must be a humdinger.

"CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION", sent out from Washington to a number of patrons who thought they were getting something "off the record" and worth paying money for', has been exposed as just another racket with the perpetrator expelled from the National Press Club for conduct unbecoming a member. A high code of honor governs the newspaper men at Washington where they are accorded daily audiences with President Roosevelt and kept informed of the course of events within government circles, including what and what not to print. One man decided he could beat the game made of "Confidential Information" which consisted of exaggerations and untruths. Now he is on the outside looking in, and his usefulness as a Washington correspondent is gone. President Roosevelt is respected and protected by the Washington news correspondents because he plays the game fair, and keeps the scribes wise to what is going on in governmental circles, present and prospective, and anything not ripe for publication is kept religiously under cover until released by the President. Previous Presidents spoke through 'mouth-pieces' so that they could not be quoted directly as confirming the truth of the news. This relieved the presidents of responsibility and left a loophole if it became necessary to deny the accuracy of the article or take another course altogether in regard to the matter discussed, without an official somersault being apparent.

IN NEW CONTROVERSY

Because he referred to the Archbishop of Canterbury as an "ecclesiastical cad" during a lecture in Baltimore, Md., the Rev. R. Toronto sponsors of the tour announced their intention of withdrawing their support and Mr. Jardine's visit to Toronto has been indefinitely postponed.

FIND NO TRACE OF TWO AIRMEN

Reported to Have Landed in Parachutes in B. C.

Williams Lake, B.C., July 26.—(CP)—Police and volunteer searchers returned to Williams Lake last night to report they could find no trace of two airmen reported to have descended by parachutes near the Fraser River town yesterday.

Provincial Police led a search party into the region between here and Dog Creek, about 15 miles south, after Joe Place, a rancher at Dog Creek, said he and his two daughters had seen the airmen dropping from the skies near there.

Place's report followed others from Canoe Creek that a plane had been seen flying slowly over that point. It had appeared to be attempting a landing but had continued north. One report said the plane apparently was on fire showing "red under the tail and wings".

At Alkali Lake in the same region, the unidentified plane was reported sighted. Williams Lake is 300 miles north of Vancouver.

CHAPTER I.

The men on the street of the Little town of Shelby winked at each other when they saw Major Mead hitching his trousers and phaeton in the public square.

"The old man's going to get ill!" one prophesied.

"Yes, the Major's depending on old Dobbin to get him home for a night!"

Ordinarily Major Mead drove an ancient coupe, sitting erectly behind the steering wheel, his snow-white mustache and well-combed goatee proclaiming him, with almost hypnotic self-assurance, a gentleman of the old school. His blue eyes would twinkle and his leathery, tanned cheeks would crease in pleasant wrinkles as he called greetings to friends driving by.

"Day, Judge!" he'd quarter in his sweetly husky voice, "Mighty pretty fishin' weather we're havin'!"

"Howdy there, Jim Scott! How's your side bird dog?" . . . He drove slowly and listened attentively to the answers.

To ladies he was always especially courteous, and if age mattered not at all. Though he appreciated the fresh loveliness of the younger set, he was equally ardent in admiring Miss Cassie Drew, whose beauty had withered at least ago in the little notice shop where she spent her dreary days, and who seemed to somehow felt herself to be prettier, more charming and interesting after Major Mead had stopped to buy and inquired solicitously about her health.

But when, as today, he drove the five miles to town behind in the old phaeton behind his small bay horse, he greeted no one. He was sad and downcast, thinking of his daughter. He was about to get drunk.

Katherine Mead, the Major's 21-year-old granddaughter, was no longer Shelby's favorite child. Her grandfather's whereabouts she had driven in in the family sedan and had stopped at the corner of the Centre street to do some marketing.

Coming out of the store, Katherine stood on the sidewalk looking up at the sky. Apparently she found out an experimental hand to feel for raindrops. She had been away two years old but she were it supshy, her limbs still long and lanky, ing it fair and distinction. A green, felt hat, smart in its ageing way, was pulled over her hair. Pressneath it her bronze-brown curls seemed gathered, in fact of accidentness and childish disorder. Her tension expressed beneath her quietly, someone once said, "as if cut from the same piece of silk." The girl's eyebrows were arched but not plucked. When her wide lips parted in their smile, they showed a segment that her teeth were brilliantly white, but not entirely even. There was about her something unassuming and natural and boyish. Something eager and intense. People called her Kate.

"Just a passing shower," she said with a smile to the little grocery clerk who was carrying out her bags to her car. "And don't forget to put her to write down cream of tartar, Henry."

"Yes, Miss Kate," he answered. "But Miss Caroline forgot to say whether she wanted light brown or dark brown sugar, so I put in a pound of each."

"Smart boy," Kate said. "I'm going to the drug store now. Once the car window when you're through please."

She dashed up the street in the now briskly falling rain, her head ducked to miss the stinging drops.

She felt someone seize her arm and shake her sharply. She had run pell-mell into a handsome, black-haired young man of about 25. While he plunged her down to her ankles he laughed down at her. "In a hurry?" he asked.

"Morgan!" Kate exclaimed, and flushed with excitement and happiness. She had been thinking or him steadily for almost an hour, wondering if she would encounter him somewhere in town. He was, in a way, her fiance. In the parlance of the small southern town, he had "rushed" her for months, and one night at a dance last June he had proposed to her and she had accepted.

"Why, no, I'm not exactly in a hurry," she told him, "I could be persuaded to waste a little time, if that's what you mean."

"Then come on in here," he urged.

They were standing before a drug store. Retaining one of her elbows he piloted her through the door past the marble counter with its chalized imbibers and led her to the farthest booth in the room.

Kate said, a little breathless, "You act as if I might run off and run. That's part of your fatal charm, Morgan—treating me like a prize, a cup, a trophies." She thought, "I banter him as if I had to. Why can't I just remember were engaged and relax?"

x x x

Morgan Prentiss smiled. "What do you want to drink, honey?"

She told him a lime rickey, and he instructed the waiter to "make it two." Then he turned to Kate and asked to come out tonight. "I'll ask him for dinner. I'll hurry home and make a date with him. Gosh, it's been they almost always dated Friday night. It was the custom, Kate, and when she was a day pupil at the boarding school for girls.

Kate's gaze, honest and eager and very much in love, rested on his face. She noticed for the thousandth time the way his crisp jet black hair cured above his forehead. The way his arrogant nostrils dilated when he inhaled his cigaret. The quick gestures of his well-kept, nervous hands. The movement of his surprisingly blue eyes that seemed to tale in everything.

She watched him crush out his cigaret, saw that he was going to say something.

"Kate," he said, "how about my coming out Monday night? About seven?"

"Monday?" repeated Kate blankly. She had completely forgotten telling that a whole week-end had topped about her ears, raising bumps. "Why why, Monday, Morgan, I'm not doing anything at all Monday night."

She thought, "Maybe he's going out of town for the week-end." But the next words corrected that.

"The Elwells have a visitor," he said, still not looking at her. "Eve's asked me for dinner tonight. There's something else planned for Saturday and Sunday—I'm not sure what, but Eve asked me to keep both nights open."

"Oh," Kate said. She felt her heart sinking with anger. Quite inconsistently the anger was all directed against Eve Elwell. Eve knew how things were between Kate and Morgan. It was she who knew they were engaged, even though it had never been announced. Kate felt that Morgan normally put in lieu of a ring, and she'd given up all her other beaus for him. She, a southern girl reared in southern traditions, was the public mark of surrender.

With an effort, Kate smiled at Morgan. "Shall we dance?" she asked. "When the college girls come home for vacation it beats up the old town considerably. This girl goes to Sweet Briar with Eve, doesn't she?"

x x x

Morgan nodded. "Nancy Barbara Lodge, Sweet Briar '38. Quite a looker. She and Eve got in just about an hour ago. Eve was showing her the town before they went home to unpack."

"I guess they were in stitches over our rustic Main street," Kate remarked with unusual pin in her voice. "I've always acta as if Morgan's invariably right in his every opinion, because I've been impressed with his judgment. However, you could think of nothing interesting to call her away. No civic enterprise? Nothing to do with the church? I were pining for a sight of her. She had, a year ago at least, let Eve know that she was interested only in Morgan Prentiss. Kate's voice and her bridges. Morgan, strange to say, seemed not quite to have burnt his.

"Well," she said, rising, hating the ironic sense, "I must go back and finish my shopping."

"Very Caroline!" he asked, walking to the door beside her. His polite impersonal tone made her think suddenly, "He doesn't care a darn for Caroline is. He's just breaking off politely."

She answerly primly, "Caroline's fine, thank you. Goodby and thanks for the little chat. Goodbye."

It haven't wasted too much of your time?"

"Stuff and nonsense!" he retorted quickly. "As if I could use my time better than being with you!"

His eyes caressed her in the old way, and her heart lifted again. She thought: "He's just the same, of course. I mustn't be insecure. He's got to be agreeable to Eve on account of their father's."

"I don't forget Monday night," he reminded her.

"Oh no, I won't!" she replied eagerly. Too eagerly! She wondered later as she started the car for home.

Over in the public square she saw familiar old bay horse hitched to familiar phaeton. Grand'dad's in town," she murmured in faint surprise. But the significance of the unprecedented did not reach her. She was too deeply entrossed with thoughts of Morgan Prentiss.

CHAPTER II.

"Mead Meadows" was five miles west of town on the road leading to Lake Hamilton. It was situated among a woodland-pasture, lush with undergrowth of grass, dotted with spreading trees of oak and beech and hard maple, walnut and hickory. Beyond this, and enclosed in a yard with an iron fence, was the house—square, red brick and roomy. Its four tall, colonial lines rising triumphant and serene over the surrounding vegetation.

As Kate drove near, her older sister, Caroline, came to open the yard gate for her. Kate called out, "Thanks, Cline!" and drove back to the garage, once the carriage house, and from the kitchen came an elderly Negro woman to help the girl with were in a hurry. Caroline was not the parcels. "I think I got everything, Ailby," Kate said as they went toward the kitchen. "I mean everything but vanilla. I ran out of money and you know we can't charge any more. Our bills are six months overdue everywhere."

The two sisters loved each other

Kate's gaun, honest and eager and very much in love, rested on him.

Ailby nodded. "Don't matter 'bout the vanilla," she said soothingly, "we kin flavah wit' cocoa-bean bitters. same as we been doin'." The old woman had, in fact, a way of getting a fairly delicious extract from the residue of certain cocoa which she boiled down. Though Kate and Caroline were very tired of the insipid extract. "But you mind my honey," she added with a wise wink, "we gits ourselfs some vanilla extrac' time we make yoah wedding cake."

Kate laughed. "You won't have to be in a hurry about it, Ailby. I'm not thinking of leaving you soon."

She went through the house to the front porch where Caroline sat in a hickory chair, doing the family mending. "Well, darling," she asked her breezily, "have you managed two stockings that match?"

Caroline smiled and made a wry face. "Just," she answered, "what's going on in town?"

Kate examined a loose button on her coat. "The college crowd's getting home," she said casually. "Eve Elwell's being seen and heard as usual. Hat's gone from St. Paul visiting her. Somebody who goes to college with her, named Barbara Lodge."

"Did you see Morgan?" asked Caroline, her eyes on her sewing.

Kate tossed a pillow on the top step of the porch and sat down. "I ran into him on the street. We had a limeade together. He's not coming out tonight," she added as if it were an unimportant afterthought. "He's tied up all weekend with Eve's game."

Caroline looked up quickly at Kate's face, then down again at her darning. "What's on?" she asked. "Parties?"

"I guess they'll be going to Louisville or Lexington for a little while," pretending to stifle a yawn. Driving home, she'd been thinking. She wouldn't go to Eve's party without asking Kate Mead. But if she should give a party out of town, then the old rules of friendship wouldn't be binding.

x x x

Caroline spoke up, loyally, resentfully: "Morgan's a darling. I wish sad Morgan and leave you out! Doesn't she know you're engaged to him?" Her gentle, softly-moulded face was lighted by wrath.

"Few of them do," said a family feud, Caroline," Kate protested. "Let's skip it." She was afraid Caroline in just a moment it would occur to Caroline to say, "What right has Morgan to tie himself up for a whole week-end when he belongs to you?" It was just a little shocking that Eve to blaming Morgan. Kate had carefully refrained from taking the step. She now recited a plausible excuse for her lover:

"Mrs. Judge Prentiss and Mr. Elwell law partners, they're almost like one family, don't you see? Eve's always felt free to call on Morgan when she got in a pinch. There aren't as many eligible men in the county as there used to be. Mostly kids—"

Caroline bit off a thread. "Is an engaged man ever quite free from eligible those days?" she asked innocently.

"Oh, for heaven's sake, Caroline!" Kate exploded. "Jean Elwell's been all a few days. Eve wants that girl from up north to have a good time, doesn't she? She wants to show her kids town's got attractive men in it, doesn't she? Well then! I guess Morgan's asked her borrow Morgan! Why do you—"

Caroline subsided into timid silence. Kate was appeased by the passion in Kate's voice.

Though ten years Kate's senior, Caroline had been long ago bowed to the dominant personality of her younger sister. She was not old—not even when people said "Kate and Caroline"—as they usually did—instead of Caroline and Kate. It seemed natural and right. She was shorter than Kate, had a three inches, and twelve pounds lighter. Her personality was quiet and negative while Kate's was glowing and positive.

Caroline's beauty, aside from her small, graceful body, was composed of delicate, even features, gray-blue eyes and ash blond hair which she wore in a knot at the nape of her neck. She possessed a deep-flowing mentality and a musical speaking voice. She was neither gay nor witty. In a crowd she was often overlooked.

house full of that heavenly hash smell and not be able to eat any of it. . . . Who'll take the hams to Louisville tomorrow?"

"Kate, of course," Caroline answered, referring to their handy man, Ailby's eleven-year-old husband. "You know Grand'dad does not approve of your and my peddling food. When I carry cottage cheese to the Woman's Exchange in town he looks about it. But you know, honey," she added rather pleadingly, "I can't pass our fingers at this poor silly old pride, because it's about all he has left."

Kate nodded. She knew about Grand'dad's pride. It was an affliction, like a sore toe or a broken nose. You had to be careful not to jostle it. Then, suggested, "let's go to town with Zeke and Ailby and count us anything but our lunch. I need a day in Louisville."

"Yes, let's," Caroline agreed quickly. She was thinking, "Poor kid, I will take her mind off Morgan." She said to Kate, "I've got a little check coming. I'll treat you to a movie. And we could window shop." She added, "But you said—Grand'dad can manage him better than I can. Jean is he, in the way? He disappeared this morning."

Kate came suddenly alert. "He's in town now, Caroline. I saw Dobbin and the phaeton in the square."

x x x

The two sisters looked at each other, an electric uneasiness passing between them. "You mean he didn't ride the fifteen?" Kate asked with a quiet, anxious voice.

Caroline said, her head gloomily, "I ought to have looked after him," she said. "I saw the phaeton and Dobbin hitched there, but I thought he'd not register. I guess I was thinking about something else."

Caroline hastened to say, "I understand, honey. I was absent-minded spells myself. Hadn't better send Zeke after him?"

The suggestion was not necessary for at that moment a sound of wheels and hoofs came from the road in the direction of the pike, and almost at once a vehicle, slowly drawn by a horse, came in at the gateway. As the equipage came nearer they saw that the driving lines were wrapped truculfully around the whip. They saw that the old horse jerked his way as if bearing the burden of the world on his body.

The two girls went down to open the yard gate, their lovely young faces knuckled and a little sad. With one second they patted the flanks of the old horse as he came to a stop. Dobbin turned his head and looked at them, meekly accepting their just praise.

"Well, Grand'dad!" Kate said expectantly, trying to make just how much he had had this time.

Evening. Grandfather's reply was indistinct. "Don't let Miss Kitty catch ye comin' home this time," he said. "Miss Kitty with Teddy. Nish officer, ought to be Democrat—"

They knew then that he was very drunk indeed, and that he had probably drunk treat to a half dozen wastrels with his last bill.

loudly declaiming about "the mortgage" and some "young upstart from the mountains" who was "about to get the farm". And then his voice died away and reason returned to his eyes.

Kate leaned over the front and fat bellowed, "Grand'dad," she said clearly, "can you take some broth to bed?"

He smiled at her and nodded "Yesss."

Ailby, who was standing at the foot of the bed, met Kate's eyes and shook her head. The worst was over now, they knew. He would take the broth from Ailby's hand as obediently and gratefully as a child. Then he would sleep.

It was after midnight when the girls went upstairs to bed, but Kate managed to go to Louisville had not abated. They would be up at five they decided, in order to meet Zeke's seven o'clock departure.

The morning routine was rushed and filled with a touch of excitement. The Major slept heavily while the rest of the household did the chores. A few minutes before seven the old Ford sedan was ready to start, the girls seated in the back, Zeke at the wheel and the four carefully wrapped hams on the floor beside them.

Kate said, "I think it's going to be a fine day, Caroline."

"Meaning the weather?" asked Caroline.

"That and everything," Kate answered. "Do you think, darling, that any chance of my getting a new dress for the Dalton dance on November eighth? The old green organdie's sickly mess."

Caroline said thoughtfully, "I don't much chance of that, honey, as my getting my senior year at the Shelby high."

Kate forgot the dress. "Poor old Dobbin!" she exclaimed. "He ought to go back and finish after you've been out a year!"

"Well!" whispered Caroline feelingly.

Kate said, "I didn't realize it meant so much to you. . . . How much would it cost?"

Caroline answered promptly, as if she'd been asked for the time of day, "I could do it on $500. Living in one of the Dalton rooms and eating with it. If I could get my degree, maybe I could get a good job and help with the finances."

Kate said passionately, "Grand'dad couldn't afford the money for you! I'm going to talk to him about it—"

Caroline's voice was not flattering for a most startling reason. They were emerging on the highway and were skidding gears; suddenly there was a roar, a crash of sound and a blinding flash. The sedan careened and turned completely around, miraculously, on its four wheels.

For a few moment there was a queer, heavy silence. Then a jumble of sounds, discordantly blended. A high voice was crying out in a foreign language. Zeke was praying in a frightened, sing-song monotone. Kate was leaning over her still sister and calling frantically. "Are you hurt, Caroline? Are you hurt?"

The owner of the profane voice

He was efficient and rather dynamic. He worked rapidly. "We don't want a crowd gathering," he said, panting a little.

"No," moaned Kate. She and Caroline straightened themselves and took a few experimental steps. "I seem to be all in a piece. How about you, Caroline?" Kate asked anxiously.

"I'm all right, too," said Caroline. "Except for a bruise on my head. I think that's what made me faint."

Over at the side of the road Zeke continued to pray, loudly and solemnly, and to intersperse his petitions with the word "Jam".

"What's he saying?" asked the stranger, jerking his thumb in Zeke's direction.

Kate explained. "We were taking some hams home to a club meeting and in Louisville. They're due early this morning. Zeke's thanking God that we weren't killed and asking Him how we're going to get the hams there on time, Miss?"

"Oh yeah," said the heavy man, chewing his cigar. "It is important? I mean, have you gotta get 'em there?"

Kate nodded, looking at him with aversion. She did not know who this fellow was, but he was accident. Probably Zeke, in coming out on the highway, the only highway, had forgot the 2aked hams to the Pendleton Club as they had contracted to do. She said declarively to her unwelcoming sister, "Let's stand here and watch Zeke get back to the car and get the hams—"

"Yes!" said the dark stranger making a quick decision, "Leave it to me. I'll take the old man and your stuff myself. I'll pay damages on your car, too. Stand over there by the fence while I look it over."

The girls and Caroline obeyed, whereupon the Caroline, "So it was his fault! And he admits-it! Pinch me if I'm dreaming."

x x x

While they waited near the stone gate, the man outside an expert investigation of the car he had damaged. He tried the engine, backed it, strange to say, still ran. He examined the fenders, the windshield, the windows, the chassis. He used tools from his own car in the investigation. Then, with a satisfied air, he returned the tools to his car, and from the back seat took a leather kerchief from his coat pocket, and approached Caroline.

Sensing Kate's leadership, he addressed her. "Fifty dollars will fix it up, I think. Here's fifty. You don't need a new fender and a few other things. I'll send you the rest of the bills from his pocket and skinned off the top one. Kate saw that it was actually $50, and thanked him.

A passing roadster slowed, to a stop and the occupants called out, "No help needed?" he called. A truck driver behind immediately began to ed the same information. To Kate and Caroline it seemed that they were signing for ages. Zeke was praying in a frightened, sing-song monotone. Kate was leaning over her still sister and calling frantically. "Are you hurt, Caroline? Are you hurt?"

the one you saw this morning — cures the hams. His wife, who's their cook, bakes them for my grandfather's very particular about how it's done."

"Never ate anything like it," commented the stranger. "It's not pink like most delicatessen stuff."

"It's this dark color because it's allowed to age," Kate said, and because it's had so many things done to it."

A few more miles in silence. Then from the front seat, "Could you write down the name of them, Miss?"

"It's my grandfather's private recipe," replied Kate coldly.

"Sure. I understand that," said the man on the front seat. "I'm offerin' to buy it from you."

"Oh," said Kate, and grew thoughtful.

No doubt the man with the imperturbable back could read silences. His gaze from his pocket a fountain pen. "Write it," he commanded. "Put in everything."

As he turned again to the wheel Caroline saw a detaining hand on Kate's arm. "Kate!" she whispered. You couldn't!You wouldn't! That's your family secret that's so old and famous!"

x x x

Kate shook off Caroline' shand. "Don't be silly," she cried carelessly. Already she was writing. . . . "Kill your hogs when the winds from the northwest are blowing and about as she wrote. "I can't give you details of time," she paused to explain, "because the field hands attend to it and my mother and I leave home, when it happens."

"Now let's see," she resumed and began to write. "Take two bay two who were listening heard such cidious words in the car, . . . two pepper l . . heaping tablespoon of saltpeter to every gallon of pepper and salt. Rub it well in the salt for six weeks . . . rub with a pound of brown sugar. Grind cloves, mace, black pepper and red, pepper, of each one heaping level tea much black pepper as red . . . hang them in a dry place . . . leave hanging for three months . . . leave a pause.

"Now the cooking," prompted the man with the stone face.

Kate wrote, muttering scarcely audible phrases. "Soak and remove batter . . . make sharp incisions with the point of some surface, drench with sherry . . . cover with sugar and bake in a very moderate oven, two tablespoons black pepper, one tablespoon mustard, teaspoon ground cloves . . . bake till tender."

Kate rested from her labors and her bronze eyes scanned the words she had written. She made a correction or two and courteously returned the pen to its owner. She retained the envelope. That, too, was a gesture understandable to the man who had set back on the front seat.

"How much?" asked the back's former without turning his head.

"Five hundred dollars," answered Kate Mead.

There was a gasp from Caroline, a derisive snort from the front seat. Then silence.

Kate broke the stillness. "You'll get it in perfect recipe," she said. "My grandfather's late father's side is descended from Eastern Shore Maryland. On his mother's side from Tidewater Virginia. When his parents married and came out to Kentucky to live there was considerable argument on the ham subject. They concerned over combined the fine points of each process. This recipe is the result. It's a family secret."

x x x

They had reached the city's first traffic intersection. At this juncture stood a traffic officer attempting to untie a tangle caused by a cheerful colored boy driving a one-horse trash wagon. Kate noticed the policeman warmly, waving her hand at the colored citizen, "Captain!"

It looked as if it were going to be a long wait. The man at the wheel leaned back but lower and looked straight ahead.

AT THE BELLE

Annabella, star of "Wings of the Morning," in "Under the Red Robe."

All the thrills of those adventurous days when men dared all for love live again in "Under the Red Robe," an exciting romantic drama starring the lovely Annabella, remembered for her splendid performance in "Wings of the Morning," and who will win your heart and approval again by her splendid performance with Raymond Massey and Conrad Veidt, which comes to the Belle tomorrow and Wednesday, matinee daily.

A colorful and epic photoplay, it is the unforgettable story, and in its current screen version it stands out as the greatest adventure yarn, and a magnificent romance that sets a million hearts aflame.

Combining the intrigue of "Richelieu," the romance of "The Scarlet Pimpernel," and the adventure of "The Three Musketeers," the picture tells a tale of scarlet intrigue that threatens a throne, with Conrad Veidt acclaimed once as the greatest screen actors Europe ever produced as the flaming audacious adventurer, Otl de Berault, whose sword strikes terror into the hearts of men, and whose smile brings love to the hearts of women.

As the radiant and charming Lady Marguerite, rapturously in love and unaware that her suitor can do story a throne, Annabella more than fulfills the promise of her earlier screen appearance. The exciting romance you thrilled to in "Wings of the Morning," is even more exciting and thrilling in "Under the Red Robe."

The role of Richelieu, the hated, the revered, the courted, the feared, who conspired with all the hearts and lives of lovers to become the power behind an empire, is played by Raymond Massey, noted actor of the British and American stage.

The second of the strong cast supporting Annabella and Raymond Massey are Conrad Veidt, Romney Brent, Sophie Stewart and Lawrence Grant.

"His Test Girl," a very funny multiple-reel star personality comedy, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer News Flashes are announced for exhibition at the same program.

"Kid Galahad."

With three famous stars heading its cast..... Belle Davis, Edward G. Robinson and Humphrey Bogart.... an exciting drama "Kid Galahad" is delighted three large audiences at Belle Saturday.

Besides the three well-established favourites previously mentioned, there's a new star, revealed in the person of Wayne Morris, a 22-year-old newcomer who plays Kid Galahad—a flaming handsome blonde boy who gets the name because he has reverential ideas about womanhood. And a new young leading lady in the person of Jane Bryan, lately with Wallis in love.

Michael Curtiz, the director who made "The Charge of the Light Brigade," "Captain Blood," and other fast-moving photoplays is responsible for the excellent direction.

"Kid Galahad" is the first of Belle preview notices, it will be presented at the Belle tonight for the last times with a very interesting newsreel introducing current, uncensored scenes of what happened at South Chicago, Memorial Day, 1937, showing stirring incidents of riots in the Republic Steel Strike, and other world news events. A funny Western cartoon in color, completes the splendid program of screen entertainment.

Mrs. Adams looked meaningly at Mrs. Todd over the head of their neighbor, Mrs. Capps, who was lovingly re-reading the latest letter from her daughter, Hope. The girl, in her usual racy style, had joyously announced the progress of a beauty contest which was going on in the town where she was visiting.

"Honestly, mother, you ought to see some of the girls who are trying for the beauty prize. It's enough to make me try myself."

It was at this point that the meaning look passed between the other women. Hope Capps, of all people to try for a beauty prize! Thin and gray with, with dark, stringy hair. Oh, a nice girl, but, well, nondescript. The mother smiled.

When the two ladies came to see Hope Capps about a week later, the girl had just finished telling her mother the story of her visit, and was on her way out to keep an engagement. She paused uncertainly on the threshold.

"I'm so sorry I must go," she said. "It is so good to see you again." From the hand which she raised in a pretty gesture of regret, a ring caught the sunlight. Mrs. Adams' eyes fixed themselves on it curiously.

"Your beau! give you that, Hope?" she asked.

"Heavens, no," laughed Hope. "None of my boy friends is so devoted as that. I got it for a prize. She dashed off with a final wave of her hand.

For once neither of the visitors had a word to say. Not before Mrs. Capps, certainly. But out on the street again their tongues wagged freely.

"A prize! That skinny child get a beauty prize!" gasped Mrs. Adams.

Mrs. Todd shook her head. "In my day she wouldn't even be called pretty. But they judge differently now." she considered. "Her eyes are rather nice, though. And she's graceful, too."

"Her hair looks pretty well bobbed, though I never supposed it would," conceded Mrs. Adams.

"Others come your way, I suppose you're going to the dance tonight, Ted."

The boy hailed his hasty stride and shook a gloomy head. "Nope, Girl friend went back on me."

"Get another," advised his mother. "Why not ask Mary Capps?"

Ted was scornful. "Dumbbell," was his verdict.

"Maybe," said Mrs. Adams, "but she won a beauty prize, just the same."

"Oh, come!" The boy was incredulous.

She did," asserted his mother.

The boy paused. His eyes strayed to the Capps porch and he whistled. "I'll stop in and say hello, anyway."

That night Ted Todd called for Mary the dance, much to the anger of his friend Bobby Lee, who had been going to all joking inquiries Ted responded with a wise smile. "You don't appreciate my talent," was the only reply. And, indeed, he had only just begun to appreciate himself.

Mrs. Capps may have guessed at the reason for Ted's visit, but of unprecedented popularity, but, if so, she kept her own counsel. To Hope it was the most astounding thing that ever happened to her. Instead of one or two engagements called a month, her house was fairly besieged with gay calls for her hands and some way she connected this sudden popularity with her first appearance with Ted Todd. She finally got to voiced him before all of the others, and he had taken her under his wing.

It may have been Ted's ascendancy in the social world that caused Mrs. Adams, for her Carl had not been with great success in his attentions to Hope, to be more kind and began to think the matter over, and, I concured to her that there may have been some mistake.

"Poor girl dear," she began at the first opportunity, "that is a lovely ring Hope has. I didn't know they gave that kind of prizes, though."

Hope laughed gleefully, waving at Ted, who had just come in. "It was a put up job," she confessed. "You know I was the worst judge there and practically sure of getting the booby prize. Marion wanted me to get a prize, so she marked this booby prize, on the chance of my getting it. And it is pretty, and I'm not nicer than the first prize."

Mrs. Adams shook her head. "Booby prize for what?" she demanded.

"Bridge, of course. What else?" Then you didn't win a beauty contest?"

"Win it? I never entered one." Hope finished blankly.

Mrs. Adams could not resist a triumphant glance at Ted. "Of course you didn't mean to put on an impression," she began sweetly, and stopped at a score from Ted. The body had honestly forgotten why he had first gone to call on Hope and he resented the tone Mrs. Adams was using. He had needed no reason for his continued interest in the girl.

"Beauty contest? Hope? he said, witheringly. "Well, I should say not."

Mrs Adams bit her lips angrily, but Hope's mother breathed a sigh of pure relief.

HOW LONG CAN A THREE-QUARTER WIFE HOLD HER HUSBAND?

YOU have to work at marriage if to make a success of it. Men say you're a little mercenary, but that's the way they're made and you salute as they should be.

When your back aches and your nerves scream, don't take it out on your husband. He can't possibly know how you feel.

For three generations one woman has told another how to "go through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three periods of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife; take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

A new investigation into the disappearance of Supreme Court Justice Joseph Force Crater, missing since August, 1930, appears certain following statements made by his wife, Stella M. Crater, ADOVE, at Belgrade Lakes, Me., home. Mrs. Crater said she believes her husband is dead and will ask the court to so rule, to clear up his estate.

"Miss Quinte' Bathing Beauty Contest featured 14 entrants from Oswego, Belleville, Trenton, Napanee and Picton. The judges were W. A. Fraser, M.P. of Trenton; Reginald McKibbon, Mayor of Picton and Roy King of Hamilton. Judging was by points as follows: (1) Poise, (2) posture, (3) features, (4) height and weight, (5) personality. The attractively young ladies paraded all together on the Club House verandah, and then each one appeared separately, to be appraised by the judges, and applauded by the crowd.

(1) Miss Quinte—Margaret Asselstine of Belleville, 90 points; (2) Miss Vera Sayers of Picton, 86 points; (3) Miss Vera Sayers of Picton, 86 points.

"Pigskin" and "Duke" supplied the fun in this and many other events of the afternoon and evening, in spite of their considerable weight proved themselves most able and keen sportsmen.

Commodores P. L. Ward of Picton, and Dr. J. Fraser of the Trenton Club and Dr. Swetman and Mrs. Swetman of Belleville, were in a happy manner over the "Mike".

When the boat left at six o'clock, fifteen passengers were left behind, A launch sped to overtake the racing boat, whose speed increased to pick up the fifteen at Glenora. Cars carried them to the Point and the last of the happy crowd were off.

We were glad to see Dr. G. A. Whiteman able to be about after his recent serious illness.

RACKET - BUSTER

with a Bachelor of Law degree. In 1931 he was appointed assistant United States Attorney, and that same year won him plaudits from the Legislation of a ring of realty racketeers who milked victims from coast to coast.

He was taking an interest, too, in the financial affairs of a sixty-two-pound plug-ugly known as Arthur "Dutch Schultz" Flegenheimer.

Investigating the Dutchman's income and tax payments, Dewey found that he had not deposited $856,000 in the last six months of 1930—at the rate of $5,000 a "working" day—without paying the United States government a nickel.

After the "Dutch" income tax

Dewey was also appearing in court against a pale, cold-eyed little fellow known as Jack "Legs" Diamond, who at that time had already survived three gun-fire attacks and had gained the soubriquet of the clay pigeon of the underworld.

The youthful prosecutor won a 4-year prison term conviction against Diamond, but "Legs" wrote his own doom by appealing and gaining freedom on bail.

The furtive little gangster who began his career as a bottle-washer and became bodyguard for "little Augie" Orgen and Arnold Rothstein later becoming one of the century's most vicious racketeers, died in a blast of Tommy-gun slugs in Albany, December 12, 1931.

Diamond had "beaten the rap" in 26 out of 26 cases before Dewey got to work on him.

In 1933, still laying the background for his brilliant performance as racket-smasher, Dewey turned the heat of income tax investigation on Dutch Schultz, Waxey Gordon, Ciro Terranova, the "Artichoke King," and Terranova's successor, Joe "Adonis" Castiglia, who harvested more than $6,000,000 in 3 years by cornering the artichoke market.

He secured an indictment charging Gordon with defrauding the government on taxes of $1,526,600 for the two year period, 1930-31.

Waxey fled into hiding, and Dewey was confronted by a series of death-silenced witnesses—no less than four men murdered to seal the lips from testifying against the furtive Gordon.

It was apparent that when the last witness had been "rubbed out," Dewey would calmly reappear and laugh at Dewey. The only way to stop the murders was to get Gordon.

Catches Sleeping Racketeer

Dewey got him, capturing him at his Catskill hunting lodge—a ludicrous figure, snoring open-mouthed, with a revolver under his pillow.

If Dewey was shy on witnesses, he had all the facts. He had amassed 6,000 documents—cheques, drafts and bank accounts—and the jury convicted Gordon in 40 minutes on four counts of conspiracy and evasion of income taxes. He was sentenced to ten years in prison.

LACROSSE STAR DIES

Collapsing from a swift heart attack in the dressing room of Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto, as he came off the floor for the half-time intermission during a senor O. L. A. game against Brampton, Lazzo Isaacs, great Indian scoring star of Toronto Marlboros, died instantly. His brother, Bill, also a Marlboro star was in the dressing room. Possibility that death was caused by a blow over the heart was suggested by Dr. Shirle Lawson, chief coroner of Toronto, who ordered an inquest.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

East Jaffrey, N.H., July 26 — (AP)—Pink skunks, not pink elephants, were hunted today by vacationists at Contoocook Park.

The hunt got underway after John Patterson reported his dog killed a pink skunk. It had the normal black markings, Patterson said, but what should have been the white portion was shaded a delicate pink.

Scientists figuring the "pinkies" were worth real money, began an intensive hunt for others.

LOYALIST'S CAPTURE GERMAN TANK DURING MADRID BATTLE

While German arms and ammunition have helped Spanish rebels carry on their fight against the Loyalist government, the German tank shown in this photograph failed to bring success to the insurgents commanding it. The tank was captured in the Casa del Campo section of the Madrid front where loyalist and insurgent forces are locked in the greatest battle of the war. Government forces have been driving deeper into rebel territory following the 10-mile salient which they established several weeks ago.

A two-masted Rochester sloop, en route up the bay was forced to anchor off the government dock this morning, riding out the storm.

NEW THEATRE OF WARFARE

General Francisco Franco

Spain's war reached a climax as the "battle of Madrid" locked loyalist and insurgent forces in the toughest armed struggle that has taken place since the Great War. Insurgent forces fought for a stranglehold at the neck of loyalist's salient into insurgent siege lines west of Madrid. Rebel leaders, in an effort to gain back the ground lost when loyalist forces drove a spearhead salient through rebel lines, are said to have massed 200,000 troops for a concerted drive against the western flank of General Joe Mola's forces. General Mola is loyalist defender of Madrid. The additional rebel reinforcements are being drawn from less active fronts. At the same time Great Britain and France issued a agreement with a foreign warning to General Franco demanding explanation of a battery of big guns mounted at the Spanish port of Algeciras and trained on Britain's stronghold of Gibraltar. The note warned again

Boston Bees Looks Like Team To Head Either Giants or Cubs After Showing in Home Stand

Bees Have Won 22 of Last 30 Starts With Four Hurlers

Cubs And Yankees Return Home With Safe Margins in Each Loop

(By Sid Feder)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

They were still chasing after the Cubs on the National League merry-go-round today, but the brass ring appeared to be exclusively in possession of Boston's hefty-but-good Bees.

With the National League's west and the American League's eastern divisions heading home again after an up-and-down swing through the rival sectors, the Bees were checkling up their collective sleeve over a pitching staff that came out of nowhere and is pure poison to the rest of the senior circuit.

And the payoff is that, although the Bees' Big Four flingers are worth their weight in pound sterling right now, they didn't cost wily old Bob Quinn and cagy Bill McKechnie much more than enough to keep a Sunday crowd in hot dogs.

A Cheap Quartette

Danny MacFayden landed in Boston on waivers. Every other club gave up an old Guy Bush. Lou Fette and Jim Turner, a couple of 30 year Rookies, couldn't have cost much to bring up from the minors, this year, at an age when most others are on the way down.

Yet, this quartet, aided by a couple of other "cheap" assistants, such as Johnny Lanning and Gabby Gabler, and without the backing of any kind of batting punch, have burned up the loop in a drive, that has skyrocketed the Bees from eighth place on the 14th of June, where they're flirting with the first division.

They have won 22 of 30 starts, have allowed but 81 runs in 270 innings, have a fine collective earned-run average.

Showing Sleek Show

They climaxed their winning spree yesterday by topping the Pittsburgh Pirates in both ends of a double-header 8-3 and 6-5 as Fette, Bush and Fette doing the work. The twin win stretched their victory streak to eight straight over the high and mighty Cardinals and Pirates, and sleek, the Sunday diamond show from the usually featured pacemakers in both leagues.

The Giants finally found a hurler able to go the route, and salvaged the last game of their series with the Cubs 5-0 behind Harry Gumbert's six-hit shoving. Gumbert fanned six of the Cubs' lead to two games.

At the same time, the Yankees wound up a home stand which by splitting with the Chicago White Sox, thereby winning the four game series since June 7. They won the final game 5-3 in 11 innings on two homers, and were nipped in the nightcap 7-6, despite a pair of round-trippers by Joe DiMaggio and Henrich, all of which left them with a five-game lead in the American League.

Senators Win Double

Washington's Senators knocked the ears off the Cleveland Indians, Brown's pitchers for a twin win, 16-10 and 10-5. Lefty Grove hurled a two-hitter in the first game to stop the Indians 4-1 in a single game cut to five innings by rain, while the Detroit Tigers, banged out four homers to whip the Athletics 12-3 as their lone hit was washed out in six frames.

The Dodgers and Cardinals put on 32 innings of dizzy base-ball, with Brooklyn winning the opener 6-5 in 11 innings and tying the nightcap 1-1 at 12.

The Reds split with the Phillies, dropping the second game 7-3 after taking the opener 12-3.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Lefty Grove, Red Sox—Stopped Indians with two hits for six innings for 4-1 win.

Harry Gumbert, Giants—Blanked Cubs 5-0 with six hits.

Gerry Walker, Tigers—Hit homer and single, driving in four runs in 12-9 win over Athletics.

Chick Hafey, Reds—Hit homer with bases loaded, double, driving in five runs in 13-3 opener victory against Phillies.

Bill Dickey, Yankees— Dickey's two homers in opener 12-11, against White Sox.

New York, July 26.—(AP)—When autograph hunters get too annoying Jimmy Dykes, manager of those surprising White Sox, merely drapes his right hand in bandages and tells 'em it's sprained..... so far the gag has worked.....

Race fans would like to see War Admiral and Seabiscuit get together ..... Hals off to Prof. Jesse Haines, Cardinal pitcher, who jumped into the Yanks-Sox fracas. The bal don Dimaggio broke in Chicago the other day was not his favorite home run club..... President Sam Breadon may laugh 'em off, but rumors that Frankie Frisch is on his way out still bob up.

The daddy of the race horse Pasteurized was named Milkman..... Bob Feller may not know it, but he gives every pitch away—at least to Joe Dimaggio, Yankee Coach..... TWEEDSMUIR VISITS CABIN

Fort Chipewyan, Alta., July 26.—(CP)— One of the highlights of Lord Tweedsmuir's visit to the north was provided by a trip to a few traders' cabin on the Embarrass River Friday. He went in a sticker-powered canoe piloted by Captain Harvel Alexander only to find that the trader, Elmer Read, was in the hospital in Edmonton.

Lord Tweedsmuir was delighted with the cabin built by Read from timber he cut and sawed from the bush country more than 300 miles from Waterways, the nearest railway point.

BOATS CAPSIZE IN HEAVY SQUALL

After You And Joka Finish With The Former Winning

Thrills and spills as one of the worst squalls of the season broke during the progress of yesterday's weekly sailing races, sponsored of Victoria Park by the Belleville Yacht Club, were witnessed by hundreds of spectators as three craft capsized and all but two were aboard and took to the cover of the shorelina. Only two boats finished under the wire. Now, Arthur Callaghan's "After You 3rd" winning over Duke Smith's Joka in the "A" class.

The largest flotilla of boats of the season got away in fine style as Starter Ernie Baldrey fired the starting gun. But, sailing conditions prevailed during the first lap with the "After You" taking the lead over the Joka on the first-out-going leg of the triangular course as the lap finished. On the Prince Edward County leg of the second lap, however, the heaviest blow of the season came out of the south, resulting in certain boards being clearly visible as the various skippers experienced difficulty in holding their craft to the wind. The first to capsize under the squall was Mack Storm's Blue Eagle with the Toola, with skipper Kellar at the helm, going over under the next blow. The Flame, with a Toronto crew, was the next victim, while the Scotch made directly for shelter.

Drifted With Wind

Far behind in the "A" class was Harry Bennett's Alaska, which also got about and drifted down the bay under partial sail, the skipper lowered all canvas. Excitement was running high on shore at this time, many of the spectators being of the opinion, that both the After You and Joka would have to either take to the shelter of one of the islands or fall victims of capsizing. But Skippers Callaghan and Harry Whaley at the helm of the After You got to their posts and with some fine seamanship continued. Again in the third lap a heavy blow hit the two remaining craft in the race, but they weathered the squall to have the After You cross the finishing line one minute and 11 seconds ahead of the Joka.

Power boats came to the rescue of the capsized craft left floundering in the bay after the squall hit during the second lap. Harry Evans, George Leademan and the crew of Mr. William Bennett's yacht, Shell, all assisted with the latter standing by to render what assistance was necessary. Also aiding Mr. Leademan towed the boats in differently from the harbour.

Alderman Baldrey, chairman of the Victoria Park Board sailing committee, announced after the race the largest crowd of the current season was present. He stated: "We had the biggest number of entries in the first race so the crowds are increasing. We of the Victoria Park Board consider the races are an asset to the club and the general public, who all show the best of sportsmanship and take the cool breeze, that the races as a rule provide, in the right spirit. Three classes "A", "B" and "C" Sailing Canoes, with the starter's gun, eight racing boats in all competing in the day's programme. Secretary Charlie Jeffs, of the Belleville Yacht Club, announced that a special meeting of the club members in the Club house on Thursday evening to organize their annual Labour Day programme of land and aquatic sports.

Loss First Game

While Meares was having his way into the hall of fame, another young hurler was being carried out. Alley Donald, crack Newark ace, was beaten by the Montreal Royals in the first game of their double bill, 9-2. Donald's winning streak had reached 11 straight before yesterday's defeat.

In the nightcap, Joe Beggs of the Bears held the Royals to seven hits, while his mates clouted Jim Pallilon and Hod Lisenbee for 15 safeties and a 11-3 triumph. Bob Seeds clouted a home run for the winners, with two aboard.

The Buffalo Bisons rolling with four runs in the eighth inning and beat Baltimore, 8-6, in the only other game of the day. Rain prevented the clubs playing the second game of the double bill and washed out a single game at Rochester where the Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs were scheduled.

FIRST ANNUAL REGATTA HELD BY QUINTE YACHT CLUB

The newly formed Bay of Quinte yacht club staged its first annual regatta Wednesday with success that promises well for future meets. It was an ideal day, and all events on the big program were keenly contested. The graceful paddler in (3) was an entry in the canoe race, and in (1) is F. O. Zanelli, skipper of the R.C.A.F. boat Astra, which captured the Bay of Quinte Yacht club trophy for the 24 to 30 feet cabin class boats. The yacht club trophy, which Mr. Zanelli is holding will be put up for annual competition.

LLOYD MOORE OF SYRACUSE CHIEFS HURLS NO-HITTER

Second Perfect Game to be Pitched in Loop This Season

DONALD IS BEATEN

Newark Hurlers Defeated After Winning Fourteen in Row

(By The Associated Press)

The Reds sent Lloyd Moore to Syracuse Chiefs but apparently Lloyd had other ideas—among them a trip to get back with the Cincinnati Club.

He demonstrated this last night by pitching the second no-hit game of the International League's 1937 season, a 1-0 victory over Jersey City Giants. Moore fanned four, collected one of the six hits the Chiefs made off the veteran right hander, Ben Chantwell, and scored the only run of the game in the eighth inning when another Red farmhand, Eddie Joost, doubled him home with the winning run.

The Chiefs, victims of the league's other no-hit, no-run game this year, are getting into the habit. Billy Pelit of the Montreal Royals stopped them 6-0, on June 19. The Chiefs salvaged another from the night double bill by shading the Giants 3-2, behind Walter Brown in the opening game. Their first victory in Syracuse this season.

OSHAWA AVENGES THEIR LAST LOSS

Defeat Napanee 4-2 While Ponies Win Over Petes 7-1

Oshawa, July 26—Oshawa General Motors avenged their defeat at the hands of Napanee Giants in Napanee last Wednesday by scoring a close 4 to 2 win over the Easterners in a well played C.O.B.I. fixture here Saturday.

Johnny Tumbas did a fine hurling job for the motor men, holding the Orlleans to six hits and with the exception of the fourth inning, when the visitors got both their runs, he was never in difficulty.

"Red" Jobsville and Tommy Foley took the mound for the locals for the homsiters.

Napanee ..... 000 020 000—2 6 1
Oshawa ..... 201 100 00x—4 6 0

Get in Peterboro Tony Pagnotta held his Jinx over the Petes as the Ponies won their second game of the week over the Little Chief aggregation winning 7-1 on Saturday. Maj Russ Kitchen was on the mound for the homsiters, but proved no mystery to the Pony sluggers. Paschkowzi pitched steady ball to coast in behind splendid support.

CORBINS EASILY DEFEAT KINGSTON

Johnny Bawden Allowed Only Four Hits in Seven Frames

In an exhibition softball game at Coleman Flats Saturday evening the Belleville Curtis Locks defeated a Kingston softball nine by the score of 6 to 3, as the Corbins hit in the pinches in a game that saw Johnny Bawden, local baseballer best favorite, Kingston pitcher.

Hits were rather scarce all during the seven inning innings game, the Corbins out-hitting the Kingston nine by five hits a walk and a hit by Rigby gave the Corbins their opening run in the first inning. A walk, an error and extra base hits by Ebner and Whalen gave the Corbins another run and in the second, while they added a brace more of runs each after Tuttle and McGuire singled in the fourth, the latter's hit being a triple out gave the Kingston team one run in the first frame while a walk followed by two hits gave them in the fourth saw Kingston finally tally.

Bawden retired the side in order in second and third innings and struck out six in seven innings. Scruton struck out three, but Tuttle and McGuire singled.

The evening at Coleman Flats in the Belleville ball park saw the Corbin Locks tangle in an important softball game, Saturday night.

The lineups:

Hems 3b, Ebbier 2b, Reid 1b, Rigby lf, Bawden p, Rodgers rf, Whalen ss, Tuttle c, and McGuire cf.

Kingston: Shockrow, Bustch, Leffler, Scruton, Dalton, Archibald, Revell, Lindsay and Gomer Score by innings:

FOUR PAY OFF IN DOUBLE FIGURES

(By The Canadian Press)

Nineteen ducats out of seven paid off in double figures at Queen's Park Saturday but the biggest shot, Pomegrat in the second, was less than eight-to-one.

W. J. Hewton, local newspaperman the featured Smallman and Ingram handicap by three lengths from Sam Worthy of the Medway Stable. Worthy, coupled with Ledyman, which farm favorite Lady E. Bunns had little trouble bringing the gelded son of Old Ironsides-Lady Angler home in front. Pomegrat Bill was third over the 6 1-2 furlong stretch.

A photo finish was needed to decide the Canadian Derby trial, splitting the decision over the favorite Centennard, Minds held a slight lead from the start and combined with Pomegrat for a double worth $138.

Art Calhoun, who hurled for the Belleville seniors in 1935, was recently taken on by the Toronto Maple Leafs to pitch to Manager Dan Howley while clouting batting practice. Calhoun hurled in the Can-American League for Opdenaal-Barr last year. Calhoun attended the Toronto Leafs' baseball school and was selected from that body as the result of his splendid showing. Incidentally many a good pitcher has obtained his start through the medium of throwing to the batters when the now great Carl Hubbel was with the Leafs about a decade ago. Hubbell was quite frequently used in the senes capacity.

Considered as the Eastern Ontario golf classic, the third annual "Whig-Standard" invitation golf tournament will be staged on the Calaraqui course on Civic Holiday. It is a one day 36 hole medal affair.

Amateur wrestling will be the treat at the Arena on Wednesday night, with well-known middle talent, with the exception of Ken Brown, a local lad who has made good in the amateur ranks of Toronto, the main bout will see Red Garner, undefeated local middle, in the weight champion, meet Pete Peronakis, the 156 pound Greek lad from Toronto, who has won his stripes the hard sa the Arena.

Madoc lawn bowlers qualified to represent Eastern Ontario in the provincial bowling tournament at Toronto, while Kingston will carry the east flag into the Dominion finals. Moses, Webster and Guhn, Madoc doubles and Hugh Keller of the same club, are the Madoc bowlers to win these honors.

The future success of rugby football lies in the hands of the fans and players. An effort to reduce the price of admission and elevate the game to its proper level was given the start by the C. A. this evening commencing at 7.00 p.m. Today is all to stake, as these in doubt should come out and voice their fretfulness.

The Yankees snapped a three game losing streak yesterday to split a double bill with the White Sox. The Yanks are only five games out in front of the American League pace while the White Cubs are two full games in front of the Giants in the National. The lowly Dodgers took the Cards down a peg yesterday by slaying them a 7-7 tie, prior to which the Dodgers beat Dizz Dean's teammates.

Between the Lines

with Ken L. Colling

The spectators to witness yesterday's sailing races on the bay experienced some thrills they never expected. Some fine sailing was seen and a more beautiful picture could not be desired as the bay was dotted with white canvas topped sailing craft leaning to the wind. Suddenly during the long east-west leg of the second lap, however, a heavy squall came out of the south without warning and for a few minutes the spectators stood spellbound. Three of the lighter craft capsized and power boat assistance was needed to rescue them. So heavy was the blow that the remaining craft, except Maurice Callaghan's "After You" and Duke Smith's "Joka" put about and took to shelter of the nearest harbor of island. The "After You" and "Joka" stayed their heels at various times and some tall sailing was seen, but their skippers weathered two such squalls with the "After You" winning the day's honors. These Sunday sailing races are meeting with public approval, as the increased attendance proves. The Belleville Yacht Club is planning a gala day's sport for Labour Day, including land and aquatic events.

Home runs were the deciding factor as the Oshawa club downed the Napanee Globetrotters 6-2 on Saturday. Red Jobsville and Tommy Foley connected for circuit blows for the Buicks before the farmer's coming with one aboard in the early stages. Aside from these features George Hamstich and Jack Turner headed up in a steady pitching duel, with Napanee forcing the 1936 senior O.B.A. champions to the last out. The Kingston Ponies kept pace, however, in the matter of their position as league leaders in the C.O.B.I., by virtue of a 7 to 1 victory over the Petes here in the Little's City. We were in conversation with Manager Pete Gerow on Saturday and suggested he transfer one of Napanee's unbeaten games to Belleville. We know of no better date than a week-end and Civic Holiday—Oshawa is scheduled in Napanee that day and with Jack "Lefty" Biddle on the mound the Waterman would be a good drawing attraction indeed.

Twigg Woodley's Kiwanis kids have three games before them this evening, inclusive an exhibition game with the Milford "Giants" this morning at the park, and two other two are league fixtures and upon which hinges the kids' playoff chances.

Wally Hoyt went to the Brooklyn Dodgers as a part payment for the deal that brought Ed Brandt to the Pittsburgh Pirates, according to a revised of the waiver sale given by Al Abrams of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. Here's version of Wally Hoyt's surprise sale to the Brooklyn Dodgers, which you can take or leave, at you will," writes Abrams. "The veteran right-hander, who has been a pitching mainstay for the Pirates for parts of seven years, was sold outright to the Dodgers here last winter in exchange for Cookie Lavagetto, utility infielder. According to a New York version of the transaction, Pie Traynor promised Brandt, another pitcher before the Bums 15 deadline, should Richards's sore arm which bothered him throughout most of last season, not come around O.K. "The Bue leader then had to turn over Hoyt, who was demanded by Grimes. It all seems kind of far-fetched, but if you stop to figure it out, there may be something to this, at that."

Bill Frost, former Napanee Islander and Jake Quinn, ex-Pony star, are going great guns for the McIntyre club in the Nickle Belt League. Recently Frost clubbed a triple and Quinn drove him in with the winning run in a ten inning struggle they won over Lake Shore. Incidentally the latter, a relative to the one and only Jake Solomon, is at the helm of the McIntyre Club.

Art Calhoun, who hurled for the Belleville seniors in 1935, was recently taken on by the Toronto Maple Leafs to pitch to Manager Dan Howley while clouting batting practice. A Queen Plays Hookey

By MARJORIE ELLIS
McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

The Queen of Rukidia was not quite satisfied with her American tour. She enjoyed the beautiful scenery, its millionaires and mayors. She had been surrounded by a clamorous assembly of loyal prosperity. But she had somehow missed the romantic adventure she had started curiously at her first crowds. Nowhere had she met them intimately and individually.

So it was that the royal lady escaped one October day to see for herself. Most dangerous. A queen, alone. In a strange country and Henri was her only companion. He was to keep her whereabouts secret and to assure anxious attendants of her return by nightfall.

She was well in the country now. How curving were these New England roads. Delightful just to follow the nose of her car. Bright autumn leaves scattered before the puffing yellow monster. Fine woods cast fragrant shadows. Here a leafy red car off the road. Her Majesty stopped the car suddenly. She would have the car and follow that path. She scuffed through drifts of fallen leaves; she drew in the spicy air; she surprised a harvesting squirrel and laughed to hear him scold. An hour passed and then the queen had to watch on her wrist warned her. There was only time for lunch and then, and returned to the highway.

No yellow car awaited her. Had she taken a wrong turn? Ah, yes, here was a woodpile she remembered. And here were tracks of her car—yes—and here, other tracks—and footprints in the soft dirt of the roadside. It was some time before she reached the frightened conclusion that her car had been stolen.

No house appeared for what seemed a long time. Her feet grew tired and the royal stomach experienced emptiness. Then she heard the plodding of horses in the backcast, and a horse and wagon appeared, driven by a slender, white-haired figure, a pipe sagging from a corner of his mouth. She raised a hand. The horse stopped. The driver removed his pipe, but not his hat, and spoke:

"Goin' far "

"My good man," began the queen, "my car has been stolen, and I wish to find a telephone. Can you help me?"

Dan Weatherbee blinked over on the seat. "All right let's have a telephone at my house, 'bout a mile up."

Her Majesty waited for him to alight and help her, but he sat still. Finally she put a foot on the high step, and climbed in.

"How'd happen your auto got stole?"

She told him.

"That so?" laconically. "Lotta cars been stole round here lately. They ain't stole none yet, though." He slapped the chunky horse with a rein, and grinned. "Reckon that Dolly?"

Half an hour later the Queen was calling a simple meal in the shabbily comfortable farmhouse of the Weatherbees. Henri had been hastily telephoned to; he was on his way to her. Nothing to do but to make the most of this visit with what she assumed to be the "natives." She can People" She gave herself the name of Mrs. John Marion (being—ing to a Western mayor) and made what she told him, but, in telling friends with sunny, round-faced Mrs. Weatherby.

"The Ladies' Aid meets here today," announced Mrs. Weatherbee. "We're sewin' for the Rukidian orphans. Do you sew?"

So the Queen sewed with the Ladies' Aid and sewed for the orphans of her own country. She was aware of their interest; curiosity, perhaps, but they would not be nosy shrewdly when she had gone. The talk boomed. Mrs. Parsons, a pudgy person, sewed with zeal and talked about movements, and Mrs. Skidill, tall, silent, sewed in graceful rhythm and argued about the new schoolhouse. Methods of education in general moved slyly through the conversation. Then the talk swerved to outside topics. The horrible Lindbergh baby, the murder of Morcross, the Queen of Rukidia's American tour.

"They say she's the most beautiful queen in Europe, and I think she's real pretty," said Mrs. Hoskins, who fell within the meaning of the latter adjective herself, and never would admit consciousness in her sisters.

The visitor missed a stitch.

"So do I," agreed a thin woman, with straggling hair. "But then she can't tell by newspaper pictures. Myra's was awful." She always found opportunity to refer to the one day's immortality that had come to Myra.

"I read in the paper," (Mrs. Parsons) "that she's come after money."

"That's just what I'd expected Mrs. Hastings, fat dominant; her rings sparkling. "I'm sure—"

The visitor listened, smiling a little while hands wearing her needle in and out.

An automobile siren sounded. Mrs. Weatherbee hurried to the window. "I guess they're come for you, Mis' Merton," she said. "It's been a real pleasure to have you with us." The company nodded and smiled. And waiting in her stately, graceful way, the Queen of Rukidia passed from the room and from their lives, back to the splendid, prison-like structure of her life.

Radiance

By Karin C. Ashrand

Every man involuntarily lifted his hat to the radiance in Sonia Sidell's eyes. Everybody instinctively felt that he knew Sonia, the minute he saw her, whether he had met her or not. The saucy tilt of the diminutive nose, the delicately rounded, though firm, little chin, the "come hither" in the wide gray eyes, never provoked a hint of flirtation, but a comradeship that kept Sonia's little feet dancing, and made life worth while for her.

Sonia was the afterglow of the greatness of two sisters. There was Madame Vesta Sidell of grand opera fame, and Lola Kinzel Sidell, the novelist, whose books, a little bit daring, bordering on the sensational, gave society much to talk about. Both were married to their careers.

That was why Sonia was married to Wayne Park. She was tired of being an afterglow, of being pointed out as "the little sister of Lola Sidell—you know ,the one who wrote that book," or as "that Sidell's baby sister." She was weary of not being clever herself. So, because she was tired of all this, she was married to Wayne. At least that was what she told him, but, in telling him, she looked up at him with such adoration in the depths of her gray eyes that he didn't believe her. He insisted on thinking that she married him because she loved him.

The Parks were poor. Not the kind of poor that lives on beans and diets on bread and water. They rented a Colonial house in the suburbs with a blue breakfast nook, and a white tiled bathroom. They had plenty to eat and drink and wear in enough money to pay the bills, and Wayne's practice was promising. But in the eyes of Madame Sidell, with her chest, and diamond eyes, and Lola Sidell, with her monthly bills of royalties, they were poor. However, that is beside the point.

Wayne came upon the cards Sonia was painting one night when he rode upon her softly to surprise her with a bundle of orchids. She was tinting them at her little desk in the living room—splashes of water color, violets that looked almost lavender, roses whose beauty might evoke tears, and a basket of fruit that would make any mouth water.

"Why, Sonia," he exclaimed over her shoulder, "you're an artist, honey."

Sonia drew in her breath sharply, as though awakened from a dream. "Oh, then," she laughed, "these aren't anything. Just fun. I've done them for fun. I'm a little girl."

He tilted her face to his kiss.

"Do you know," he asked her seriously, "that you could support Madame Sidell and Lola Kinzel Sidell and Vesta Sidell of grand opera fame, and Lola Kinzel Sidell the novelist, whose books, a little bit daring, bordering on the sensational, gave society much to talk about. Both were married to their careers.

They had plenty to eat and drink and wear in enough money to pay the bills, and Wayne's practice was promising. But in the eyes of Madame Sidell, with her chest, and diamond eyes, and Lola Sidell, with her monthly bills of royalties, they were poor. However, that is beside the point.

Wayne came upon the cards Sonia was painting one night when he rode upon her softly to surprise her with a bundle of orchids. She was tinting them at her little desk in the living room—splashes of water color, violets that looked almost lavender, roses whose beauty might evoke tears, and a basket of fruit that would make any mouth water.

"Why, Sonia," he exclaimed over her shoulder, "you're an artist, honey."

Sonia drew in her breath sharply, as though awakened from a dream. "Oh, then," she laughed, "these aren't anything. Just fun. I've done them for fun. I'm a little girl."

He tilted her face to his kiss.

"Do you know," he asked her seriously, "that you could support Madame Sidell and Lola Kinzel Sidell and Vesta Sidell of grand opera fame, and Lola Kinzel Sidell the novelist, whose books, a little bit daring, bordering on the sensational, gave society much to talk about. Both were married to their careers.

That was why Sonia was married to Wayne Park. She was tired of being an afterglow, of being pointed out as "the little sister of Lola Sidell—you know ,the one who wrote that book," or as "that Sidell's baby sister." She was weary of not being clever herself. So, because she was tired of all this, she was married to Wayne. At least that was what she told him, but, in telling him, she looked up at him with such adoration in the depths of her gray eyes that he didn't believe her. He insisted on thinking that she married him because she loved him.

The Parks were poor. Not the kind of poor that lives on beans and diets on bread and water. They rented a Colonial house in the suburbs with a blue breakfast nook, and a white tiled bathroom. They had plenty to eat and drink and wear in enough money to pay the bills, and Wayne's practice was promising. But in the eyes of Madame Sidell, with her chest, and diamond eyes, and Lola Sidell, with her monthly bills of royalties, they were poor. However, that is beside the point.

"Leigh and Sanford, the big plumbing concern, has offered me $5,000 for this," she gigled happily. "Mr. Sanford was here today about the shower you wanted. But I told him he couldn't have it."

"Why, Sonia," he demurred.

She leaned her head against his shoulder. His arm went readily about her.

"I didn't want to commercialize your baby!" she told him. "Besides, it's your birthday today. This is your present from baby and me. We are going to frame it for you."

Yes, Sonia was an afterglow. The two sisters were explosively expressive in their indignation. Think of the money! Sonia was an idiot! She didn't even think of the baby's future.

Sonia ignored most of their indignation.

"The baby's father is taking care of her future," she said, tranquilly, surveying her work through narrow-

Little Benny's Note Book

I was around at the firehouse talking to Mr. Riley the hookey ladder driver about what I'm going to be when I grow up and he's a arkitect or a doctor or a trombone player, and Mr. Riley said, Well whatever you decide to be, all you need is enough enthusiasm and you can't help succeeding. Still at the same time there's such a thing as too much enthusiasm. That's what Perseverancy Tolboy had, he said.

"O, who was he?" I said, and Mr. Riley said, He was attached to the brewery and a fella. He was a good average fireman but his enthusiasm ruined him. Of course all firemen are happy at fires, but they're happy between fires too, just waiting around loafing. But not this Percey Tolboy. He was the unhappiest, most restless man in th world when no alarm was ringing. He used to write letters to the newspapers urging people to bild gasoline tanks and match factories in town, anything that seemed likely to cause more fires. And then came the days of blaze causing by fireworks, and for quite a while Percey Tolboy was as happy as a beaver. It was no ornimal site to see him hurry up the side of a bilding without even waiting for a ladder, Mr. Riley said.

Why, was abusing off all the firework? I said, and Mr. Riley said, Children, mainly. It seems a mysterious old woman has been going around giving them roman candles and sky rockets, and she's diddled did the rest. Finely old Captain Snookem got suspicious about this mysterious old woman story and he looked under Percey Tolboy's bunk and there he found the disguise, a false bump and a false nose and an old green shawl. That's what his enthusiasm had brought him to, and of course he was discharged for the good of the department. Drop in again soon, Mr. Riley said.

Meaning good by.

Pocatello, Idaho, July 26 (AP)—Ella's wanted for bill collectors, police said John Henry Spencer told them, but he is always gallant about it.

"I never robbed a woman—I'm too much of a gentleman for that. There may have been a woman in the sanitarium bed I never robbed a woman," they quoted him as insisting.

Spencer officials said officers when he was booked on paying a restaurant bill the proprietor said he did not owe. He was fined $25 for drunkenness.

Wood was amazed and dismayed when he found himself sinking up the river instead of down, as he had intended to go. He exerted the full power of his body to turn his craft in the opposite direction; but he was drawn forward by some irresistible magnetism.

He glanced back and saw that his companions, too, were in the grip of that overwhelming force. When Wood tried to analyze it, he recalled the warning of the friendly natives: "That power will pull you into the land of mystery. You cannot escape!"

Was that warning so embedded in their minds that they believed it and were governed by it? Was this, after all, some phenomenon of mental suggestion? Or was there really some supernatural power that controlled them? Whatever it was, it was wholly effective.

In silence the four travellers trudged on for hours. Then, suddenly, they detected a ruttle in the undergrowth and by it they were encircled by a band of warriors. To their astonishment, these warriors were women—white women, fierce and menacing!

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, July 26—(AP)—Stock Market leaders tried to get a foothold on the recovery path today but most found the going slippery.

Profit-selling cut down quotations for Steels, Rails, Motors and Utilities. At the same time a number of specialties managed to push up moderately. Dealings were quiet and trends mixed near the final hour. Transfers were about 900,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE (Close)

Toronto, July 26 (CP)—Buying sentiment was far more robust today on the Toronto Share Market and along with it a lower turnover prices dropped in the mines, industrials and oils. Action bulked in the metals-price golds while a few industrials changed hands in some volume, notably Alfalfa common. Walker's Pfd., Distillers-Seagrams and Fanny Farmer, initially dropped by the ex-div. date Alfalfa Com. was down, Preferred was a little firmer and other paper issues were almost dormant.

Gainers in the utilities included Bell Telephone, B. C. Power A, International Utilities A, United Fuel Pfd. and Northern Ontario Pipe. Canadian Dredge and Dominion Tar ruled higher.

Prices for the base metals evened up late in the session, after showing mild weakness around noon. On the up side were Ventures, Wells-Gardner, Mandy and Utility. Metals Corporation while lower prices ruled for Sudbury Basin, Sherritt, Hudson Bay, Nickel and Chromium. Silver shares were quiet and steady.

The heavy traders among the cheaper golds split off a few points, the soft spots including Pamour, Pickle Crow, Preston and Kerr-Addison.

MARKET COMMENT

The stock markets have been showing a rather sluggish tendency of late, usually associated with the trend at midsummer. Despite this, however, the undertone has not been quite firm and no substantial amount of liquidation has been in evidence.

Although New York has witnessed something of a rise, it is stated by brokers that the public is not entered the market to any extent on the rise. Several large operations are suggested for this. One is the fact that, in the early stages at least, the advance was centred in the high-priced issues, in which the small-time public is often not interested. A more likely explanation is the number of "cover" accounts. The latter, however, appear to be going through a process of fairly rapid liquidation, the more so as the advance broadens and a wider range of issues shares in the advance.

Sales of Canadian Industrial Alcohol in the Canadian market have shown a sharp increase to date in the current fiscal year, which began October 1st. The company has been concentrating on its Leamington development of its domestic sales, as with its remaining supplies will depend on business in the export market. Liquor sales generally in the Dominion have improved further this year and in addition the company has considerably increased its relative position in the industry as far as domestic business goes.

Total sales and revenues for the current fiscal year may run close to 20% better than in the preceding year due to; receipts on American-type whisky (though this income may not be fully reflected in net earnings) and increased sales of the Walker Club Soda which may be spread over several years.

Royalite Responds to the Strike at Monarch

The feature of Western Oil market this week was the upswing in the shares of the Royalite Oil Limited. This stock sold at $21, which is the highest point reached on the upswing. The advance was on direct reflection of the strike at Monarch Royalties, which has turned out to be the most spectacular crude producer in Turner Valley.

Royalite Refining Pacific No. 1 is the next in line for completion. Progress on this well has been slower than expected, an average of only 14 feet daily having been made since March 1st, when the first stone was resumed. A little over 500 feet remains to be drilled but Royalite's management are confident of the result, which should come early in August.

Operations are at a Satisfactory Level

When it sold at 106½ per share this year Steel of Canada Common surpassed its 1929 high. Present prices would appear to discount the recovery somewhat that has been taking place in the business but sales continue to gain higher prices for the stock undoubtedly would be justified.

Prices at Winnipeg Slumped Five Cents a Bushel

Winnipeg, July 26.—(CP)—Wheat prices slumped 5 to 4 3-4 cents a bushel on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today as bearish news predominated the market report.

4 NEGROES FREED AFTER LONG TRIAL

Boisterous Welcome Given to Youths as They Arrive in N. Y.

New York, July 26—(AP)—Whitehaired the most of Pennsylvania station today in shouting a welcome to four negroes freed after they had spent the latest chapter of the Scottsboro case.

Several elbowed and half-mailed spectators were cramped under foot when hundreds of fellow members ing negroes stormed heavy police lines in an attempt to shake the ebullient and to their Chief Defender, Samuel Leibowitz, as they arrived from the south.

The negro youths, freed at Decatur, Ala., yesterday of the conviction of eleven trials that resulted in five of their companions receiving sentences ranging from 30 years to the death penalty for an alleged attack on two white girls on a freight train in 1931, gaped-eyed at the excitement.

The mass of spectators spread out from the station's main doors, dash for his automobile, accompanied by the four negroes, Attorney Roderick MacArthur, Eugene Williams and Roy Wright.

What Leibowitz had to do with the boys has not been entirely arranged. He has, however, been known to be able to find vocational training for them here or make a place in the American Association for the Advancement of the colored people.

GIRL SOUGHT IN MONTREAL CRIME

Hyacinthe Cote, Well-to-do Landlord Found in Field

St. Laurent, Que., July 26 (CP)—A girl sought today by police hoping she might possess some clue to the slaying of Hyacinthe Cote, well-to-do Montreal landlord, whose body was found in a field here Sunday.

A letter found on the body, consisting of pencil scrawls in a field 250 feet from a road seldom visited, prompted authorities to hunt for the girl who was known to have been an acquaintance of the 67-year old victim.

The body was discovered by Edward Cote, 20-year-old nephew of the slain man, while he was driving with a man's cap and tie, and a gold watch.

Police theorized more than one person was involved in the apparent strangling of Cote, because he weighed about 200 pounds and was burly of build. One person accordingly would have been able to lift his body, they said.

LENGTHY DOCKET HEARD IN COURT

Variety of Cases Disposed of at Today's Proceedings

John Donovan and Robert Johnson, who gave Ottawa and Trenton the slip, respectively, when they appeared in local police court, before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today, charged with burglary for alms.

It has been a letter from the Institute for the Blind and I am eligible in that institute," interrupted Johnson, as he intimated his innocence. "This man is already facing charges in the Trenton court. I suggest we enlarge this matter until [illegible]" stated Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. The suggestion was adopted by the court. Donnan, however, pleaded guilty to begging.

The practice of begging for alms is becoming much too common in Belleville," suggested the Crown Attorney.

"Yes, it's nothing short of a nuisance," His Worship agreed in sentenced the accused to seven days in the common jail.

Clarke Harper, Trenton, appeared, charge with the theft of $1.31 in bush scrip, valued at [illegible] Pte. Charles A. Payne, K.C., tentative solicitor for the accused, entered the week's proceedings. Ryckman was admitted to bail.

Frederick Bellerive, Belleville, appeared on a charge of keeping liquor for sale. The accused man asked that he be tried with as much time he could interview his solicitor. Pleading guilty he pleaded not guilty, however. Seven other persons were arraigned on charges of consuming in a public place, all being sequels to the former L.C.A. charge. Each was fined on evidence of a police raid on the Hagerman Street residence of Sergeant Major Booth, and Constable Ellis yesterday morning. It was stated by the Department today.

Elward J. McQuaid, Belleville, was charged with assaulting his seven-year-old daughter. Mr. McQuaid, who was following a quarrel between children in the College Hill, Belleville neighborhood. "I cautioned the boy regarding his conduct and he replied by cursing the smaller children in the neighborhood," the father said. "I merely turned him around and kicked him lightly on the side of my shoes. I'm sure I did not hurt or injure the kid," stated Mr. McQuaid. "That would be true, but you can't take the law into your own hands," replied His Worship. Mr. Frank Cushing, local barrister, appeared for the accused.

James McNamara, Lonsdale, appeared before His Worship charged with John Rosch. "I understand the informant does not wish to press the charge," stated Mr. McNamara, who appeared for the accused.

Charges of theft and disturbance in that part of the county, and Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company, Limited, Toronto, [illegible] Belleville, neighbour. After hearing much contradictory evidence, His Worship bound both parties over to keep the peace for a period of one year.

Attlee—Does the answer mean "Answer! Answer!" shouted Labor members.

Duff Cooper—I do not save a great deal of trouble if these slips kept away."

"Answer!" again came the shout from the Labor benches.

Duff Cooper did not reply.

Sir Henry Page Croft, Conservative, had asked earlier if, in view of the "illegal action" of the Valencia Government in transferring Spanish Gold to a foreign country, there would consider the advisability of inviting the League of Nations to become its trustee until the Civil War was over.

Eden, however, did not think the suggestion practicable.

Budge and Mako Win Doubles In Davis Cup

Wimbledon, Eng., July 26 (AP)—Overcoming stubborn resistance, Don Budge and Gene Mako defeated C. R. D. Tuckey and F. H. D. Wilde in the doubles today, 6-3, 7-5, 7-5, and got gave the United States a 3-1 lead over Great Britain in the Davis Challenge round match with two more singles matches yet to be played.

With that one point advantage, American supporters now hope that Donald Budge, Henry A. Wilson (Slimmy) Austin in the final singles matches tomorrow for the clinching point if Frank Parker bows to Chas. Edgar Kare in the opener.

Budge and Mako, the all-England champions and conquerors of Germany's combination of Cottlieb von Cramm and Henrich Henkel in the interzone finals, gave their followers many anxious moments today before they finally pulled the doubles match out of the fire.

After sweeping through the first two sets in rapid style, the American pair appeared headed toward an easy triumph but with the veteran Tuckey performing brilliantly in support of the untried Wilde, they fought back desperately to win the third set and almost snatched the fourth as well.

Served Love Games

By a strategic shift, Tuckey captured every one of his service games until the last game of the fourth set. And when Budge and Mako broke through then it spelled curtains for the Britons. Trailing 2-1 then, Budge served a love game in the 22nd game of the set and added the final point.

A few minutes earlier, the Britons had reached set point against Mako's service in the 20th game but failed to fall into a series of errors which finally enabled the latter to come back to win the game and stay level at 10-10.

Wilde Not Strong

In the long run, however, it was Wilde's weak play that allowed the Americans to win. Budge and Mako broke through his delivery in the eighth game for their decisive advantage in the opening set; they broke his service again in the 11th game of the second set to take that too. And in the third, which the Britons finally won by breaking Mako in the 16th game, Wilde endangered his team by dropping his service in the third game.

He lost his service twice in the final set, in the third and 15th games, but each time Tuckey came back in the succeeding game to break through Mako's delivery and square the count again.

Budge was every one of his service games throughout the match and Tuckey lost only one. Mako lost his twice, both times on his own delivery and Wilde six times.

British Oil Supply Subject of Debate

London, July 26 (CP Cable)—R. A. D. Ackerley, Conservative, asked the government in the House of Commons today what special steps of a naval character were proposed to safeguard oil supplies from Trinidad—source of rocking in recent weeks—in view of possible civil disturbances in the future.

Replying, Alfred Duff Cooper, First Lord of the Admiralty, said: "No special steps such as these suggested are at present considered necessary. His Majesty's ships will continue to be ready for any service as may be possible to the civil authorities, upon whom responsibility rests for the maintenance of order."

If the island is the most important source of oil supply, surely [illegible] should be done?" Chorlton pressed.

"Such a contingency need have no anxiety," said Duff Cooper. "The civil authorities will take the necessary steps in order that a recurrence of what took place recently may be unlikely to be repeated."

KING LEOPOLD'S MOTIVE PRAISED

Practical Results Doubled However by British Press

London, July 26 (CP-Havas) — British newspapers today joined in the chorus of praise for the plans for the motives which inspired his letter of last week to Premier Van Zeeland, proposing a permanent world economic committee.

The Belgian premier's views doubtful of the probable results of the setting up of such a committee. King Leopold's suggestion was made in letter thanking Van Zealand for economic advice made by United States and elsewhere at the request of France and Great Britain.

"King Leopold's remarkable letter to his Prime Minister," said the Times "has served to emphasize the importance of the mission entrusted to M. Van Zeeland.

No Guarantee of Effective Results.

"Such a committee would have no lack of interesting subjects of discussion, though there seems to be no guarantee that their discussions would be any more effective than those of the League Economic Conference.

The composition was very much what is suggested for the permanent body now proposed. What is most important is surely not further discussion between people who, whatever their views, [illegible] are unable to commit their governments but the determination of governments to get something actually done. Even the smallest concrete achievement would be worth more years of academic discussion.

No New Institution Needed.

"It is more than doubtful whether there is any need to create an additional international institution to conduct inquiries which are already being conducted by the League of Nations and the Bank of Regulation of the United States. Above all, the danger must be avoided of creating a new institution which will lead to any postponement of action by governments. Nevertheless, in several agreement, even if not universal, should be reached."

"Everybody will give sympathetic," the Daily Telegraph said, "to the hope that the King's initiative will lead to the world's efforts to find a way out of the present tangle. There is much room doubt whether the setting up of a new institution for research will help much in the present crisis.

The Goodwill of Great Britain by the same token is not doubted in question, but its attitude must remain that of Prime Minister Chamberlain when he discussed the conference without such thorough preparation as might make a reasonable prospect of success."

U. S. DEFEATS BRITAIN TO WIN DAVIS CUP

Regain Tennis Trophy First Time Since 1927 By Taking Four Matches

Frankie Parker Cinches Conquest by Defeating Hare

AUSTIN IS BEATEN

Don Budge Undefeated This Year Is Master of Britten

Wimbledon, July 27 (AP)—Sorrel-topped Don Budge, undefeated this year, whipped Henry (Wilfred Glenny) Austin today, 8-6, 3-6, 6-4, 8-6 as the United States completed its conquest of Great Britain's Davis Cup forces and regained the International tennis trophy for the first time since 1927.

Budge's victory came after 21-year old Frankie Parker had clinched the cup with an astonishing straight set triumph over Charles Edgar Hare, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2, thus making the final score four victories for the United States against one for Great Britain's unsuccessful cup defenders.

Parker Clinches Conquest.

Although to Parker fell the honor of scoring the clinching point, it was red-headed Don Budge, undisputed king of the world's tennis amateurs, who shouldered most of the burden.

The Britishers, after the first round Britain had held the cup since 1933, came as the climax of a campaign that saw the United States score victories over Japan and Australia in the North American zone and then over Germany in the inter-zone finals.

The Davis Cup was donated in 1900 by Dwight F. Davis, then a Harvard University under-graduate and top-flight player.

This was the eleventh cup conquest for United States, which leads all rivals in total victories. Great Britain ran in second for triumphs to nine last year. France and Australia each have been victorious six times in the challenge round.

Immense Iron Ore Deposits In North Hastings to Be Studied

Party Will Visit Area Near Hermon in Mayo Township

NATIVES ACTIVE

Possibility of the reopening and redevelopment of immense iron ore bodies on the now inoperative Bessemer and Rankin Mines, near Hermon, Mayo Township, in North Hastings, is suggested by the statement in a communication received today by Mr. W. C. Springer, past president of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, that Mr. H. Girvin, agent of the Steel Company of Canada, Lake Ontario, would arrive in the city next week and proceed to the mine properties where a thorough examination of its possibilities would be made.

Mr. Girvin will be accompanied on his inspection by Mr. Springer and Mr. J. O. Herity, manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

It is estimated that on the surface and through the workings over one half million tons of ore can be secured without the necessity of sinking any shafts or driving underground.

The inspection by Mr. Girvin follows considerable work on the part of local residents in an effort to have both properties developed. Wm. Rankin of this city has been active in the campaign and has been in constant communication with the Steel company at Hamilton for some time past.

LEFT $50,000 PRIVATE PRACTICE TO CRUSH RACKETS

Thomas E. Dewey Accepted $16,695 Prosecutor's Job

INDUSTRY PLAGUED

Terror With Terror Method Used to "Bust" Rackets

(Editor's Note: Repeal of prohibition left a criminal hangover. Ruthless monsters cut off from their huge illicit liquor "revenues", turned from bootlegging to prey on legitimate business more than ever in New York City. This is the second in a series of stories on "Racket Busaher" Thomas E. Dewey.)

By ROGER D. GREENE

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, July 27 (AP)—"Put up and shut up!"

In 1935, racket-plagued Tommy Dewey began his fight. He found it was for the healthiest policy. It was dangerous. Bullets were constantly to the police. The city was in the grip of gang rule.

Tribute for "protection" was exacted at gun-point, or by strong-arm methods. Restaurants, cafes, restaurants bombed, food poisoned and "sparklers" were slugged and sometimes murdered — under the cold-blooded regime of such racket overlords as Dutch Schultz, Charles (Lucky) Luciano, Nick Montana, Cockeyed Louis Weiss and others.

Grand Jury Clamor.

At last a New York County Grand Jury—appalled by the tales of racketeering terror—rose and ordered them behind locked doors—set up a clamor. With the newspapers solidly behind them, a committee of six grand jurors called on Governor Herbert Lehman and demanded appointment of a special prosecutor of rackets.

They told the Governor the regular law-enforcing agencies were useless.

Lehman asked four well-known lawyers, including Col. Robert H. Hughes, Jr., to take the job. Unanimously, they said there was only one man to be trusted and that was Manhattan Thomas E. Dewey. On July 29, 1935, Dewey began his task of cleaning out New York's "Augean Stables".

Protection Money.

Leaving his lucrative 7-year private law practice to accept the regular salary of $12,500 for a prosecutor, Dewey "picked" four other young attorneys into assisting as his aides, and together they set to headquarters in the Woolworth building.

His first act was to broadcast an appeal for information, inviting the public to come to his office and lay him of racket "protection money" demands. They came at the rate of a hundred daily. But to Dewey's disappointment, with few exceptions, they were perpetuating the "racket" with false grievances or schemers trying to use Dewey against their enemies.

Some business men refused to cooperate. "Why should we get in a retaliation," they preferred to pay.

Nothing by power of subpoena, Dewey scrutinized the books of one business man after another and found out how much protection they had been paying.

Terror With Terror.

When they still refused to testify before the Grand Jury he decided the only way out was to fight terror with terror. Reputable men tell their terror of gangs by "terrorizing" them.

Shanghai dispatches said the Nanking government was massing troops to face Japan's demands in the Hopeh-Chahar region where Japanese and Chinese economic interests clash.

Japan's premier, Prince Fumimaro Konoye, in Tokio disclaimed any territorial ambitions in north China but said that if China failed to fulfill her peaceful "declared measures" would be taken by Japan.

What Japan wants from China is not clear but one spokesman he told the Japanese parliament.

The Daily Express said: "He added more wealth to his country than any man in history. Mankind gave man power. Saunders gave man abundance. Great lives, these!"

'PASTEURIZATION' CAUSES LAUGH

British Commons Declines to Receive Bill to Prohibit Use of Word

By George Hambleton

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 27 (C.P. Cable) — A laughing House of Commons this afternoon declined to receive a private bill to prohibit the use of the word "pasteurize" in connection with the sale of milk.

F. A. Macquisten, Conservative, introduced the bill. He asked the house not to prohibit pasteurization itself but to compel the use of "truly descriptive designations in connection with the sale of milk instead of above a certain temperature."

In Broad Scottish

In a speech delivered in broad Scottish—he is the member for Argyll—Macquisten told the House how misleading, in his view, the term pasteurization was. There were some who thought of pasteurization as leading away up down green pastures. As an advertising term, with enormous financial interests behind it, it was used to make the buyer believe he was getting something more than milk which had been half-boiled and allowed to cool again.

"We don't want this monstrously forced upon us," declared Macquisten.

'Boiled' or 'Half Boiled'

William Leonard, Labor, challenged the view that pasteurized milk was only boiled milk.

"Half boiled," interrupted Macquisten, to the laughing agreement.

Leonard cited a Toronto experiment as illustrating the occurrence of bovine tuberculosis among children when raw milk was used and its absence when the milk was pasteurized.

A division was called on whether leave should be given to introduce the bill. But support for the bill was insufficient. The division was dropped. The bill, therefore, was not introduced.

Mr. Hepburn said he did not plan any changes before an election. Question which has been forecast for some time, is the resignation of Attorney General Conway Mokors of Canada workers at the Toronto Hydro-Electric System, Roebuck and Hon. David Croll, Minister of Public Welfare and Municipal Affairs, resigned at the insistence of the premier. They disagreed with his strike stand and have not been replaced.

Jumped High Picket Fence To Get First Wireless View

W. A. Appleton Has Lived to Design Successful Transmitter

SAYS MARCONI KINDLY

Glace Bay, N.S., July 27 (CP)—An adventurous climb over a high picket fence 21 years ago started the professional career of William A. Appleton, designer of the wireless transmitter used on Imperial Airways Transatlantic flying boats.

The fence surrounded the station in which Guglielmo Marconi was making experiments on transatlantic wireless and Appleton was a stripling of 16 years.

To his surprise the curious youth was not "booted out" after he got inside the enclosure. He was invited inside a building and shown the equipment on which Marconi was attempting to transmit signals across the ocean.

Later the inventor asked him to have lunch with the group, and then would you like to work with me?" Appleton "would" and did, and he has been in the wireless ever since.

Now, while Imperial Airways flying boats are charting a trans-Atlantic commercial route through the air they are using a wireless transmitter designed by Appleton.

Seek Views of Powers On Compromise Issue; Italian Proposal Falls

Italy, Germany, Portugal Approve Withdrawal of Volunteers

PRESS PESSIMISTIC

Daily Herald Foresees Danger of New Deadlock

London, July 27 (CP-Havas)—The Spanish Non-Intervention Sub-Committee was saddled with a series of complications today after a meeting which saw Italy torpedo the British plan to submit a seven-point questionnaire to the interested powers regarding the British compromise non-intervention proposal.

The fact Italy, Germany and Portugal expressed approval in principle of proposals for withdrawal of foreign volunteers failed to enlighten the picture or lessen the pessimism evinced in the press.

Vile On Compromise Plan.

Instead of sending out the British questionnaire, as originally planned, the non-intervention sub-committee decided to first request the non-intervention powers to submit their decisions on the original British compromise plan of July 16 before Thursday evening.

The Daily Herald predicted a new deadlock would occur when the subcommittee meets Friday to study the replies.

An astute move by the Italian Ambassador at yesterday's meeting, consisted of a proposal for submitting the rival Italian questionnaire, also sent by the board.

OFFICIALS RECKON COST OF SUNDAY'S QUAKE

Another 1,700 injured counted up to last night. Many were still missing. Half the buildings of that town of 8,000 were reported levelled, including an ancient colonial church.

A special train, carrying physicians and nurses, reached Malinalco from Orizaba, 13 miles away in the mountainous country around the long dormant volcano named Orizaba.

Weather Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Drought and magic! Primitive people have a way of getting rain from the clouds which is as successful and just as efficacious as the means used by the present day professional rainmaker. In the Solomon Islands they pour water into a hole of a coconut shell. When they want rain they lift this to the sky and at the same time say a charm. They also attempt some difficult work when never hear of the present day rainmakers doing. That is, slop the rain. To do this they take a branch with leaves on it; bend it in the shape of an arch which is supposed to represent the arch-like canopy of the sky. When the desire to stop the rain, they break the arch while saying a charm.

Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner Urges 'T. B.' Sanitarium at Belleville

Minister of Health at Rotary Club Says One Can be Secured for This City With Sufficient City and County Interest—He Claims Enough T.B.' Cases in District to Fill Sanitarium if One Established Here.

Tuberculosis, as it exists in Canada and United States, in Ontario and in Hastings County, what progress has been made in combatting the disease and what yet remains to be done to banish this preventable disease, was the subject of a very interesting address to Belleville Rotarians Monday by Hon. Dr. J. S. Faulkner, Minister of Health for the Province of Ontario and honorary member of Belleville Rotary Club.

Prefacing his remarks with tributes to the work Belleville Rotary Club is doing for Crippled children, the Minister of Health gave a brief account of the opening of the Diamond Mcclintin summer camp for crippled children, sponsored by the Ontario Society for Crippled Children, which it was his privilege to formally declare open. Co-operating with the Ontario Society for Crippled Children during the past year, during the 2,000 crippled children, eighty per cent of whom will be rehabilitated and made useful citizens.

Tuberculosis Preventable

Tuberculosis is a preventable disease, said the speaker, and should be fought and conquered as such. He urged greater efforts be put forth in driving this menace to the last ditch and outlined methods and means which in his opinion would provide the most effective line of attack in stamping out this menace to humanity and industry. New economic reasons as much as humanitarian the disease should be vigorously combatted, and prevented from spreading. Tuberculosis is preventable, no child ever born with tuberculosis, and it would be the ambition of every one to see it continue without an awakened public conscience.

Sanitarium at Belleville Needed

Speaking of the district of which Belleville is the centre Hon. Dr. Faulkner pointed out the distance the sanitariums and their figures showing the ravages of the disease in this district, and the number of patients, enough to fill a sanitarium located at Belleville. When he took office there was no sanitarium for tuberculosis between Toronto and Ottawa, and this district being dependent upon western Ontario for treatment. Conditions had taken hold of the subject in a forceful way, city and counties co-operating, and will have a fine sanitarium. Belleville should have a sanitarium and can have one if enough interest is taken to form a local organization with city and county co-operating. Citing into detail with fact and figure Hon. Dr. Faulkner showed the increased expense to city and county in sending T.B. patients to distant sanitariums, the effect on the patients and families of being separated, and the fact that investigation shows that there are enough T. B. sufferers in various stages in this district to fill a sanitarium in Belleville. Aside from the humanitarian viewpoint the sanitarium here would be an economic asset and as valuable as the average industry which, communities recognize, for. A local committee in which city and county co-operated should be organized and plans made, the cost ascertained and debentures arranged for. The government could be counted upon to assist materially as it had in Cornwall and Port William. two recent sanitariums which the speaker described in some detail.

The Death Rate Lower

How the death rate had been reduced from T.B. by the development of science and the constant battle against the disease was described by the speaker, and there yet remained to be done. Tuberculosis should be treated as infectious and communicable and handled accordingly. Much interesting information was given on tuberculosis and the battle against it waged by governments and public bodies was given, some of which is briefly summarized below:—

Tuberculosis costs the Province of Ontario yearly a lazy sum. With a capital investment of $8,000,000 in fourteen institutions there was an operating cost in 1936 of $2,250,000. In these fourteen institutions there is bed capacity for adults of 2,851, and 438 children.

Travelling clinics examined 9,000 cases in 112 clinics in 52 rural centres, and 1267 cases of tuberculosis were examined. 427 had not been diagnosed as such before, and 408 were recommended for sanitarium treatment.

Much Yet Remains to be Done

Tuberculosis shows more deaths in every age group (except early childhood) than all other communicable diseases. From 15 to 35 years it kills more than communicable diseases, pneumonia, influenza. From 10 to 25 years it kills more than 1 year disease, and other common ailments.

While there has been a steady decline in the death rate from tuberculosis in Ontario due to the determined fight against it waged by the government and municipalities this should not lessen the interest, but rather intensify the determination to wipe it out entirely as other malignant diseases have been vanquished.

The free treatment for this dread disease was the ultimate object of the Minister of Health and one would urge this upon the government very strenuously.

Hon. Dr. Faulkner was introduced by Past President Harry Ackerman, while Rotary appreciation was expressed by Howard Clark and Past President Joe Shorti.

COOLER WEATHER ENDS BIG THIRST

Some estimate of the amount of water consumed by a thirsty and perspiring citizenry during the peak heat days of the present month is contained in figures of pumpage at the Public Utilities office of the Public Utilities today.

It is estimated that since the advent of cooler weather water consumption has undergone a drop of about forty per cent. Highest day's pumpage of the month has been registered so far at 8,-000,000 gallons on the hottest and dryest day. Lowest pumpage has been recorded at 1,938,000 gallons.

LARGE GREY TROUT TAKEN NEAR BANCROFT

Curiously lilled this fish, swimming placidly in a lake a few miles east of Bancroft a splendid specimen of brook trout overlook what it thought was a minnow. It rushed in gleefully and then swam ahead then turned back. But its sense of direction failed at this point. A sharp hook gouged into its side at a point a few inches to the rear of its gills. A flurry of water, and the big fish fit weighed over five pounds) was hauled out of the water by Fred Marmer of this city.

A few seconds later a grey trout weighing approximately five and one half pounds fell victim to the bait of Mr. Marmer and Ralph Turner. All this happened at a lake a few miles east of Bancroft.

BENNETT'S COLT IS BEATEN IN RACE

In a match between L. G. Bennett's "Alan Dale" bred at Port Hope, Ontario, and George Caldwell's "Peter Range", the former Ontario trotter raced on three heats on the oval track, to accept the plaudits of nearly 500 horsemen out of the district, who had gathered to view the much publicized race. The match was the result of considerable discussion regarding the relative merits of the two animals.

Mr. Bennett, octogenarian horseman, guided his own horse around the track, while the Caldwell entrant was driven by Norman Deremo. Mr. Bennett was the first to congratulate the winner.

MAY PURCHASE NEW MACHINERY FOR PLANT

A canvass of Brockville and district will be made today by Mr. W. G. Springer in an effort to investigate the possibility of purchasing more modern and up-to-date machinery for the Belleville Foundries Ltd.

Following the resignation of Mr. Fred Hindle, former general manager of the plant, a meeting of the board of directors was held last week. It was suggested that Mr. Springer assume managership of the Foundries.

Whether the local resident will accept this responsibility was not stated definitely as yet in answer to the question by The Daily Ontario Intelligencer today.

"Is there a possibility of you taking it over?" the reporter pressed.

"I can only say just what I said at the boarg meeting. I don't want to take it over unless I can make some money for the shareholders. If this plant were operated on an up-to-date foundry put in, together with a modern machine shop, then it would pay. Just at present I am looking around for some machine shop equipment" declared Mr. Springer, who has been in retirement for some time.

SUCKERS CONGREGATE IN MOIRA RIVER

Hundreds of good-sized red-fin suckers congregating in the shallow water of the Moira River just below the lower bridge, for the past few days have been an attraction which has given residents along the bridge a daily pause to observe. At times the fish have been so thick that sections of the river bottom have been obscured by their shifting bodies. Local fish-wise residents have been unable to account for the singular flocking of the fish. "It's too late for spawning and too early," was the consensus enough food to keep those big fish satisfied. There doesn't seem any logical reason," it was pointed out. Some of the fish average well over two feet in size, large for this breed.

SEVEN MEN AWAIT

strain of the heavy seas about 26 miles northeast of Pelee Island Bar.

The Cardigan and powered Hudboats from the Harbor Beach and Tawas Point Coast-Guard Stations put out to the rescue and the Limestone freighter T. W. Robinson aided by.

Taken from the barge by the Cardigan were Melvin Kehoe (age 23, St. East), Fred Harrison, cook, (age 23, St. East), James Johnson, engineer, (1387 Gladstone), Ernest Cripps, fireman, (234 10th Ave. East), all of Owen Sound; and Reginald Lecrois, fireman, of Sprague, Ont.

F. L. Beck, in charge of the Harbor Beach Coast Guard, said the Guards encountered difficulty in removing the men because of projecting logs, which damaged the cutter slightly.

Owen Sound, Ont., July 27 — (AP)—After sleepless hours aboard the Canadian barge Michigan, adrift in Lake Huron off Saginaw, Mich., seven men awaited rescue today. The barge went adrift when two lines broke in the mid-lake Harrison parted in a gale.

Battered by wild seas, and blinding wind which kept rescuers at a distance, the Michigan was the dominant danger of foundering. Two of the men aboard, Jos Houston, and Jim Allen, live in Owen Sound, but the names of the others were not immediately available.

Both the Michigan and the Harrison are owned by the John Harrison and Sons Company, Owen Sound. In a wireless message from the tug, the company learned the barge had been swept by a storm yesterday morning. The all-steel barge was loaded with logs bound for Chicago from Port Dalhousie, Georgian Bay, south of Manitoulin Island.

Beach Seas Ravager Rescue

Capt. Frank Waugh, in charge of the Harrison, said in his message rough seas made immediate rescue impossible. The Harrison was attended by an also Limestone freighter T. W. Robinson, according to a message from Rogers City, Mich.

The Rogers City despatch said an S. O. S. message was received there, presumably from the Harrison, at 8:18 P. M. (EST).

It gave the drifting barge's position as 34 miles northeast by north of Point Aux Barques.

The barge was a car ferry in Detroit-Windsor service until the Harrison Company to carry logs and lumber to the company's mills here and to other great lake ports. Company officials declined to give the names of her crew, pending definite word regarding her fate.

From Alpena, Mich., the coast guard cutter Escanaba was sent out to aid in the rescue and the coast guard station at Tawas City reported it had left with a crew of fifteen crew of five. Would-be rescuers await break in the weather before attempting to reach the barge.

LIBERAL M. P.'S MAY CAMPAIGN

Will Not Jeopardize Loyalty to King by Helping Hepburn

Ottawa, July 27.—(CP)—Federal Liberals will be able to campaign alongside followers of Premier Hepburn in the forthcoming Ontario election without jeopardizing their loyalty to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, they said in council of the Dominion party said last night.

Belief announcement of the Provincial election is imminent has raised speculation as to whether there would be any change from past policy. The question became prominent because of the statement a few months ago by Premier Hepburn Ontario and federal Liberal organizations would be divorced.

The view here is that no impediment will be placed in the way of the federal Liberals, who wish to support local candidates.

Weight was lent that opinion because Mr. Mackenzie King has made no public comment on the Ontario Premier's remarks. Furthermore friends of the Prime Minister have stated he does not intend to do so.

The policy in the past has been that while the Federal Prime Minister does not participate in Provincial campaigns, Federal Liberals may follow their own inclinations whether in any private citizen.

Some of the best orators in parliament are among the more than 90 Liberals who represent Ontario constituencies. If any considerable number take part in the coming election the opinion here was their efforts would be a substantial force toward return of the present government.

GENERAL ASHTON, BORN HERE, DIES

Pioneer Washington Corporation Attorney Was Albert College Graduate

Tacoma, Wash., July 27—Death of General Joseph Ashton, 73, pioneer Washington corporation attorney, at his home Sunday night was announced by relatives yesterday. He had been ill several weeks but was believed recovering until a sudden seizure Sunday evening brought his death.

Ashton was a native of Belleville, Ont., and attended Albert and University College.

After completing his law course, he went to Denver and wandered through the West during gold-rush days. He arrived in Puget Sound in the 80's and was admitted to the Bar. He practised his profession until his death.

His title of General was obtained from his connection with the old Washington State National Guard during the Chinese riots in Seattle and Tacoma. He was in charge of troops at Seattle after the disastrous fire of 1889 when martial law was declared.

Five Hour Battle

Sporadic fighting between worker and striker groups through the day Monday, punctuated by more serious rioting with the changing of shifts, reached a climax last night with a five hour pitched battle in the valley fronting the main entrance of the plant.

More than 50 persons were injured, 100 or more automobiles damaged, shots fired, tear gas bombs thrown, and clubs wielded indiscriminately that often, police said, members of the two groups were fighting their own men.

Headquarters of the steel workers organizing committee near the plant was wrecked by a band of workers. A newspaper reporter who saw the fight inside the S.W.O.C. building said he saw Miss Nadina Arturo, 19, preparing food for pickets, struck on the arm with a club and thrown through a window.

Debris Thrown Into Food

Furniture was broken, windows smashed, and glass and debris were thrown into the food intended for the pickets, the reporter said.

Strikers crashed police who had fired tear gas back crowds of sympathizers and then, after sending out the valley where they could stop cars at will.

About 500 workers identifying themselves with white arm bands, rushed out of the Independence Road gate of the plant attacking a group of about 100 pickets, witnesses said.

The pickets fled before the workers, but occasionally one would attempt to grab a club or other weapon for a worker, and a fight would begin.

Every available policeman was ordered to the scene as reports spread that all the workers in the plant were to come out and attack the crowd of sympathizers.

HOW FOREST CONDITIONS MAY BE IMPROVED

The most important factor in improving forest conditions in any community is the private individual. He must have a realization that the presence of trees in any form is beneficial to his property. This can be demonstrated in town and country alike by the planting of individual trees around buildings, on the lawn, a country lane and on the roadside. For the protection of farm property windbreaks of evergreen species such as spruce, pine or cedar may be planted. Such windbreaks will have a beneficial effect on crops, particularly fall wheat, and will give a splendid protection in the winter to farm buildings, and in this way lessen the amount of fuel used. If the farm property has no woodlot it would be of advantage, in addition to planting windbreaks, to set out a few acres of trees particularly on areas of the farm which are not well suited to agriculture such as steep hillsides, rockey areas or sections of the property cut off by streams, railroads or highways.

The public school boards can do a great deal to in beautifying the county by planting trees, either singly or in groups, on school property. Quite often on these rural school properties there is an area which can be planted with trees as a demonstration and every school should have specimen trees around the grounds.

Township councils can be of great value to their township by encouraging work of this kind and in addition by utilising any odd pieces of land which the township owns, for the establishing of a forest plantation. It often happens that in straightening a piece of road the township has to purchase more land than is really necessary and such odd corners if planted with trees would beautify the road. Sometimes townships are troubled with sand drifting into a roadway. By controlling such light soil with trees the township or the road commission is not only saved a great deal of money, but in years to come it is possible to have a valuable piece of forest. Occasionally, too, the township has property which has come back to them through non-payment of taxes. Instead of reselling these lots at a nominal figure, and particularly if they contain timbers, they should be retained by the township and handled as a township forest. Instructions in management and supervision of such plots will be gladly given by the Ontario Forests Branch.

In many of the rural communities, service clubs maintain camp sites and the smaller villages have community parks, athletic fields and fair grounds. On most of these there is a section which could be profitably planted with trees. In some cases too these areas already have a small grove of hardwoods and some consideration should be given to the care and handling of those.

However, when it comes to reforesting or controlling present existing forests on large areas which are connected with water supply projects, or where it is necessary to protect the head waters of streams and rivers which take their rise in swamps or among hills, it is necessary for some larger body, such as the county council or the council of a large town or city, to become interested. In a good many cases to do such work adequately it would be necessary either to buy, lease or control in some other way, areas amounting to several hundreds of acres. At the present time the Ontario government has a scheme of county forests which can be applied either to the managing of existing woodland or for the purpose of purchasing large areas for reforestation. If a county undertakes to do work of this kind it is requested to consider a property not less than 1,000 acres in extent.

There is no reason why some of the larger municipalities could not acquire a forest property on the same basis and by doing this many of the benefits which have been outlined above could be enjoyed. In addition, the county or the municipalities would be acquiring a forest property which in years to come would be of untold benefit, both financially and in many other ways.

The Ontario Forests Branch, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, supplies trees free for reforesting paste land and the planting of windbreaks for agricultural purposes. A letter addressed to this Branch will bring particulars and an application form.

DREAMS OF CHILDHOOD

Come, let us gather for a little while,
Here in this fair, enchanted circle's beams;
Where all our phantom fears we may beguile,
And build again the palace of our dreams.

An old, old story, yet the flight of years
Its magic and its beauty cannot mar,
When we may to this joyful realm return
Where childhood joys no cares of years can bar.

Where friendly fires of love forever burn,
A happy Child shall lead us on the way—
That Child "so near and yet so far" today,
The Child I used to be, care-free and gay.

INCOME TAX DODGERS IN THE UNITED STATES, outside of the easy-money racketeers, who made big money in illegal manner and kept it, have developed a technique which has been very effective, through holding companies, etc., but President Roosevelt is out hot-foot after the big fellows who make big money in the United States and conceal it in Canada, the West Indies and elsewhere in holding companies or some other light as air contraptions. Big Money Republicans come back at President Roosevelt by accusing him of concealing income or dodging income taxes. For instance Mrs. Roosevelt had a lucrative radio contract, sponsored by a wealthy shoe manufacturer, on which no income tax was paid.—$30,000 went to the American Friends Service Committee, charity, $4,000 to Mrs. Roosevelt's close friend, Nancy Cook, and $6,000 to her radio agent, Miles Lasker. President Roosevelt told a press conference in discussing tax loopholes that he had an eighteenth century barn on his Hyde Park farm on which he had ducked taxes by claiming depreciation every year till 1928 when it burned down.

ENGLAND IS THE HEART OF THE EMPIRE, and it is always interesting to know just how the heart beats in order to guage the health of the entire body. Returning travellers tell us that conditions in England are better than for many years, that industry is making splendid progress, healthy and active, and the people are happy and optimistic. Reduced to dollars and cents in the business summary of the Bank of Montreal, dated July 22, 1937, is ample confirmation of the unofficial reports which have reached this country. Here 'tis. Read and rejoice:

GREAT BRITAIN

Exports and imports for June are the highest since October, 1930, and are £12,300,000 or 28.3% above June, 1936. Imports are up £10,500,000, or 30.3%, and re-exports £2,100,000 or 42.2%. The outstanding feature in exports is the substantial increase in coal, cotton yarns and iron and steel. The advance in commodity prices is an important factor in expansion of trade figures. Domestic trade continues good, the iron and steel industry being especially active. Railway traffic for the half-year ended 30th June show a gain of £3,500,000 over the 1936 period. Passenger traffic increased by £1,400,000 and freight by £2,100,000. Bankings clearings increased 130,000 in June and 894,000 in the twelve months. The improvement was well spread, indicating that it was not wholly due to rearmament. Shipbuilding tonnage under construction in Great Britain showed a decline at the end of the June quarter was the highest quarterly tonnage for seven years. International troubles are exercising a restraining influence on stock markets, but the tone is generally better than in recent months. The gilt-edge group improved on steady investment demand.

NONE SO BLIND AS THOSE WHO CANNOT SEE the beauties of Nature in the flowers, the trees, the brooks, the rivers and the lakes, vale and hill. Joyce Kilmer, whose muse was stilled on the battle-front, saw in a tree something more beautiful and wonderful than the greatest poem. Most of us take trees so much for granted that we hardly ever look at them with the appreciative eye, drinking in all their wonders. "I think that I shall never see a poem as lovely as a tree."

WHEN BRITAIN WAS "ATTACKED" BY BANDSMEN FROM SEA AND AIR

Here are two phases of the theoretical attack made upon "Redland" during the recent war manoeuvres of the British fleet and Royal Air Force, off the coast of England, to test the defences of Portsmouth, Portland and Plymouth, all state naval bases in time of war. You see the powerful fighting planes of the "Redland" defenders crossing the Cornish coast on the lookout for the attacking enemy. The formidable gun batteries are those of the battleship Rodney of the "Blueland" fleet, commanded by Admiral Sir Roger Backhouse. The Rodney "shelled" the Redland coast at dawn, doing "enormous conjectural damage," with her 16-inch guns.

Spectators rushed to extricate the machine after it crashed on the farm.

SALUTE TO Love

Kate Mead touched him on the back and spoke quickly. "I think you'll buy this formula for $500. You can open a road house in the north and specialize on the ham. It'll be safer than what you're doing. Some day you'll thank me. Now hand me the 500—"

"Nerts!" said the man out of the side of his mouth.

"I'll have to tell this officer about our Homes plates under your feet," she concluded, "and that will lead to a lot of questions. Can you afford that?"

The quaintest things in life often happen with the least ado. The heavy, mysterious man reached into a pocket and drew out his roll. He handed Kate Mead five $100 bills, and she handing him the envelope covered with her writing.

"And the license plates, too!" she said quietly. He extracted them from somewhere beneath his feet and gave them to her.

"Get that straight," said Kate. "We won't detain you any longer. Call that 'aid, will you, please? That one ahead. We'll transfer right here—"

Early morning traffic was snarled a bit worse while Kate and Caroline and three enormous parcels were being transferred to a taxi in a adjoining lane. "I'm leaving the ham for you," were Kate's parting words to the poker-faced man. "You've been so nice about things."

X X X

On the taxi Caroline trembled and wept.

Kate looked at her in exasperation. She said, trying to be nonchalant, "See here, you've just exchanged a ham for a sheepskin and you cry over it. Here, darling, take these bills and buy yourself a senior year at the University."

But Caroline refused to touch the money. "Oh, Kate!" she said. "How could you go to jail?"

"Do what?" Kate asked. "What's the charge against me?"

"It was the thing to black-mail," Caroline replied. "You knew that man was a crook and up to some sort! I don't know how, but you must have known. You deliberately arranged for us to ride into town with him, and you sold him protection for immunity, or whatever it's called. You simply did!"

"Get that straight," Kate said. "None of it was arranged. After I saw him take out license plates I knew we wouldn't dare trust him with Zeke and the cargo. So I simply went along to protect the precious hams. The rest just happened."

Caroline thoughtfully dried her eyes and powdered her nose. The whole thing going to jail was "too bad to Grand'dad," she said.

Kate admitted unashedly, she'd have to do some fast explaining. As if preparing for the interview with the old gentleman, she said now, "Well, that crook didn't earn the roll of bills I gave him for certain. And he couldn't spend it for anything better than the finest ham recipe in America and some good advice. I did actually tell the scuttle down and make an honest living, you know. Maybe he'll take the advice."

The rest of the day was rather like a dream. Kate opened an account in a Louisville bank and deposited the $500 in Caroline's name. Her dear friend, Caroline protested, but Kate insisted. They felt she had never loved them and other quite so much before. Caroline said, with tears, at the bank with the little book in her hand, "It's the most amazing thing ever."

Kate said, "It would make a good magazine story. I'll write it and called 'An Almost Unbelievable Story about Kate and Caroline Mead.'"

They went, then, to buy a dress for Kate. She simply decided it would not take the entire $50 to repair Grand'dad's wardrobe, she said. "I'll choose a good $50, though, of course, won't dress Grand'dad at that price that will knock Eve Elwell's eye out."

And yet they did. On a rack in one of the better stores there was a sea-blue dress that cost exactly $10 from its original $40 because it had been modeled in a style show. Kate tried it on and pirouetted, said: "It was made for you, honey!"

"Morgan likes blue." Kate, murmured, dreamily looking at herself in the mirror.

CHAPTER V.

Down at the State University a young man of 24 had just received his diploma.

Thomas Jefferson Howard was his name.

There had been no one there to see him graduate—no one who belonged to him, that is. He was the last of his clan in that rough mountain country. Tragedy lurked in lowlands and was yet a part of the hills.

He had come down at 21—three years ago—to finish his education at the university of his native state. During those three years he had accomplished—a fact, of course, studying even during the summer weeks on his credits. Through it all, he had been shy and proud and silent, knowing himself to be "different" and resenting it. It was not merely that he was older than the boys around him. He was unmistakably "mountain" in speech and gesture and appearance. Mountain, too, in his aloofness and his suspicious reserve.

Kate

Going to his boarding house, he went into his room and slammed the door behind him. He still wore his cap and gown, and as he looked at himself in the mirror he laughed—harshly.

"Thought it 'ud make a difference in your looks, havin' a diploma, didn't you, Jeff? Well, it didn't. Exceptin' to make you look sillier, walkin' around in this fool get-up."

A girl had laughed at him as he had crossed the campus, half an hour ago. A very pretty girl. She had been strolling between two dapper lower classmen in white flannels, and as Jeff Howard passed the girl had looked at him but without troubling to veil the amusement in their eyes.

The girl's laughing voice had floated back to him, "Who's the big scarecrow?"

"Thomas Jefferson Howard," he heard one of the boys say, accenting the high-sounding name with a diabolical drawl.

He could imagine the rest. They'd told the girl about his nicknames, of course. "Old Constitution" and "Old Democracy." About his futile attempts at dancing. His eternal selection of the wrong clothes. His habit of tucking his napkin under his chin at that time at the freshman banquet. Yes, they could have kept that laughing girl in stitches for an hour, if they'd wanted to, but telling her the things Jeff Howard used to do when he was trying to be "one of the boys"..... After that first year he'd given trying. He'd become a sullen recluse, studying hard, shutting his own feelings up and thanking everybody else to mind their theirs.

X X X

He repeated his own name with a laugh. "Thomas Jefferson Howard!" No wonder there'd been a titter when that name was called in the graduate list and he had responded. What had his parents meant, lying a name like Thomas Jefferson to a child in a cabin in the mountains?

He put his head between his hands and cursed his bitterness and defeat. He'd gotten his "learnin'," He'd gotten his sheepskin. But there was no magic in them to transform him into the being he longed to be. He was still the shy hill man, out of place and out of touch.

Presently he discarded the cap and gown, picked up his hat and went purposefully into the room and the house. Gaining the street, he went striding toward a good-sound street car and swung aboard it.

Actually, Jeff Howard was not homely. He was six feet three in height and layer of bone like head was superbly moulded, his features long and good. But like many mountain people, he was thin and awkward and slightly stooped. His brown hair stood up crazily. His sharp blue eyes wore a narrowed expression as if looking intently down the barrel of a shotgun. In the present state he was indeed an ungainly figure. Yet a shrewd theatrical producer might have seen in him a potential hero of western dramas.

When he had reached the business section of the town, Jeff Howard went into an office building and took an elevator to the office of his lawyer.

"Mr. McBain will see you, Mr. Howard," a secretary told him immediately. She was deferential, but he did not notice it.

Here, indeed, was the irony of the thing—this awkward mountaineer was wealthy. During the first year of his parents' lives, an especially fine vein of coal had been found on their land. Jeff, at 20, had inherited it. For a year thereafter he had studied with a tutor in one of the semi-mountain towns, laboriously filling in this gaps of his primary elementary education and preparing himself for college. He had believed that a college degree would make him like the people of the cities and they like him.

Jeff Howard sat across the desk from his lawyer and waited for words. "I've graduated," he said, "I'm ready to get out of this town." Waving aside Mr. McBain's congratulations, he went on curtly: "I want to talk to you about the mortgages I hold. You told me most of 'em are in Silas Crane's property, didn't you?"

"Well," he continued at a nod of assent from the lawyer, "I want to take over the best farm I can lay my two hands on."

Mr. McBain rang for his secretary and called for the necessary papers. He was glad to see the young mountaineer showing some interest in his property at last.

After McBain had looked over the papers and heard his friend's order he said uncertainly: "There's Major Sam Meed's farm over in Shelby county. It's been practically yours for a year now, but I've held off, trying to give the old man a break. You don't like to foreclose in a case like that."

"A case like what?" asked Jeff Howard coldly.

Mr. McBain took off his glasses and held them in his hand. His manner changed from respectful to confidential. "Major Sam Meed is a character, Jeff. He was trying to 'think of what he was going to do' before he died. He'd forget old Major Meed's farm. He did not realize until too late that he had said the wrong thing entirely.

"Major Meed is as fine an old gentleman as you'll find in Kentucky, Jeff. Kind-hearted and dreaming of the bitter feeling in the young man's heart. His two people were aristocrats, yet simple and genuine. His family has held this farm for over 100 years. Major has never been lived on by any one not named Meed.

"What's the house like?" asked Jeff Howard. It was significant that he asked about the house rather than the land.

"Fairly stylish and set five miles beyond Shelby on the Louisville pike," Mr. McBain replied. "A red brick house, sitting about a quarter-mile off the pike beyond a clearing. It's a fine, old-fashioned pretty good, architecturally."

Jeff Howard rubbed his briar pipe lit it and took several deep puffs. "Get in touch with Meed's lawyer," he said briefly "or his banker—whoever's handlin' it. I'd like to take over the place as soon as possible. I'm lookin' for a suitable place to live. This location sounds all right to me."

X X X

Mr. McBain shook his head. "I wouldn't advise it, Howard. I wouldn't advise it at all. You'd find yourself in a hornet's nest of ill will. The entire county would be down on you. Major Meed's a sort of institution in that neck of the woods. People respect him, love him—"

"But not enough to pay his debts for him," interrupted Jeff Howard. "Well, I don't neither. He's nothin' to me. Get me the place as soon as it's legal."

"Look here, Mr. Howard," said the lawyer earnestly, "you've got a chance to get on with Meed's land, do you just as well. Maybe better. How 'bout one near Berea, closer to your old home—"

Jeff flushed angrily. "Tryin' to get me back to the mountains, are you? Well, I'm not goin' back. I'm through with the tall hills. I'm settlin' in the Blue Grass, and I'm where the cards don't like. Then they can lump it..... Look here, McBain. I'll tell it to you straight. I'm sick as hell of havin' those blue-bloods and near blue-bloods crackin' their faces in a grin when they hear my hillbilly twang. Well, I'm ready to give 'em something to think about. Something to hate me about. If you want to put it that way—"

The lawyer tried to speak, but the angry boy brushed him aside. "I'll take the best farm I can lay my hands on. You've already got the papers. Get 'em ready. Well, I'm goin' to settle down on it with a horse and a shotgun and a couple of dogs. I don't need to farm. I'll get by on it. But I'll tell you I'm not down all those trees they've stinkin' proud of and plant tobacco around the stumps. I'll——"

As he talked on violently but purposefully, Mr. McBain knew that the Meed case was lost. He'd have to wire the old man's lawyers, Prentiss and Elwell, down at Shelby, and tell them his client meant business.

"Very well, Mr. Howard," he said formally, "if that's your last word I'll attend to the foreclosure at once. You realize, do you, that you get the house furnishings also in this case?"

"I didn't know it," answered Jeff Howard, then right glad to hear it. It'd save trouble. "I'll need suitable furniture."

He went back to his boarding house, grimly pleased with himself. He was about to humble a Blue Grass family. Maybe there'd be a girl. Like the one who had laughed at him this morning.

CHAPTER VI.

When the girls returned from the city on the 5 o'clock bus the Major was impatiently awaiting them. Already, from Zeke, he knew of the disaster of the morning and a few of the subsequent events.

It had been a shock to him, awaking that morning to hear Zeke excitedly phoning a Shelby garage concerning the lubrication car.

The old Negro had hardly hung up the phone before the Major had him cornered. "What sky, Zeke?" he called. "You've been in an accident with the car?"

"Yessir, Major Sam," replied Zeke, coming to his bedside. "Seem like de engine still run first rate but one tire is flat 'cause de left shoe fender is bashed right in de wheel."

"Good Lord!" exclaimed the Major. "How did it happen?"

"Seem like a white man in a big car done hit us, Major Sam. But he right nice an' perlite about it. He done pay $50 to get us fixed up. He done take Miss Kate an' Miss Crline an' de hams right on into city, too—"

The Major jerked himself to a sitting posture. "You mean the girls were with you when it happened?" he hallooed.

"Yessir, Major. Dey shore was my means to aid you could dey go. But bein' as how you come home las' night under de weather——"

He paused, having with darky cunning shifted the topic of attention from his own ill luck to Major Sam's embarrassment.

The old gentleman sank back on his pillow with a chastened sigh. His inquiries were: "Was it a strange person that hit you, Zeke? Surely the girls didn't get in a car with a stranger?"

"Seem like did, Major Sam. It were Miss Kate's blear. She said how I was to stay an' look after de car while she an' her sister take dem hams to de club. But don't you worry, Major Sam. Dat was a right nice actin' white man all right. He pay fer de damages."

Zeke went back to the roadside to attend to the wrecking crew and Major Meed gave himself over to confused reflection. He was glad for the accident. Althy discovered his egress and somehow responsible him later bleeding tears of remorse and anxiety.

She snorted cheerfully. "Worryin' 'bout de girls, is you? Well, you jes' let Miss Kate be in charge. She'll get dem hams whar dey goin'. See if she don't!"

The old gentleman, she dressed and pacing the porch when the girls returned. As they walked up, through the woodland pasture to the house they could see Althy there. Some of the high spirits of the day fell away from them, for Althy knew that a "season" was unavoidable.

X X X

They went inside and waited until the old man was comfortably settled in his favorite chair. Then Kate said, "Well, Grand'dad, I call me Zeke's tale your what happened this morning. We had a narrow escape but it all turned out beautifully."

Caroline took up the tale: "We got three of the hams there safely but on was ruined. It was the only one that was cooked. Then we got a flat tire and Kate changed it. Zeke was all right. He only had a bump on his head. Then Kate drove us home. That's all."

"Is all such a vessel," Caroline said. "Such a wicked vessle!"

Did you ever hear of such good luck?"

The old man said, "It's good luck enough to have you girls safely out of it! And Zeke. Nobody hurt. Remarkable!"

"And the man who hit us gave me $50 to have the car repaired, Grand'dad," Kate said. She showed him the bills and then, at a wise look from Caroline, put them back into her purse. "We risked spending $10 of it for a dress for me to wear to the Dalton dance Thursday night. A beautiful dress, Grand'dad, marked down to a fourth of its regular price. Blue satin. The sweetest thing."

Major Meed patted Kate's hand. "I'm mighty glad you got it, baby. I reckon you've been needin' a new dress for a long time. You ought'n got one for Caroline, too."

Kate said quietly, "We got something else for Caroline—a senior year at the University of Louisville. Isn't it, Grand'dad? We sold your ham formula to that man who took us to town. I made him pay $500 for it—"

She talked rapidly, telling the whole story while he listened in pained amazement.

"Exhibit One!" she said, showing Caroline's new bank book with its neat entry..... "And Exhibit Two!" unwrapping a flat package that proved to be their recovered money.

Major Meed spoke. "We'll have to find the man and return his money to him. What you've done is not straight, baby. It ain't honorable."

X X X

Kate said, "We knew you'd feel that way about it, Grand'dad. Caroline's already pointed out to me that it was a sort of blackmail—threatening for the ham recipe and getting it because I had something on the man. I guess it was a bad egg of some sort. He wouldn't've been so afraid of that traffic cop if he wasn't. But what's done is done. He's gone—probably about Louisville by now, riddance. We've got his nasty money and turned it into good money. There now!"

Major Meed, overwhelmed by Kate's barrage of logic, got up and paced the floor. Presently he stopped. "Kate, you're a chip off the old block, all right," he said, pulling at his goatee, "I believe the Lord sent that money! It'll pay our debts!"

Kate exclaimed indignantly, "Pay our debts nothing! It's going to go to Caroline's senior year at college. I told you that, Grand'dad."

The old man seemed not to hear. His face wore a relieved, happy expression. "Kate, you've let them, and I'll pay our debts. We can hold our heads up once again."

Caroline said gently, "Tell us about it, Grand'dad. You've never really talked to us about business. Do we own much?"

Kate exclaimed impatiently, "Pay our debts nothing! It's going to go to Caroline's senior year at college. I told you that, Grand'dad."

The old man seemed not to hear. His face wore a relieved, happy expression. "Kate, you've let them, and I'll pay our debts. We can hold our heads up once again."

Caroline said gently, "Tell us about it, Grand'dad. You've never really talked to us about business. Do we own much?"

Kate exclaimed impatiently again. He put his hands on his knees and looked at his three girls. He said, "There's almost $300 owing to the grocery and dry goods and hardware stores. Then there's about $300 that I borrowed from Judge Prentiss two years ago to make a crop."

Kate exclaimed quickly, "I didn't dream we owed money to Judge Prentiss!".Her calm prickled. The idea of being indebted to Morgan's kindly and successful father was too intolerable to contemplate.

"Yes," said Major Meed. "For two years now. I borrowed it to repair the tobacco barn after the big storm unroofed it. I'm a full mighty badly about not paying him. Not that he's pressed me. He's been as patient as you please, but I owe him that money, all right."

Kate remarked, "The money belongs to Caroline now. I gave it to her. Didn't I, Caroline? I'll say I you can have it." She looked at Caroline rather reproachfully, but with her the sorrow of the lost year at college which had been so near reality.

Caroline said steadily, "Of course he can have it! We've got to pay our debts. That's only right, Grand'dad. A gift from Kate—and me. Kate gave it to me," she concluded gayly, determined to hide her sense of loss and disappointment.

Kate thought with a proud surge of joy, "Caroline's a thoroughbred!" Then when her grandfather had concluded his formal little speech of thanks she said to the old gentleman urgently:

"And now tell us about the mortgage, Grand'dad. How are you struggling along with that?"

His face lost its recently acquired good color. He muttered and lifted his hand in a gesture of defeat. "That struggle's over, baby Kate. Prentiss and Elwell had a telegram from Lexington two days ago sayin' the holder is foreclosing. That's why I went to town and got drunk yesterday, I reckon."

Kate said, "You poor old darling! Why didn't you tell us instead of opting to bear it all by yourself?..... Of course we won't let them foreclose, Grand'dad. That's out of the question. We'll refinance. We'll apply to the government for one of those loans—"

The old man shook his head wearily. "I've tried that, honey. Prentiss and Elwell have done everything they could to work it for me that way. But the fact is, I ain't a good risk. The mortgage is two heavy and I'm not a good farmer any more. Since I lost my tenant a few years back, my crops haven't been worth the seeds, hardly. Zeke and I are both weakening out, and the farm hands you hire nowadays don't take an interest..... No, I'm not even Uncle Sam is goin' to finance a poor risk like old man Meed."

Kate and Caroline looked at each other incredibly. Caroline said in a queer voice, "You mean we've got to—got to leave Mead Meadows, Grand'dad? Move out of our house?"

He nodded, not looking at them. "Where will we go?" asked Kate, not flinching.

"We'll have shelter," he replied almost cheerfully. "The tenant house over on the Mount Hebron road. I've held on to that. It's got 2 acres to it. We can have a mighty fine garden there."

The tenant house! The girls were seeing it as they looked unbelievingly at their grandfather. A stark little six-room house, its porch sagging. Its upstairs windows resembling a pair of closed eyes in an unhappy face. Beside it a wormout, unkempt orchard. Behind it a hideous, paint-peeled barn. Before it a broken picket fence, separating a weedy lawn from the pike..... Was that to be their home?

TO BE CONTINUED.

Letter to the Father of a 21 Year Old Son

If you are a wise father, you'll be honest with your son.

You'll tell him both sides of the argument between prohibitionists and those who believe in true temperance.

If you have brought him up in the British tradition, you can be sure he will want to hear from both sides.

Right now he is hearing from the prohibitionist, who is loudly crying that the beverage rooms are corrupting youth and debauching public morals.

You will do your son and yourself a favor if you set him straight.

Tell him what happened when we had prohibition. Tell him about secret drinking of bad liquor in automobiles and blind pigs. Tell him how it bred contempt for law . . . how bootleggers prospered and how racketeering and lawlessness grew.

Tell your son that people can't be made sober by law. Tell him that the way of tolerance and temperance, men are trying to persuade us to extend local option laws, close beverage rooms . . . the few licensed beverage rooms are the first defence against the bootlegger, the strongest weapon against excessive drinking . . . which is moderation and self-control.

Tell your son about true temperance — which is moderation and self-control.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Patient Young Man Discovers "Many a Heart is Caught on the Rebound"

Here's a love story with a happy ending—happy for the young man who patiently played a big brother role, and didn't worry the girl he loved with hopeless love-making.

Tinkling ice and the heartening rattle of the shaker tempted him for a while when the girl turned him down. But, instead, he spent a week-end with an elderly relative, and found his conquering thoughts in an ancient autograph album. This love-story is founded on common sense, as well as a moral.

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"There's a lot of sense in old sayings. 'Many a heart is caught on the rebound' proved to be my advising ticket in the great game of getting the girl. There was Anna, Fred and I. We all went to high school together, graduating in the same class three years ago.

"Fred was better looking than I, and he and Anna worked in the same office—that was the mischief of it, seeing her every day, going out to lunch together. Of course they got engaged, and I don't know any probable words which would tell you how I felt. I'm an automobile salesman, and I felt as if I wanted to run the proposition into a ditch and forget my troubles where the ice climbs and the bootlegged gin can say, 'Make mine double.' But I just had sense enough not to.

"I wanted wedding; to be told I was a great big successful he-man, whom the world would be proud to hear. Trouble was I hadn't any other girl but Anna, and she'd turned me down. But I did have an old aunt on a farm, who used to send me $5.00 on Christmas and Easter. I was named after her husband. Aunt Polly was a great friend of mine, so I 'phoned her and asked if I could come up over the week-end. She was delighted.

"In the funny old parlor, the kind that's opened only after weddings and funerals, I found an autograph book. And there was the sentiment, 'Many a heart is caught on the rebound.' It was signed by Aunt Polly's late husband, and that was my way to sight him. The young man to whom she had been previously engaged and died too hard for hard cider.

"That gave me an idea, for Fred always dropped out of the picture around payday. He used to send word to Anna that he had sinus trouble. I didn't embarrass Anna with useless love-making—I was the dependable fag brother, not above carrying baskets on a picnic, buying the ticket for a show, putting the screens in their apartment windows, and getting her mamma to say what a nice boy I was. Also, I'd take the old lady for a spin sometimes, because Anna and Fred were all by themselves.

"Fred was all fired-up from one of his payday attacks of 'sinus' when I urged him to stay in bed, and I went 'round to play the big brother to Anna. We went to a show, and Anna worried because Fred wouldn't see a doctor about the sinus trouble. I almost felt wings sprout because I'd been right, and didn't tell her what was the matter with him. Afterwards we went to a cafe to get a bite to eat; and there was Fred, with a girl he had picked up. She was as pretty as chalk and asked me to take her across the floor to dance with him, which was dangerous and delightful because I'd had a time driving the car through traffic.

"Fred confessed about his 'sinus' trouble, and I felt sorry for it's apossible when he picked up the girl we had seen him with. But Anna declined to make up.

"Well, lady, it's all over except the wedding and I'm to dance and me. I'm grateful I never sneaked a wedding ring for Anna and ailbis. I played fair and I've got a grand girl. Heaven bless the old auntie-trouble, and the saying, 'Many a heart is caught on the rebound.'

If Youngster Has Many Desires

It's Natural for Him to Ask For Things, Lisa Grenelle Says

By LISA GRENVILLE

JOHNNIE ALWAYS wanted something. "Mother," he said one day, "I wish I had a St. Bernard puppy."

"He'd go fine in an apartment," father countered.

"He would fit in my room. I know, because I've already measured," Johnnie retorted.

"You'll be wanting an elephant next, or a bear," Mother said.

"No, I'd rather have a giraffe," Johnnie reasoned seriously and everybody laughed.

But di really wasn't such a joke to Johnnie. He was always wanting something, waking up every morning with at least half a dozen new "wants" for Mother to dispose of.

It worried Mother and annoyed her. "I don't like to keep saying 'no', and I certainly can't say 'yes' always. I never want a child! If he's this way at six, what will he be at 15 or at 21?"

Natural for Him

"He'll put us all into bankruptcy," Father said, gloomily. "People who want too much always come to a bad end."

It is natural for the young to want things. To them everything is so new and intriguing. It is not natural or good for them to get everything, or perhaps even most things they desire, but it is most natural and right to desire them. The pathetic, abnormal person (child or adult) is the one who does not want. Even then he is repressed, pushed so far into the negative that he has no desires.

Something vital is lacking in the child who doesn't want, or who can't make up his mind what he wants. To be sure the "gimmes" are tiresome and must be discouraged. A child can be too demanding and grow too possessive. He must learn there are certain things he can never possess, and no one can.

He must learn that many things can be enjoyed better if not possessed. Nevertheless, a child who wants this and that and the other is a vital, confident, healthy child, with a fine appetite and a real interest and zest in life and living. He must be controlled, but he need not be crushed.

Training Essential

But the child who demands nothing must be made over. You must find what it is that has broken his spirit, who or what has made him feel so inferior. How take he be-hind-the self-centered that he seeks nothing and can take no interest in anything outside himself?

The "gimme" child should be made, as much as possible, to work for what he wants. Let work and wait and save. But he never should be discouraged from wanting. His wants should be guided from things to achievements, from achievements to ideals, from self-centered to disciplined and guided, but nourished and never broken.

Healthful Routine Helps Keep Girls Lovely, Happy

(By Helen Follett)

Many are the advantages or the attractive and charming woman. A healthy, peaceful, well-ordered demeanor that carries distinction as well as a clear complexion and good features and an interesting personality all oil the wheels of life and make the journey pleasant.

It is worth one's time and effort to find ways of making oneself presentable and appealing. One should exercise daily, sleep restfully, eat wisely and be fastidious about the details of the toilet. It includes emotional control, a sound nervous system and mental health. Add to that good taste in dress and you win all the beauty tricks.

One must have an eye on astounding years. Others grow old more quickly than workers, so strive to have an interesting occupation. Don't fail to catch a play hour now and then. Cook up a plebeian stunt that will keep you cheerful and full of zest.

Heavyweights nearly always suffer from foot troubles. A pair of small feet that should be carrying 125 pounds rebel when there's an increase in weight. The way out of that dilemma is to buy shoes that are small enough to restrict the good things of the table that create fat cells.

Hold in your "tummy" and your chest will take care of itself. The habit of keeping the abdominal fibres tense will strengthen them. You'll have a natural corset that will give you pretty lines.

BUKER — ELLIOTT

A quiet wedding took place on Friday, June 25 o'clock when Miss Gladys Pearl Elliott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Elliott became the bride of Clarence Truman Buker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Buker, The Rev. W. J. Walker officiated at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Trenton.

The bride wore a marina blue taffeta frock, white accessories and carried a bouquet of American beauty roses and sweet peas.

Mrs. William Dickey attended the bride, wearing a pale blue organdy dress with white accessories. Mr. William Elliott, brother of his bride, was best man.

A reception followed at the bride's home after which the happy couple left on a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls and points west. For travelling, Mrs. Buker wore a marktain suit with brown accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

GOOD MANNERS

by Mrs. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Wedding Felicitations

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

1. Since it is incorrect to congratulate the bride-to-be, what is the correct thing to say?

2 What should a person say upon meeting the bride some time after the wedding? Upon meeting the groom?

E.

1 We should remember to use "Congratulations" when we are felicitating the fiance or the groom, and "Best Wishes" for the fiances or the bride. We may expand that "Best Wishes" to mean, "I hope the wishes for your happiness" or "Best wishes for your happiness always, Betty" or "May I offer my very best wishes for your happiness." You may say anything else in this general sentiment that is appropriate to relationship or friendship with the bride-to-be or the bride.

2 When you meet the bride or groom after the wedding, it would be natural to say something about the beauty or charm of the wedding, about how lovely the bride looked and how happy they both look, how much you enjoyed being at the wedding or at the reception, or perhaps something about the new home or their plans for the new home.

Hat at Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

Will you kindly let me know if a hat should be worn by the mother at a church wedding?

R.

If the church wedding is in the daytime, the mother of the bride, like all the women who attend the wedding, should wear a hat. In church wedding is in the evening and is formal, whether or not the mother wears a hat or some other "covering for the head" depends on the traditions of the denomination of the church.

Signing the Register

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

1 When a man is signing a hotel register for himself and his wife, how should he sign?

2 Is it considered poor form to add a postscript to a letter?

3 Is it ever proper to write a letter in pencil?

4 The other day I heard some one say that it is not correct to use "Miss Jones (Mary Jones)" in writing a letter. What does this mean?

5 What is the correct signature for a woman to use for a business letter?

Eager to Learn.

1 The man signs the register: Mr. and Mrs. John Allen, High-City, Florida.

2 Postscripts to letters are not in good form.

3 A letter should never be written in pencil unless it is absolutely necessary to do this. Invalids often have to do this, but this is about the only valid reason for using a pencil.

4 I am glad that you asked this question, for subjections sentences in letters (or on postcards, where they are so often seen) are a particular hate of mine. A subjections sentence is a sentence from which we omit the subject: for example, "I was glad to hear from you." "Hope this letter reaches you." "Wish you were here." "Glad to know that you are well." Instead we should write, "I was glad to hear from you." "I hope that this letter reaches you." "I wish you were here." "I am glad to know that you are well."

5 This is the correct signature for a business letter written by a married woman:

(Italics)
Very truly yours,
Mary Smith Jones (or Mary Jones) (Mrs. Henry Jones)
(end italics)

Mrs. Beekman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.

Springbrook, July 27 (Special)—A commodious frame house, situated on the outskirts of Springbrook occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Murney Ray and owned by Alex Moore of Madoc, was destroyed by fire shortly after four o'clock this morning. A drive-shed and small barn were included in the loss as the flames spread from the house to these buildings. The cause of the fire is unknown. Mr. Ray was at home alone at the time and was awakened by the crackling of wood and by the time he made his escape from the burning building. All the furniture in the house was lost. The loss is estimated at $1,500 and is partially covered by insurance.

DELORO HANDED A 3-0 SETBACK BY THE PACKERS

Marmora (Special) — Deloro's home league team was beat on Saturday afternoon as Packers took revenge for the 5-0 defeat sustained earlier in the season and handed the Smelters a 3-0 defeat This victory was due to the extra strength and Deloro though playing its full team fielded badly crippled in an exhibition game against the Trenton Air Force during the week. At half time it seemed as though a scoreless game was in the offing but just of the second half but the two rivals played hard to break the victory. Deloro kicked off and almost immediately Packers had a corner kick corner, from which no score materialized.

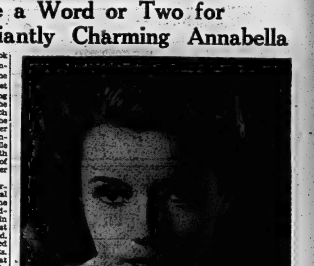
End to end rushes continued for a short time. J. Hart was within an inch of scoring from heading the ball, he hit the cross-bar, Brown shortly after had his turn but was fortune to mis-kick when presented with an opportunity by the Deloro defence. Packers were playing a fighter and shot high and O'Neill twice failed on shots. Packers were rewarded forwards tried to draw blood. W. Hart opened up the right wing forcing a corner from which nothing resulted, although the Deloro defenders were hard put to stop an opening. A rush on the Packer's goal saw a pair of players of each side roll over and Curtis saved the situation. A few minutes later the Peterborough goalie ran out and cleared as Deloro forwards were on another rush. At this stage Cox and G. Downer placed the sphere just over the cross-bar. Another Deloro rush ended in Brooks paying the Peterborough goalie hard and Curtis saved two good shots in quick succession and then Brooks was again unfortunate in shooting over the high. Bradley also just missed with a good shot from mid-field. Packers with two more shots and Curtis did well to clear the first hard drive. O'Neill made good clearances at the other end prior to the whistle recording the end of the half time. Early in the second half, G. Downer scored in a melee which only quickest action on the part of O'Neill could avert. Brooks then sent in a stinging shot to find Curtis sound. On the succeeding attack by Deloro, J. Hart kicked over Packers were having their half of the argument. Deloro forwards tried for goal to see the ball go over the crossbar. Brooks, showing his usual energy, shot well but failed to again proved unbeatable. The visitors almost scored when the ball came from a corner kick, but O'Neill threw himself at the ball and relieved the situation. Everything Deloro could obtained was neat goal on a pass from Bachan. This enlivened the play of both teams, a rush initiated by the Deloro right wing resulted in Smith having possession, a shoot which Packers then brought off another clear. Deloro seized the ball at the far end of the goal to give O'Neill no chance. O'Neill was kept busy defending his citadel for several seconds. At this point the Deloro forward line was reorganized, J. Hart going to outside left and Brooks taking centre. Deloro staged another rush for Brown to deflect his shot. Cousins placed a high shot in front of Brooks, the latter having hard luck in not netting. Packers increased their lead shortly before the play terminated. Buchan scoring prettily on a good combination effort with Harris. Final score Packers 3. Deloro 0.

George Simmons handled his first game on the Deloro ground and had it well in hand. Owing to the late arrival of the Packers the game was an hour late starting.

Teams:

Packers—Goal, Curtis; backs, A. Todd and Asa Downer; half backs N. Downer, Jones and Art Downer; forwards, Clifton, G. Downer, Buchan, Foster and Harris.

Deloro—Goal O'Neill; backs, Townson and Cousins; half backs, Gray, Smith and Sproul; forwards, W. Hart, Bradley, J. Hart, Brown and Brooks.



Referee—G. Blomers, Peterboro.

Critics Have a Word or Two for Radiantly Charming Annabella

ANNABELLA, the lovely French star who created a sensation in "Wings of the Morning," is co-starred with Raymond Massey and Conrad Veidt in "Under the Red Robe," now on the Belle screen.

The glamour business, which took a definite upswing with the importation to these shores of Simone Simon, takes on further interest this week, the second English-speaking film appearance of Annabella, the lovely French star who created such a sensation in "Wings of the Morning." In her new film, "Under the "Red Robe," a Twentieth Century-Fox release now at the Belle Theatre Annabella is co-starred with Conrad Veidt, regarded as one of the finest actors Europe has ever produced.

A vivid new screen star, as different and alluring as her unusual name, Annabella has long been the darling of Continental film audiences, but her appearance in "Wings of the Morning," the first Technicolor film made in England, was the occasion for a concerted outburst of dancing in the streets. The day after her film opened at the Music Hall in New York City the papers were filled with linetyped headsmans for an exciting new personality, radiant and charming and altogether lovely.

The Times reported that the charming little French actress was "as much the gamine as Bergner, and vastly more attractive," and it was the opinion of the Herald-Tribune that Annabella was not only "an accomplished French star," but that she was a "notable recruit to the English-speaking cinema."

"A decorative and talented personality," was the verdict of the vivacious personality," "a gracious lady of charm," and the Journal-Post were the phrases with the professional movie-goers heralded Annabella's debut. The Sun referred to a young lady who was, in the Evening Telegram's phrase of the New York Post's reviewer, a "charming young person-ality."

Annabella is not her real name, for she was born Anne Charpentier, Annabella being the name she chose at dinner with a film producer one night, politely depreciating her daughter's attractions. However, the producer saw Annabella, decided that her father was wrong, and gave her a small part in a picture.

Unwilling to trade on her family name, the lovely film recruit sought a nom de cinema—something euphonious and simple—and finally selected Annabella from the title of one of her favorite books, Edgar Allan Poe's "Annabel Lee." And, as Annabella, she became the leading Continental film star, the starring role in "Le Million," the ridiculous farce directed by René Clair, making her the most sought-after actress in Europe.

Annabella's striking success on the European screen may, in part, be the result of her beauty. She is a concrete and refreshing departure from the stereotyped run of soulful, long-suffering types which has flourished in war-torn Europe. A pretty, winsome, very much-alive young person, she combines with consummate dramatic artistry an obvious and infectious delight in the business of living.

Now in her twenty-fifth year, Annabella is five feet four inches in height and weighs 116 pounds. Her golden hair, brown eyes and fine clear complexion made her a natural subject for the technicolor process, and in "Wings of the Morning" was directed by Victor Saostrom. A New World picture, "Under the Red Robe" was produced by Robert T. Kane and is released by Twentieth Century-Fox.

At the Movies

AT THE CAPITOL

"You're in the Army Now," and Wise-cracking Wallace Ford and lovely Anna Lee join forces in the new comedy drama, "You're in the Army Now," which opened at the Capitol as smash hit No. 1. Based on a scenario by Lesser Samuels and Ralph Bettinson, the story gets underway when Wallace Ford, impersonating a New York habitue of the underworld, finds himself being charged with murder and makes a hasty escape to London.

Here, he masquerades as Jimmy Dean, private in the British Army. But Privy Dale is in love with Tommy Atkins. Instead he makes love to Jimmy, gets into difficulties with the authorities, clashes up a career chock full of adventures and thrills as the hero of the regiment.

Drama, laughs, dancing, songs and human situations turn the picture into a reproduction of the entertainment which no cinema-goer should miss at the box office, furthermore, emphasizes the spirited and sure-fire directing hand of Raoul Walsh who previously made the picture world hurrah at such show-stopping films as "The Cock-Eyed World," and "What Price Glory?" In addition red-headed Grace Bradley, playing a Cuban dancing queen, John Mills and Frank Cellier turn in arresting performances in featured roles, while a large chorus of lovely lads and lassies and sparkle in a series of snappy dance routines.

Thus, if you like dialogue which crackles, songs and dances which bubble with excitement, drama which is sincere and emotional, you'll do well to see "You're In The Army Now."

"Missing Girls"

Martin Mooney, who wrote "Missing Girls," the story of the woman racket showing at the Capitol, Wednesday, as hit No. 2 put himself on the spot recently. Martin wrote a series of articles for his newspaper. The series dealt with the vice racket, and Mr. Mooney didn't spare the horses when he was writing his crusading stints. He called a spade a spade and came out with information that had the high officials in New York City running around in circles. Mooney was hauled up before the Grand Jury and questioned, but Mooney remained as silent as a clam. He wouldn't talk. He refused to name his informants, nor would he say more before the Grand Jury than that which had already appeared in the paper. Mooney was between the devil and the deep blue sea. He knew that, if he squealed on the gangsters, they would "rub him out." And, on the other hand, he knew that, if he held out on the Grand Jury, he'd be sentenced to the penitentiary for half, gladly. "Missing Girls" tells a similar story to his own, and the leading role, played by Frank Frye, is that of a Mooney-like reporter.

Shown for the last times today and tomorrow are Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in their best picture "Gay Divorcee," and as bit No. 2 is Mae West in "Klondike Annie." Last complete show at 8.25.

Future of Football in the City Discussed in Open Meeting

Executive Assumes Debt of $5500 But Equipment Needed

MEET AGAIN THURSDAY

The future success and sponsoring of rugby, football, that great autumn classic, still hangs in the balance insofar as the Belleville Rugby Football Club is concerned relative to the fostering of the game in this city.

Last evening at the Y.M.C.A. rooms 20 interested persons, including a scattered few players, continued and discussed the prospects of the game in Belleville. Many angles were discussed. The matter of interesting the general public and business section of the city in the matter of membership tickets, the question of whether the game should be retained as a novice entry prize and sponsored by the public of Belleville or handed over to the questionable method of commercialized sport. All angles were discussed and will be further dealt with at a subsequent meeting to be held in the Y.M.C.A. on Thursday night of this week at which time all business and production into, as well as the general citizens are cordially invited to voice their opinions relative to the fostering of rugby football locally.

The present executive of the Belleville Rugby Football Club do not hide the fact that they owe $500.00 in debt, but the executive have assured that they will shoulder one or two of them have but the club as a whole feel the general public should have a voice in the matter. Annually from our senior schools, where rugby football is featured as an autumn sport, a score or more players are being developed and it is for the upliftting of these youths and also the salvation of one of the finest team games in the world, that the present executive is making its final appeal on Thursday night.

Some Equipment Needed

Owing to the unavoidable absence from the city of F. C. (Bill) Laurin, president of the Belleville Rugby Football Club, Business Manager Bill Fry and J. E. Shortt jointly occupied the chair during the period of the meeting and it was pointed out to those present that their new uniforms and some new shoes were needed while pre-season practice will be in vogue within a month's time.

Billie Hughes, Dominion-wide renown football player and coach now residing in Belleville, has already volunteered his services to the Belleville club, it was asserted last night. He is a star of yesteryear, drawing some heralded rugby stars from the personnel of the Royal Canadian Air Force team which was the splendid material produced in Belleville during the past few years, the matter of fielding a team in that circuit is a credit to Belleville in the O.R.F.U. remains entirely in the hands of the fans, more especially those who are not acquainted with the game.

Thursday night's meeting is open to the general public for suggestions as to the future and upliftting of the fall classic in Belleville.

KIWANIS JUNIORS BLANK MILFORD

Shell Two Hurlers From Mound to Win by 9 to 0

Taking advantage of the opportunities presented them, the Kiwanis Juniors went on a scoring rampage to blank the Milford "Giants" 9 to 0 in an entertaining baseball game staged at the Fair Grounds last evening. The local juniors had little trouble in solving Milford moundsmen, shelling Harry Stanfield from the mound after a four-run splurge in the third. The game was terminated in the fifth on account of darkness, however. The visitors were held to one small single with three Belleville pitchers sharing the mound duties.

Manager Bill Gore selected Joe Kelleher on the mound, the youthful righthander allowing the only hit collected by the Milford nine, a single by Wright in the second inning. Relieved by Jimmy Gore and Kelleher, as Wright was caught off first base, however, Kelleher struck out two, Fairley and then took up the pitching duties for the Kiwanis outfit and in two innings four, while the diminutive Joe Doherty hurled the last inning and struck out two, the third out coming after the batter had struck out and the ball went by the local catcher for an error.

McDonald and Carson each collected two singles, with Blaker hitting for a double in the third. Carson drove in two runs in the second, while Plummer drove in one in the fourth. Conaky and Gilling also hit well. Wright counted Milford's lone single in the second but was subsequently out. The locals showed some smart fielding behind good hurling.

The Belleville Kiwanis Juniors meet the Shannonville Hawks in an important South Hastings League fixture at the Fair Grounds on Wednesday evening. A win for the local juniors will virtually assure them of a play-off in the league.

The line-ups: Kiwanis Kids—Conaky, 3b; Collins, 2b; Weeks, cf and p; Kelleher, p and cf; Blaker, ss; Plummer, c; McDonald, lf; Doherty, rf and p; Carson, 1b. Milford—Powers, c; Hoag, rf; Scott, 2b and p; Wright, 3b; Ruff, 1b; Pires, p and 2b; Bond, cf; Audit, lf and Heffer, ss.

YACK RETAINS BANTAM TITLE IN CLOSE FIGHT

Toronto Boxer Received Unanimous Decision at End of Bout

MARTIN SMART

Promoters May Rematch Pair For Contest Later

Toronto, July 27 (CP)—Norman (Baby) Yack, a veteran of the ring machinery, stuck out his chest today and told promoter Jack Corcoran to bring on world champion Sixto Escobar or any other leading bantamweight.

The Baby made his first defence of his Canadian bantamweight crown a successful one last night, pounding out the closest of decisions over Montreal's Frankie Martin. From whom Yack took the championship June 14 on a split and hotly disputed decision.

Escobar was linked to the champion's right to the decision in the return bout, but Martin lost no prestige in dropping the verdict to the brown idol of Toronto's fighting populace.

Only last week, the National Boxing Association, ruling boxing body on the North American continent, placed Escobar, the Cuban beat bantam in the world; Yack the Baby, right behind him, second in beating the experienced, tough Martin that he's ready to shoot his best against any of the top four Escobar included.

Say Martin Again

He may be called on, however, to go a few more rounds with Martin before tackling anybody else. The fans—4,500 and all cheering for the Baby—registered approval of the decision from the start.

It was a unanimous verdict by Referee Ray Scuffle and the two judges, but time in handing over the dict has been given in Ontario by the referee. The former method of scoring is the one in force under the Ontario Athletic Commission when Premier Hepburn ordered such a questionable decision to take effect. Yack's previous bantam weight crown about a month ago.

Yack beat off Martin's challenges to the last one in a furious 10th round after the challenger had thundered his way to a narrow margin in the first nine rounds.

LOCAL BOY ON AMATEUR CARD

Buddy Browes Meets Rugged Wrestler in Harvey Stanfield

With three all-star bouts on the card; amateur wrestling will be introduced to the Kiwanis Fair Grounds on Wednesday night at 8:30 o'clock when Buddy Browes, being presented by the Midway Bar of Toronto, but who is local boy, Buddy Browes, the promoter and one of the chief attractions of the night will be opposed to Harvey Stanfield, the aggressive type of battler who has taken up the methods he employs to win at times.

Jeannie Timoskay, a son of Ukraula, but more recently of Mount Dennis, clashes with Ernie Highson, Indian lad from the Six Nations Reserve. Hughson is considered one of the most agile men in the amateur wrestling ranks of Toronto and features a flying Swedish famous flying tackle told only by aggressive attack upon his opponents.

This is the initial appearance of the amateur wrestlers from Toronto and Western Ontario in Belleville, the Queen City Cabana's Hamilton and other centres in Western Ontario, the amateur wrestlers are particularly drawn to these matches, largely because of their willingness to meet all comers and add thrills and spills to their bouts.

TIMELY HITTING HELPS FOXBORO

Win Over Latta Assures Foxboro Place in Play-offs

Foxboro, July 27 (Special)—Foxboro practically assured themselves of second position in the O. H. League playdowns here last night when in playing a postponed game they made their hits count and scored a rather easy 4-0 victory over their old arch enemy, Latta. The losers Foxboro and Latta stars on the season's play, each team having won two and lost the same number.

Scattered showers almost put a crimp in the game being played at all, as the Belleville contingent of the Foxboro club were very late in arriving, thinking the game would not be played, but as no rain was in evidence in Foxboro the game went on.

Seeley started on the mound for the home club but was relieved before tackling anybody else. The fans—4,500 and all cheering for the Baby—registered approval of the decision from the start.

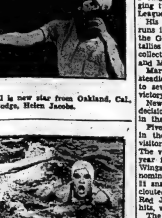
DOMINION TITLE WON BY QUEBEC

Ottawa, July 27 (CP)—The Dominion's team supremacy settled in Quebec's favor by a one-stroke margin, a field of almost 100 amateur golfers swung into action on the first day of the championship that will produce the 1937 champion golf clubbers.

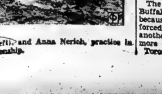
All 36 players who competed in yesterday's 36 holes of medal play took up the title chase along with 60 others, including 19 from the United States led by Freddie Haas Jr., of New Orleans, who carried off the amateur crown last year at Winnipeg.

Quebec's four-man aggregate for the 72 holes yesterday was 619. Frank Corrigan completing his afternoon round with a 79 just enough to decide the title. Ontario's grand total was 620. Jack Nash of London leading his mates with scores of 75 and 74.



When the Manitoba players, except Reith, faltered in the afternoon, British Columbia, aided by Ken Black's 73 in the afternoon round, piled place with, 630. Manitoba dropped into fourth spot with 634. Then came Alberta 644, New Brunswick-Prince Edward Island, 673 and Saskatchewan, 686.

A deluge of rain that came suddenly in the midst of the morning round gave practically the whole field trouble. But the sun reappeared before the afternoon round started and Phil Farley of Montreal and Bobby Reith of Winnipeg turned in some sparkling golf.



Farley, starting the afternoon with 36, one under par, completed his second round with 35 for 71, two under. Reith, after taking 40 on his first nine, played steadily and was never over par again till the final nine when he came in with a 37, missing par by a stroke.

BELL SARGENTS DEFEAT CORBINS

Eliminates Any Chance of Corbins Finishing in Top Position

Scoring in every inning, except the fourth, the Belleville Sargents played consistent softball to defeat the Corbin Locks 10 to 7 in the final meeting of those two clubs in the local Senior Softball League at Coleman's Park last night, practically eliminates any possibility of that club heading the league and sets the termination of the schedule on Friday night. Only a dual defeat of Point Anne by the Corbin Locks starts can assure the Corbins of an outside chance of finishing on top. It was the only defeat the Bell-Sargents handed the Corbins in their starts this season, but it proved costly.

Hurling their ace moundsman, Johnnie Bawden the Corbins went out and scored one run themselves-like runs in the initial frame, but Bawden settled down and effectively saw the Bell-Sargents slowly cut down the lead to knot the count in the last inning with a run in it in a decisive manner. Costly errors by Bawden and Bethel also harmed in their inner defence.

Capt. Jack Bethel for the Bell-Sargents, got away to a bad start in the initial frame, but later settled down to hit safely twice in the pinches and was given air-tight support by Bawden. Bawden, who struck out seven and walked four, while Bawden whiffed nine and only walked two, but was touched for slugging bats his, when hits mean most. Bawden Bell-Sargents scored a brace of runs in the initial frame, but failed to get safe singles in every other inning, except the fourth, when Bawden retired the side in order. Sager retired the side in order in the second, fourth and sixth.

Stout Ethier was the big swat-smith of the night as he pounded out four safeties in as many times at the plate. Cook, Corbin shortstop, connected for a home run with a single in account for the hard hitting registered by the losers. Freddie McGuire had a double to his credit, while Ethier likewise had a triple and single to his credit. Bawden, Bethel and Bushell each had a brace of hits for the victors in the Bell-Sargent line. The winners out-hit the losers 12 to nine in the night's play. This evening at Coleman's Park, Point Anne meets Point Anne nine tangle with the Percivals.

The lineups:

Corbin Locks: Renn 2b, Ethier 2b, Reid lf, Cook ss, J. Bawden p, Whalen cf, R. Bawden lb, Tuttle c and Harris and Sager rf.

Bellevile Sargents: Sarviga 3b, Bushell 2b, Philp lf, Cook ss, Bushell 2b, Philp lf, Gray c, and Sager p.

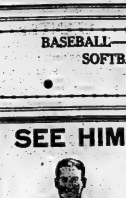
HEAVY SLUGGING BY DAVE HARRIS

(By The Associated Press)

Dave Harris, slugging Montreal outfielder, who was traded by his teammates as "Sheriff" can pin a star to his coat, all right.



Dave didn't have any mysteries last night but he solved the hurling of two Jersey City pitchers for three home runs and a single, just about the top slugging turned in by any International League player this year.

His hitting accounted for all the runs in Royals' 9-3 victory over the Giants in the first game of a doubleheader and scored four. The victors collected 12 hits off Rollie Sulls and Hal Wilkins, but Harris was responsible for seven hits to register his 12th home run of the season.

Newark Bears dropped an 8-4 decision to Rochester Red Wings in the other game of the twin bill.

Five of the Wings' 13 hits came in the fourth inning when the visitors gathered six of their runs. The victory was the 14th of the year for Hamlin Zinn, ace of the Wings. Steve Sundra, the Bears' mainstay, was his winning rival with 11 snapped. Frank Mayfhouse, who clouted a homer in the third and Red Juelich, who collected three hits, were loos in the Wing attack. The Syracuse Chiefs game with Buffalo at Buffalo was postponed because of rain and cold weather forced the postponement of another night game between Baltimore-Toronto and "Tudnio at Toronto.

We listened with interest to the discussions at last night's rugby football meeting and the matter of the future success of the fall classic in Belleville. After thoroughly reviewing the activities and organization of the local O.R.F.U. club for the past three years, the local football sponsors find themselves facing a rather heavy debt that, although it has been temporarily taken care of by one or two executive members, still confronts the club. What the meeting failed to do forcibly before those 20 men present, however, was the fact that rugby football has been steadily forging ahead in the public's eye, as the increased attendance proved each succeeding year. At any rate the meeting adjourned until Thursday night, when an increased attendance is sincerely hoped for.

Two paramount questions were discussed last night, both pertaining to the possible sponsorship of rugby classic in Belleville. The first, and undoubtedly the better plan brought forward, was to open a membership drive to sponsor the Belleville club for 1938. The second was to have the game featured and sponsored by the industrial firms, which would mean commercialized sport. Our personal opinion is that the Belleville Rugby Football Club can lay claim to being regarded as personnel of their team before the fans, then they have concrete basis upon which to approach the fans relative to their proposed membership campaign. There are sufficient professional men, such as lawyers, doctors, etc., in Belleville who learned the fundamentals of football in their college days to sell this interclub, if they were only approached through the proper channels.

Over at the R.C.A.F. Trenton Airport there are a few well-known and provincial-wide known football players. If the local club could be assured of their services, then they would have some foundation upon which to build their structure. In Belleville we have a city league softball players available, but unfortunately the majority are tied up with the packed teams at Peterborough and Oshawa this season. As we understand it, neither has the Airport, so why not amalgamate and assure the fans of a good team? At least it would be a paying proposition.

When there was nothing at stake the Kiwanis went to town and trimmed Milford 9 to 0, leaving the Milford "Giants" 9 to 0 in an abbreviated five inning exhibition game in the local circuit last evening, but the question now is how are we will the Kiwanis Juniors be when they meet the Shannonville Hawks in the homecoming game at the Fair grounds? As the South Hastings League standing now reads the Kiwanis kids have two wins and a tie for five points, while Shannonville has a win and two ties for four points. If the Kiwanis kids can kick through with a win over the Hawks, they will have virtually assured themselves of a play-off berth, although the Hawks have two postponed games and the Juniors one more scheduled game, but Wednesday night's tilt looks like a play-off, league as both teams are concerned. Junior ball needs a better showing of fans than has been its lot of late.

We understand Tommy Carruthers, local golfer competing in the Canadian amateur golf championships that open at Ottawa today, received a bye in the first round play-offs. Tommy apparently qualified in flying colors.

Although a selection for the proposed all-star softball team, to be chosen from the Belleville Softball League standings, the Corbin Locks are coming in fairly well, Manager Bill Todd says the prize award warrants a large entry list. All selections for the all-star team must be in President Todd's hands at the Percival Store, Belleville, before 6 p.m. Friday night. Incidentally Billie Hughes, Canada's well known trainer, manager and athletic coach, has been engaged to umpire the benefit all-star game on Civic Holiday. For the information of all-star team is to be named from the Belleville players from the Point Anne, Belleville Sargents, Percival Stars and Aaimua Juniors club to play the Corbin Locks in a benefit game.

Joe Gould, veteran Preston Rivers star, has signed Allan's O.A.L.A. certificate with the Fly-Weekers and will be seen in action or part of the season with the club, recently quit the team and was seen in a Norwood Terrier uniform when Gould's name first appeared on the 13 for Friday night. Gould may find himself in Belleville, as he did not receive a release from the Rovers when he signed with the Terriers, that is according to President Gord Delaney. The Rovers' next home game will be Tuesday on Wednesday night with the self-styled champs of the association. It will be interesting to watch the Rovers' performance if Gould is playing for the Terriers. Friend George Wendell, Oshawa soccer star and defenceman, had Gould to one goal in Norwood. Harry Vail will be set with the Rovers to team with Hasen on the Rovers' defense tomorrow night.

Chuck Barnett's Belleville Sargents bowling team ends the win of the season last night when they defeated their "lockmaking" rivals, the Corbin Locks 10 to 7. The defeat of the Corbins places them in a rather embarrassing position in the local softball realm. Heralded as sensational early performers, the Corbins find themselves in second place, a full game behind the Point Anne nine with only two more games to play. The "cementers" have only to win their remaining two games to assure them of the play-offs. Considered scrappy, as they contend runs in every inning, except the fourth, gave the Bell-Sargents the nod over their "lockmaking" rivals last night. It was the only victory in the three starts these two clubs will have in the league schedule, that the Bell-Sargents triumphed, but the result proved most costly for the Corbins.

The annual Belleville Lawn Bowling Club's mixed rinks tournament is the order of the day for Wednesday afternoon and evening. The outside lawn bowlers always look forward to these neighborly tournaments, where keen sportsmanship and good fellowship

PAT REMILLARD SCORES TRIPLE

(By The Canadian Press)

Boscobel romped in first by three lengths in the feature sixth at Queen's Park yesterday afternoon to win the other favorites on a form-winning card. Boscobel, little better than even odds, was too fast for Big One, by second place, and Simcoe, third.

Threatening weather cut the attendance and the slim crowd saw favorites come home in every race except the fifth in which Field Mouse paid $6.10 to win. Jockey Remillard scored his sixth victory of the meet on Boscobel. The veteran rider had three winning mounts, being also aboard Queen's Colors in the third.

McDougall and McTague each scored doubles in the fourth as they romped in under McDougall in the fourth for the Complete Line of Men's and Women's Fine Footwear

MARKET COMMENT

Speculative attention was focussed on Aluminium Common when stock markets opened yesterday morning due to publication of the "Ripley" reorganization plan. The issue opened lower at 5 as compared with a closing price of 6¼ on Friday. On the face of it it would appear as if the latest plan is less favourable, so far as the common shareholders go, than either the Liquidator's proposed plan or that of Harrison and Co. It will be recalled that this is the fourth plan submitted, the first being that of Wood, Gundy and Co. which appeared last May and which bears the best resemblance of all to the current plan sponsored by the Bondholders' Protective Committee.

In New York the consensus of brokerage sentiment is becoming more optimistic. There are some very logical arguments advanced for higher prices. In the final analysis, when the significance of the defeat of the Administration's Court bill seeps in further, some hold that its effect marketwise may be comparable to that of the NRA which precipitated a broad upward movement, though starting from a much lower base.

Another influence that has retarded the momentum of the forward movement has been the lack of enthusiasm in industrial circles which has prevailed on other occasions of noteworthy earnings results, writes The Trader in Barron's. Industrialists and business men generally, despite the understandable satisfaction over the achievements of the first half-year, and the encouraging prospects of the second, have been unduly hesitatory of voicing unrestrained confidence over the outlook. This far is already known may be said to be based merely on the customary inability at mid-summer to take accurate soundings for the fall and winter seasons. And it may well be that the optimism in the steel industry, impressed by the sharp rise in scrap and by the volume of new business and export inquiries will become more general by Labor Day.

Brazilian Traction Outlook Improves As Measures Proceed For Reconstruction of Brazil

Shareholders of Brazilian Traction, Light and Power Company will find cheerful reading in the comments of Mr. V. F. Boucas, financial advisor to the Government of Brazil, who is presently on a mission in the United States accompanying Arthur de Sousa Costa, Brazilian Finance Minister with a view to discussing trade matters affecting America and Brazil and more specifically to negotiate the establishment of a $60,000,000 currency stabilization fund.

Mr. Boucas expresses the belief that Brazil's economic progress in the approaching five years will be unprecedented. The large South American republic, he declares, is embarked on a vast program of industrialization and the country will soon be competing most successfully in the textile markets of the world. Brazil will also produce much of the large chemical needs. Mr. Boucas promises. Railways of Brazil are presently in the market for $53,000,000 to $30,000,000 of equipment. Mr. Boucas thinks that European nations will be better able to obtain the orders than those being placed, than American companies, on account of the exchange restrictions obtaining in the United States.

The financial mission is also studying the Federal Reserve system in the United States in an effort to devise an adequate central banking system in Brazil. If and when the central bank is established, states Mr. Boucas, it will have control of the issuance of money in Brazil.

DODGE LOGS ON BARGE DECKS

Five Men Rescued After Storm—Half of Cargo Lost

Harbor Beach, Mich., July 27—(AP)—Five men rescued by coast guardsmen told here today of dodging loose logs aboard the storm-tossed barge Michigan on Lake Lake Huron, before they leaped to a coast guard boat in the darkness of night.

The power life boat brought them ashore here this morning. More than two hours later the barge, with Capt. Joseph Bruno and Joe Huston of Owen Sound, Ont., still aboard, was towed into port by the tug Harrison. It was riding low in the water but was in no danger of sinking.

Approximately half its cargo had been swept overboard.

Tow Line Breaks

James Johnson, engineer of Owen Sound, said things "looked pretty bad" when a tow line broke last night.

"Waves were sweeping over us", he related. "We kept on hoping the best we could and keep out of the way of the logs that were being washed away. We got pretty scared and didn't know what was going to happen until the coast guard arrived."

The five who were taken off were able to jump directly into the coast guard lifeboat, which was driven away from the side of the barge before McGregor and Huston could jump. They chose to stay on the barge rather than jump into the water and risk being rescued by the coast guardsmen.

The barge, owned by John Harrison and Co., of Owen Sound, was being examined today to determine the extent of the damage.

CATTLE BUSINESS READY TO BOOM

Livestock Men Look With Favor on Shipments to Ontario Lands

Toronto, July 27—(CP)—Canada's cattle business, domestic and foreign, is ready to boom under the impetus of a Government-assisted plan for shipping their livestock from the dry prairies to Ontario's rich feeding land—then to market.

Livestock men said today the movement of western cattle to Ontario has started several weeks earlier than last year, the first in which the Dominion Government paid half-cost of shipment and half-fare of eastern buyers who select their own cattle for fattening.

Because the market is better, due largely to cattle shortage in the United States, eastern cattle men are hurrying to take advantage of the Government scheme. Personally, or through agents, they are buying western cattle in July—last year heaviest purchases were in August—to get an early start.

ing" them into doing so.

When they kept silent or evasive he sent them to jail for contempt of court. They began to talk then and give him the evidence he needed.

Almost immediately, Dewey found himself investigating more than 100 separate rackets—Industrial Rackets, as well as straight criminal "enterprises" such as prostitution, stolen goods and loan sharking.

The young prosecutor turned five men over to the law chiefs, who were taking an annual interest of 1,000 per cent and terrorizing their victims with strong-arm hoodlums who told them:

"We'll break your neck for bumping off guys like you. You better find that dough."

Information Collected

Patiently week after week Dewey gathered information. On Oct. 31, 1935, he struck. Five men were arrested and given terms ranging from to five years.

At first Dewey was not interested in prostitution. He made it plain at the outset he was not out to interfere in petty crooks, street walkers, gamblers and numbers' police. He was out to get the big shot bosses. But he heard a mysterious shadowy figure known only as "The Boss," was muscling in on prostitution, organizing the so-called "parlors" on a chain store basis. "The Boss" reputed reaped at least $12,000,000 a year

Swift Raids Launched

After weeks of preparation, on May 1, 1936, Dewey launched a series of swift and widespread raids which netted such "ladies of the evening," Madames and Bookers as Nigger Ruth, Jenny the Factory, Polish Rose, Flo Sadie the Goat, Six-Six Sits, Cut-Rate Gus and Cold Deck Annie.

He didn't get "the Boss," but he was on the trail.

Dewey, new type of psychology on the sullen girls seized in the raids. Every one instructed his attorney: "Treat them decently. SAY 'please' and 'Miss' to them. See they have chairs and are comfortable. We don't want the women as prisoners. We want them as witnesses."

They Start to Talk

It worked. Mildred Harris talked and Jenny Factory talked. A booker named Marcus labbed the "big shots" of the race-four or five of them.

"Any clues?" Dewey pressed him. Marcus hesitated, squirming.

"Spill it!"

"And Charlie," said Marcus, in a nervous whisper.

"Charlie!" snapped Dewey.

"Just Charlie. That's all I know."

That was enough. It was enough. There was only one Charlie.

AS MIDDLEWEIGHT CHALLENGER TOOK A LICKING

When Freddie Steele, middleweight champion of the world, handed out such a shellacking to Charley "Hobo" Williams of Alexandria, Va., in Washington, that the referee stopped the squabble in the 8th round, this is what took place. Miss Stanwyck, attended the preview with Robert Taylor. Some 800 persons, outside the theatre saw Taylor and rushed him. In the jam, Miss Stanwyck became separated from her escort and when she attempted to regain his side, a police officer barred her path. "I'm Barbara Stanwyck," she told him. "Oh yeah? and I'm Clark Gable," snouted the officer, pushing her behind the ropes. Taylor came to her rescue and convinced the policeman that she was really Barbara. This photo shows the two picture stars after the melee in the theatre lobby.

LLOYD GEORGE PRESENTS KING WITH KEYS

During his first visit to Scotland since the coronation, King George was presented with the keys to Dunnbarton Castle. He is shown above again receiving keys to a castle, this time at Caernarvon, Wales. Presenting the keys of Caernarvon Castle to His Majesty is Lloyd George, British statesman and constable of the castle. Queen Elizabeth is shown in the background.

A current instance of the strange ways of the Reds is graphically illustrated by these pictures. At left you see Wang Lan-Chai, Chinese representative, and right a Japanese officer, as they were lowered by rope into the town of Wangping to confer on terms of mediation in the present crisis between Chinese and Japanese belligerents. The city's gates had been locked at the outbreak of the clash, which threatens to grow into open warfare.

The Sunbeam Quilt

By KATE STONE

—Chas. Hardy Syndicate

WNU Service

Martha Preston stirred on the small cot. She reached for the silver watch in the chair. Half-past six! Why, she must have slept all night! She drew herself up cautiously — careful to make no sound — and peered curiously at her husband on the bed. He was sleeping soundly and easily, Mrs. Preston slipped quietly out of bed and into the next room.

She wore the last hairpin into her coil of thick, brown hair, and unfolded a fresh pink-and-white gingham dress. She had turned it at nearly midnight the night before because Joe liked it better than any of her others and it pleased him to have her wear it. In going downstairs she chose the front way because the carpet would muffle her footsteps.

She opened doors and windows to let in the sweet morning air. The hens were cackling in the hen coop and the little bantam rooster was practicing his new crow. Gambo, the big, black cat, got leisurely out of his basket under the kitchen table; stretched; opened a rosy mouth in a wide yawn and followed Mrs. Preston out on the porch to take in the milk.

A folded slip was tucked under the milk jar. The bill. "Good gracious!" Mrs. Preston exclaimed. "Another month's bill and the last one still unpaid!"

There were six unpaid grocer's slips hanging on the pantry door; the last bottle of medicine had not been paid for, and now the rent.

It took no intricate arithmetic to determine the precise financial status. When Joe stopped working the grocery stopped coming. That was all. It was five weeks now since the fever had laid him low. The first there had had to be help with the morning; an expensive man for consultation; many afternoons quiting. Then little savings were quiting pretty low.

But she wasn't going to think about it at all! Joe was slowly but surely pulling back to health and strength. That was all that mattered. It was her faithful nursing, the doctor had said, that had done as much toward saving his life as he himself had done.

"I will be weak and probably a bit childish," he told her after his convalescence had set in. "Humor him. Just make him as happy and comfortable as possible. It won't be long now before he'll be up and about again."

Martha laid the breakfast tray on the table and tip-toed up to the bed. Joe was awake. He smiled up at her and held out his hand. "You look so pretty in that dress," he said slowly. "Mat-say, Marty, aren't there some pieces of that for the quilt?"

Through he worked 'mid the grime and clank of iron and steel Joe Preston was at heart an artist. His chief hobby was his flower garden, and every available inch of space for them.

Martha had started a patchwork quilt of sunburst pattern, and now in his weakness the thing became a real joy to Joe. He would have his wife lay the gay colored pieces all about him and he would point out the combinations that he wanted put together. So hardly waif for the afternoon hour when with Martha's morning's work done and he having finished his midday sleep, they would work together on the quilt. "Sunbeam," he would corrected. "Sunbeam! It's pretty!" Joe declared. "Sunbeam! It's sunbeam to me, anyway."

"If it isn't just like you, Martha," her sister Susan declared, "to waste all this time on that quilt. You could get home work from the overall factory and earn quite a bit while you're dallying with that quilt."

"I know, Sue," Martha Preston replied: "but if Joe should see me doing that, it would put him right back. He isn't strong enough yet to realize what an expense it all has been. And," she added, "the quilt gives him so much pleasure. Please don't say anything."

"Well, just the same, you ought to be earning," Susan insisted.

But Grandma Noble understood. She had tried a long time and she knew a whole lot of things that sister Sue did not. She lived a little way down the street, she diligently collected scraps from her daughter's and granddaughter's dresses and little Nellie brought them over in a small white box.

The outside of the quilt was nearly done on the day when Joe's Uncle John came to see him. Of course, Joe wanted it brought out and put on show. He had gained strength and was able to laugh with Uncle John over the pleasure of his convalescence.

"Well, now, see here!" Uncle John exclaimed, "you that put together, Martha, and let me see how doing the county fair. I'm it on that, you know, and there hasn't been a quilt entered so far that can hold a candle to that."

And so the quilt found its way to the fair. A few weeks later the Prestons opened a long envelope, looking envelope and read that Mrs. had been awarded them as first prize for the quilt.

"Well, didn't I tell you all the time S was a sunbeam quilt?" Joe asked.

TARZAN THE MAGNIFICENT

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Wood had no desire to kill, but he wanted to fire a warning shot. As he tried to lift his gun he recalled the legend of the friendly blacks that no hostile hand could be raised against the mystery people. And, in truth, his arm became like lead—immovable.

The power of Mafka is with us; you cannot kill one of the Amazons said, laughing scornfully. That unbelievable power must have affected Wood's companions, too, for all four were disarmed without an attempt to resist. And now sharp spears herded them forward.

As the party climbed higher into the mountains, the women seemed gay and very well pleased with their captives, whom they discussed as if they were prize cattle or work horses. The prisoners listened, for they were familiar with the dialect spoken.

More and more, as they approached their goal, Wood felt that some power of evil brooding upon him. Finally, he blurted out: "What do you intend to do with us?"

The leader of the Amazons shrieked with devilish laughter. "Soon enough you will know!"

PUNITIVE ATTACK MADE BY JAPS

500 Chinese Troops Stationed at Tungchow Killed or Wounded

Tientsin, July 27 (AP)—Japanese planes reported today 500 Chinese troops of a brigade stationed at Tungchow, 12 miles east of Peiping, had been killed or wounded in a punitive attack made by Japanese infantry and bombing planes.

The Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported the Japanese went into action when the Chinese refused to submit peacefully to be disarmed.

Previously Domei had reported the brigade of 26 men had given up their arms to militarized Chinese police of the East Hopeh region, friendly to Japan.

Japanese losses were said to have been 19 killed and wounded, including one officer. The Japanese troops were said to have been under the command of Col. Takashi Kiyoshima.

When the Chinese refusing to lay down their arms, Domei reported, the Japanese attacked with the support of bombing planes "decimating the Chinese, killing and wounding an estimated 500."

Neutral observers expressed the opinion that if the report was true the Japanese had taken the Chinese unawares, as it would otherwise have been impossible to "decimate" so large a force with such small casualties to themselves.

Little Benny's Note Book

After breakfast the telefone rang and it was pop around at the drugstore saying it looked like rain and he thought he better have his umbrella, and ma gave it to me to take around to pop, saying, Now dont dawdle. your father hasn't got all day to wait, so dont tarry to dillydally.

Are they the same as dawdling, ma? I said, and she said, Never mind, your father is properly impatient already.

Which he properly was, judging by how he was about 10 minutes away when I got around to the drugstore, pop saying, So here you are at last, you human turtle, you slow motion snail. Pour half empty trolley cars have gone by and the next one properly won't have a seat left, and that's the one I'll have to take, all you confirmed crawler and creeper, he said.

Well Q.'ym, holey smokes, it's been drizzling a little and some lady was going to the store without any umbrella and she asked me if I'd take her there and home again with your umbrella on holy, he wouldn't happen to her next, I said, and pop said Well, in that case, and every case, you must always be a gentleman. I suppose she didn't know anybody was waiting for the umbrella, he said.

Sure she did, pop, I told her, I said, and pop said, Well, the nerve of some so called ladies. Who was she, anybody you know? he said.

Girl Yes sir it was Mary Williams, I said, and pop said, For Pete sake you goon, if I had time I'd give you a spanking rite here under the approving gaze of the street public.

Him not having time on account of another trolley car stopping just then, being one of the most crowded ones I ever saw.

MILLION ACCLAIM KING AND QUEEN IN BELFAST

Explosion of Gas Main Half Mile from Route Is Heard by His Majesty

Enthusiasm of Crowds Packing Streets Unabated as Blast Noises Is Heard

KING GREETS NORTH

Republican Irreconcilables Blamed For Terrorism Near Frontier

Belfast, Northern Ireland, July 28 (CP)—A wife area of Belfast was rocked by the explosion of a gas main today, only half a mile from where the king and queen were traversing to city hall on their Coronation visit.

The king and queen themselves heard the blast. The noise carried for miles throughout the city. A customs building near the main was badly damaged.

The explosion—whether it was accidental or planned—came as a climax to a carefully-laid campaign of terrorism which flared along the Irish Free State frontier a few hours before the arrival of the Royal Party in Belfast.

Child Is Slightly Injured.

Apparently the only casualty of the gas explosion was a child, playing near the main, who was only slightly injured. Every pane of glass within a 500-yard radius of the shattered main was broken.

The king and queen were in an automobile between lines of soldiers and police, on their way to the city hall for the first ceremonies of their one-day visit to Ulster.

More than 1,000,000 spectators had turned out to welcome them.

But the blast and the incidents along the Irish Free State border did nothing to diminish the enthusiasm of the thronged capital. As on the Royal party landed booming guns and strong cheers with the cheers of thousands to welcome the king and queen.

On Coronation Visit.

In an address at the City Hall the king said:

"Fifteen years ago the queen and I paid our first visit to Northern Ireland. Though a long time has passed it has remained fresh in our memory and we have always hoped for an opportunity of returning to your beautiful country.

"The queen and I have now come on our Coronation visit. We cannot thank you enough for the kindness and warmth of the welcome you have given us. We are delighted to find ourselves among you once again to renew our acquaintance with our loyal people of Northern Ireland whom we wish ever-increasing prosperity and happiness."

He knew who "Charlie" was. But trapping this "multi-millionaire Crooner of Crime" was another matter. This is the third in a series of stories on New York city's racket-smasher.)

New York, July 28.—(AP).

The deadline inspired at midnight.

At one minute past 12 o'clock two New York detectives acting under secret code instructions from Prosecutor Dewey in New York, arrived at a hotel in Little Rock, Ark., and asked the jailer: "Where's Charlie Lucky?"

"You can't do that. His lawyers have got until tomorrow to file an appeal against extradition him," "It's tomorrow now" one of the detectives answered. "Let's have the prisoner."

GERMANY STORES WHEAT AND GRAIN; FEARS SHORTAGE

Prison Terms Promised Those Feeding Wheat, Rye to Animals

EMERGENCY FACTOR

Germany Buys Grain in Every Part of World

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON

London, July 28 (CP)—Faced with a sharp reduction in domestic production and consequent shortage in 1938, Germany has been storing up supplies of wheat, rye and other grains to meet the normal demands of her people and for national emergency.

Latest official figures on grain imports show Germany has bought more than ten times as much wheat from January to June, 1937, compared with the corresponding period of 1936.

At Berlin last night, Walter Darre, Minister of Agriculture, announced decree whereby prison terms as hard labor and high fines would be penalties for feeding wheat or rye to animals.

German Imports Rise.

Wheat imports for the first five months of the present year exceeded 22,000,000 bushels at a cost of approximately $37,000,000 or an average of about $1.35 a bushel. For the corresponding period in 1936 imports were only about 2,000,000 bushels at an average price of 67 cents.

Rye imports also show an enormous increase with a total of nearly 3,500,000 bushels against 500,000 bushels from January to June, 1936.

Canada has shared to a considerable extent in this accelerated grain buying policy, but Germany has since replenished her bins with large imports from Argentina, Russia and

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Lightning! Is there anything to why? Since lightning is simply an electric current on a very large scale, it is natural to assume that it heats the air through which it passes to incandescence or white heat, and hence is visible. But it has been pointed out, neither oxygen nor nitrogen, the two principal elements of the air, can be heated to luminous by ordinary heating. Lightning is hot as is evidenced by its setting fire to forests and other combustible objects which it may contact. It is believed that lightning is the result of a recombination of molecules of the air which were previously split up by the lightning itself. But this science is by no means settled.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, July 28—(CP)—Pressure is high to the south of the Great Lakes and over the western provinces and northward while relatively low over the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The weather has been fair and warm in the western provinces while light to moderate showers have occurred in many districts from northern Ontario to the Maritime provinces.

Manitoba—fair and warm today and Thursday.

WESTERN WHEAT HARVEST UNDER WAY

Though some areas in the Canadian and American grain belts will have poor crops, others are aided by drought, still drifting and grasshoppers, in many sections abundant rains have left excellent stands of wheat and other grains and harvesting has already started. Here is typical scene in Alberta as wheat harvest gets under way. Better weather forecasting has seen little of this for many years.

Japan and China fought undeclared war on North China' land and seacoast today.

Chinese nortar fire kept Japanese munitions ships from entering the mouth of China's Hai Ho; Japanese cutters fought back, extending Nippon's punitive expedition from the embattled environs of Peiping, once the dragon capital, to Tientsin on the sea.

Successes Denied

Chinese reports of military successes almost invariably denied by the Japanese, rolled in from dawn to dark. Japanese air bombs and guns scared the troops of Nanking and their Peiping area stronghold, with reported heavy casualties.

Tientsin, China, July 30 (Thursday) (AP)—A Japanese air fleet roared over the countryside about Peiping early this morning, dropping leaflets warning the Chinese populace to evacuate, after a full day of undeclared war in North China that extended from the former dragon capital to the sea.

Peiping Empty

Peiping, the airman reported on their return to Tientsin, "appeared the dead city."

"Not a single moving thing was visible," they added.

The evacuation warning scattered over the countryside about, Peiping told the inhabitants they might expect further fighting, designed to expel Chinese troops, in the area, at daybreak.

Military headquarters of the Japanese North China Army here said Wednesday, first day of large scale hostilities, had seen six strategic centres north, east and south of Peiping captured in the closing of the Japanese Army pincer.

Shanghai, July 28 (AP)—The Foreign Office announced today Sung Chen-Yuan's 29th Chinese Army had smashed the Japanese drive against Peiping in the first major battle of an undeclared war between China and Japan.

Very Remarkable Safeguards Achieved in London Defence

Hint Given New Defences May Give Immunity to Civil Community

GIBRALTAR DEFENCE

London, July 28 (AP)—For comfort in her anxiety over air raids in the event of a European war, Great Britain today had the assurance of her defence coordination minister "very remarkable results" had been achieved in air defence precautions.

Answering opposition speeches in the House of Commons last night on home defence measures, Sir Thomas Inskip said: "This is a very vulnerable community in London but there are other communities almost equally vulnerable as for instance, the Coventry district (industrial heart of the midlands) and our naval ports."

Referring to a statement by Sir Arthur Salter, Independent, the minister said:

"When the honorable gentleman speaks about sinking foodstuffs and in ports which are very vulnerable but in some places further inland he has perhaps overlooked how almost every part of the country would become vulnerable if it were likely to attract an enemy."

Sir Thomas Inskip hinted the civil community might be given immunity from such attacks within a few years as the result of certain methods of defence which the air ministry is developing. He did not detail these.

Winston Churchill joined the opposition in criticism of the government's program and asked for an official statement on foreign gun emplacements on the Spanish mainland near Gibraltar.

Sir Thomas replied that the guns, mounted on Spanish Insurgent soil, were "very numbers, and number in number nor size do they threaten Gibraltar."

Regina, July 28 (CP)—A livestock pooling system, which will put farmers on an equal price for their cattle will be inaugurated by the Federal Government to dispose of surplus Saskatchewan livestock, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Federal Minister of Agriculture, announced here.

Besides receiving an initial price, the balance of the proceeds will be apportioned to the producer after the transactions have been completed.

Assemble Cattle

Under the pooling system cattle will be assembled in fenced-in areas at shipping points. Where possible sanitation sales of carload lots may be arranged to give eastern buyers an opportunity to visit the corrals and select animals.

The proposed pool added to other Federal policies already in effect to assist prairie, cattlemen and facilitate movement of cattle from western drought areas to eastern feeding districts.

Notable among previous assistance plans is the low-rate freight policy by which the Dominion Government is to half the freight bill for buyers who take cattle out of prescribed drought areas in Saskatchewan and Alberta for feeding in other areas. DEATH RIDES

36, was in charge of Conductor J. D. Wilson of Sudbury.

Car Stalls On Track.

Lamplie at the wheel of the automobile descended a slight incline to the railway track, and, in the unexpected reason, stalled diagonally on the track. Alex Tunri stepped out just before the locomotive ploughed into the machine and its helpless occupants.

The terrible impact sent the automobile flying 60 feet, strewing pieces of wreckage along both sides of the track. By some odd freak, however, the headlights still burned when first spectators arrived. The car had been travelling toward the Copper Cliff road, indicating the two families were on their way from a stay were going away from Sudbury.

The body of young Oliver Tunri was picked up 120 feet east of the crossing. It was decapitated and both legs were missing. The others were also horribly injured. Tunri was dead when pulled from the wreckage.

Tried to Back Off.

Seen by railway investigators at her home and after she had quite had enough to tell her story, Mrs. Tunri said Lamplie had tried to back his car from the main lines track as he saw the train approaching. She said another automobile passed them as they were stalled there, possibly adding to Lamplie's confusion.

"I jumped out and ran clear of the tracks," she related. "I saw the train hit the car. It was terrible—an awful sight. Then I ran all the way home."

The train crew placed the time of the crash at 10:35 o'clock (E.D.T.). Besides Conductor Wilson, they are Engineer J. Belanger, Sault Ste. Marie and Fireman James Pinch, Sault Ste. Marie. When and the locomotive whistle was sounded on approaching the crossing. His first intimation was when the crash occurred.

Say One Car Cross.

"As the train approached the crossing I saw one car pass over it," Engineer Delayer related. "Something I noticed was the tail lights of a car that looked as though it was stalled. My view was obstructed briefly by the car which just passed over, but as soon as I saw the tail lights I applied the emergency brakes."

The locomotive struck the automobile on one side, throwing it over to the ditch almost 50 feet, diagonally across the crossing. Despite skid the train was proceeding at 50 miles an hour. The bell, he said, was ringing and headlight burning. Fireman Pinch corroborated this and added the night was clear.

YOUTH WRECKS TWO AEROPLANES WORTH $70,000

Julius Balmut, 18-year-old Cleveland youth, was arrested as an intervention to improve flying and wanted to discuss it with Washington officials; so, he took an army biplane from an Ohio National Guard hangar at the Cleveland Municipal airport and cracked up trying to take-off. He escaped injury but wrecked the ship he was in and another machine which he ran into. Both aeroplanes were worth $35,000 each. Balmut, held by juvenile detention authorities, is pictured at the right, while at the left, are the two aeroplanes he wrecked in his "take-off."

EXPLOSION

Conclusion of the King's speech was greeted by an outburst of cheering. Hundreds of Loyalists in their robes and officials in brilliant uniforms and morning dress joining in the demonstration of loyalty and affection.

Extremists Said To Be Active

Along the Free State border, however, Republican Extremists did their best to stir up trouble.

The series of outrages included the dynamiting of a railroad bridge 90 minutes after passage of a crowded excursion train from the Belfast. The span was partly wrecked.

Roving bands of incendiarists and dynamiters destroyed Customs houses along the Irish side of the border. Gasoline was splashed over at least a dozen of the small wooden buildings and then fired.

At one point several were blown up while an armed band held police at bay.

Vigilant police and troops exercised every precaution to prevent the violence from spreading into Belfast where more than 1,000,000 persons had gathered to welcome the King and Queen.

Authorities attributed the outbreaks to "Republican Extremists."

The border outrages were believed to have been executed to keep out the influx of thousands of persons loyal to the Crown who were home from the Free State yesterday and today.

Bridge Explosion

After today's bridge explosion at Dundalk railway officials dispatched crews to inspect all bridges in the border area, fearful other mines might have been laid.

All telegraph communication between Northern Ireland and the Free State was severed by the bridge blast, which makes one more serious than first reports indicated.

The blast at Dundalk sent up a train bearing 400 ex-service men and women for nearly three hours. It arrived at the border late and the passengers to see the royal procession.

Free State officers reported finding three unexploded mines under the railway line. One other had exploded.

Residents of Clones, in County Monaghan, said they spent the night in terror as bands roamed the countryside, firing revolvers into the air. Other terrorists set fire to customs houses on both the Free State and Ulster sides of the border.

Firing Over Clones Houses

Six men in an automobile fired a volley over Clones houses.

While one band of Free State customs post went up in flames a dozen men kept up a continuous fire for about 15 minutes. Many terror-stricken farmers' wives screamed as bullets shattered windows.

At Newry, County Down, armed men held police with a machine gun. After setting fire to the customs post they went to a nearby farmhouse, ordered out the night-gowned occupants and set fire to the dwelling.

The damage from various fires along the Irish frontier was placed officially at £10,000 ($48,800). Quantities of official papers and records were destroyed.

In one section of Belfast posters announced a meeting of the United Irish Republican Army to protest the King's visit. Armored cars hurried to the scene of the proposed meeting, but no members of the organization appeared. Houses in the district were searched for weapons.

Constables patrolled the area with rifles on their shoulders.

Free State Police Search Cars

Free State police, sent from Dublin to the frontier, searched all cars crossing the border. Hundreds of officers were on duty on both sides of the line.

A series of arrests followed the outbreaks. Several members of the Republican Army were arresting at Belfast. Five men seized on the highway between Londonderry and Omagh appeared in special court at Omagh and were held without bail. They were charged in a manner prejudicial to peace. Police said they carried revolvers and a wirecutter.

But in Belfast the day of the royal visit broke with brilliant sunshine. Their Majesties were satisfied as they left on the royal yacht Victoria and Albert.

Singing and Dancing in Streets

Throughout the night the streets in Belfast were thronged with persons singing and dancing. Hundreds came from Dublin to the Ulster capital to see the tops of broad wooden barriers erected along the processional route.

Shortly after dawn the royal yacht left its anchorage at Loch Ryan, accompanied by a naval escort of three cruisers and six destroyers. At noon today after the vessel berthed the Duke of Abercorn, Governor of Northern Ireland, boarded the yacht to welcome the royal visitors.

Their Majesties walked along the wharf to the destroyer Exmouth and soon were speeding to Lagan River to Donegal Quay.

"LUCKY" LUCIANO

Ground Attorneys

Cursing his attorneys, whining "you're kidnapping me!" the prisoner was trundled from his cell, whisked to the railroad station and rushed in the compartments of an east-bound train.

Charlie (Lucky) Luciano, or Lucilia, racket-land, droop-eyed Sicilian spawned in the slums of east side New York, now known as the "boss" of New York's vice ring, completed history at 8:15 a.m. (E.D.T.).

The cops, he said, had him all wrong. Disorderly houses weren't his real racket.

The detectives nodded. Maybe he had a right to feel hurt. Maybe the Grand Jury investigating should start to read something else than the four counts charging compulsory prostitution.

Maybe the police wanted to talk to Charlie about how Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer, the former big shot of the beer racketeers, and three of his bodyguards were rubbed out in a Newark, N.J., hotel late in October, 1935.

Disappeared After Massacre

In his delirious ravings before death, Schultz had told police that "The Boss Himself" shot him.

But the police had nothing definite on Luciano in the Schultz mass murders. And Dewey did have something on the unhappy Lucky in the Bordello racket.

Luciano had disappeared after the Schultz massacre. He was finally turned up in Hot Springs, Ark., but resisted extradition and gained a 10-day stay in order to make an appeal. In granting the stay, however, Judge John Martineau specified Luciano's lawyers must give 36 hours notice for leave to appeal. Luciano's attorneys delayed until the last minute—in fact beyond the last legal limit, which existed at midnight.

That was when the alert Dewey, directing the fight in New York, had his detectives drag the sleepy-eyed Luciano from the Little Rock jail cell.

Returned to New York, Lucky was locked up with 12 of his lieutenants under prohibitive bail totalling $1,750,000. More than 100 witnesses were kept in custody pending the outcome of the trial. But Dewey found it hard work to get witnesses to testify against the dreaded "Boss."

Master Mind Confused

"For two hours," he told the jury, "I sat with Nancy Presser trying to persuade her to testify and tried she would not be murdered."

But Nancy Presser did testify — and Dewey himself confused the sullen "master mind" Luciano on the stand. Dewey's then wrung an admission from him that he had lied to every question on an application for a prison permit.

For seven hours, in his final summation, Dewey pounded remorselessly at the scar-cheeked Lucky—gaining a conviction that sent the "Crime Crowns" to prison for a term from 30 to 50 years. Now 36, Luciano will be eligible for parole in 1967.

Nine of Luciano's lieutenants drew similar stiff sentences. Luciano had spent $250,000 trying to beat Dewey's evidence.

GERMANY STORES

Danubian countries. She has had to find the money for Canadian, Australian and Indian grain, but most of her business with Rumania and Czechoslovakia has been on a barter basis.

Shortage in Germany.

Independent observers estimate the domestic wheat crop in Germany will fall short of the average yield by about 15 per cent, due to adverse weather conditions.

The result, is that the German wheat situation must remain a problem of serious regulation, compelling millers for Chancellor Hitler despite the heavy imports and the already iers to mix maize, potato flour and state bread into flour for bread.

Only last October Hitler told a gathering of farmers in a speech at Bruckberg, Central Germany:

"If Germany's harvest should decline by 20 per cent then it would be a catastrophe for the German people."

Since that speech a winter of severe weather without snow has harmed crops in East Prussia, East Germany and Poland.

NATURE LOVER EXPOUNDS THESIS ON SIMPLE LIFE

Sidius J. Nostay is Actual Example of His Philosophy

Sidius J. Nostay, disciple of rhythmic breathing, open-neck collars, shorts for men, and life in the open, a visitor at the city hall this morning, passed briefly in the city on his cross-country walk from east to west to give Belleville residents a few tips on the "art of living right."

The slightly bald, sandy-haired, bespectacled nature lover, dressed "as men should dress" in his own opinion, complete with short khaki shorts, khaki elbow-sleeved shirt without tie, and heavy hiking brogues, carried knobkerry cane and well worn haversack in which the accessories of his mode of living were contained. Sometimes a little more than soap, toothbrush and towel; mirror, razor and other odds and ends. A smaller pack contained the "iron rations", or emergency food he might need. "Cheese and hard biscuit "which I eat only when I'm hard up," he explained.

Too Many Clothes

As for change of clothes, he hasn't any. "Men think too much of clothes", he told his small but curious audience. "If they don't fit. If this shirt gets dirty I wash it in some stream, I don't bother with underwear."

Mr. Nostay carries with him his autograph book and a second album of newspaper clippings and references which have been given him from coast to coast in Canada and many parts of the United States. He requests autographs, however, only from "people who count", Nansen and "Dr. R. B. Bennett", "Mackenzie King"—it was explained as he flipped through the pages of the open book. Singularly no specimens of handwriting of the prominent in this city will be sought, it was intimated.

The rhythmic-breather-traveller, of German birth, has been a resident of this country for the past twelve or thirteen years. He was born as Reuben Nostay in Ireland until the age of twenty-five. He set sail for foreign lands, working his passage on water when he could, hitch hiking, bicycling at other times. He came to the United States and then Canada. He owns a home in the suburbs of Montreal, "but is seldom in it except when the Canadian winters get too cold."

A student of theosophy during the latter part of his mature life, he has delved deeply into the mysteries of the Yogi. He has discarded the Rosicrucian teachings as being too shallow for those who would investigate the inner meaning of life. He pronounced instead his own philosophy of life "prolongation "through the use of universal breath, and knowledge of vibro-magnetism", with which, he added "the world is crowded."

Long Life By Proper Breathing

"Anyone can learn to prolong life through using only the right method of breathing.....rhythmic breathing.... breathing that is in tune with the cycle of Nature. Anyone can do anything if they observe the simple laws of life, eat the right food, think the right things.

"Failure is quite evident to those who would adopt the right teachings. Weariness of worldly things would disappear. A celestial happiness instead fills the out and body."

Mr. Nostay is 47 years old. He appears no more than fifty. On his own admission a forty mile walk in one day does not bother him a bit". "Anyone can do it." He is incarcerated mainly, he explained, "because women can't not time them right to the right art of living."

Upon the details of where he has been, and to what end the western trek will lead out this city today, the travelling ambassador of "natural living" was singularly reticent. "Where I go doesn't matter so much, and where I come from, even less. I have enough money to care for my few wants and when I enter a place I think I'll like it, I stay there for a time." Belleville, it was hinted, could no such immediate appeal to tarry.

His request made at the city hall was brief and to the point, merely a question as to the population of the city and the name of the present Mayor. Told that Mayor R. D. Ketcheson was at present vacationing he accepted this information with a grimace. "Just tell him I called" he replied.

It was intimated by Mr. Nostay that at Toronto he would address a meeting of a recognized sect of "Bundle" in that city.

The dictionary does not list the word, but no fully descriptive name further explained.

AT THE CAPITOL

"You're In The Army Now" and "Missing Girls"

Raoul Walsh's latest directorial effort, "You're In the Army Now," a fast moving comedy drama starring Wallace Ford and Anna Lee, now playing the Capitol as smash hit No. 1. offers movie-goers first rate entertainment and can all around comedy treat. The picture crackles with smart dialogue, amusing situations and a plot which highlights two rival adventure in some of the world's gayest outposts.

Briefly, the story concerns the high, wide and handsome adventures of a typical New York wise guy who, after a mad Chinatown brawl, finds himself pressed with a murder charge. Thinking fast he gets possession of the murdered man's papers and passports, makes a quick getaway and lands in London. Here, as Jimmy Dean he becomes a private in the British Army, falls in love with a beautiful blonde, gets in and out of scrapes and eventually winds up as a national hero.

"You're In The Army Now" is rich in production values, the trend of the story showing elaborate scenes in New York and London night clubs, on the parade grounds and garrisons, sequences in China waters and a thrilling attack by Oriental bandits and brigands. Special ensembles were contributed to the picture by the well known trio Hollywood songsmiths, Sigfrid Goodman and Hoffman.

Grace Bradley, the eye-filling blonde, playing a night-club enchantress, John Mills and Frank Cellier contribute performances of travels in minor roles. A special flavor should be reserved for the swashbuckling comedy antics of the hero, while comedy relief is given by Minnie Dupree as the Dowager Sergeant - Major's daughter with nerves and versatility. Raoul Walsh has directed the production with his usual masterly style of lightness and tempo.

"Missing Girls"

"Missing Girls," the latest of the screen's G-men dramas, is now playing the Capitol as No. 2 hit. Written by Martin Mooney, the reporter who went to jail because he refused to divulge the source of his racketeering stories of the New York Grand Jury, "Missing Girls" has a ring of authenticity that is far removed from the stories of the underworld. "Missing Girls" might almost be you, they must see it. It is absolute tops in melodrama.

"Missing Girls," like the story of Martin Mooney himself, is the drama of a reporter named Logan who was jailed for refusing to testify in a racket investigation. There are other parallels to Mooney's own case, too, but they had better be remembered merely for the story is replete with startling surprises, and so, any suggestion of a synopsis here would detract from your enjoyment of the picture.

Roger Pryor is excellent as the reporter, and Muriel Evans is charming in the leading role opposite him. The cast is fine throughout.

AT THE BELLE

Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell in "Night Must Fall"—

Something decidedly new comes to the Belle Theatre tomorrow (Thursday) and Friday, matinee daily, in Metro-Goldwyn Mayer's "Night Must Fall" with Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell.

Skillfully directed by Richard Thorpe, this daring story presents an entirely new technique for crime fiction on the screen. Without the element of mystery, the story in miniature is a psychological study whose mission is known to the audience before he can start to act.

Montgomery chose deliberately to step from heroics to this peculiarly difficult characterization. He saw the London stage play and urged M.G.M. to buy it so that he might play the killer role. His justification will be evident during its Belleville presentation by the enthusiasm of the spectator who will thrill to this unique story.

The supporting cast includes some members of the original London cast who appeared during the run of 15 consecutive weeks. Dame May Whitty, Merle Tottenham, Matthew Boulton and Kathleen Harrison would themselves brilliantly in their original stage roles. Also worthy of mention are Alan Marshall and E. E. Clive.

"Night Must Fall," daringly different in theme to the audience in its initial sequence and from then to the last scene no thrill follows another. The drama is lightened with liberal comedy and the romance of Dan Green Belle Montgomery and Miss Russell.

"Night Must Fall" is different, daring and decidedly entertaining screen fare.

"Yes we You Exit," a very funny "Our Gang" comedy is announced for presentation in the same program.

Annabella, Leaving

When casting directors of New World Pictures selected the lovely Annabella as the leading actress for "Under the Red Robe," the Twentieth Century-Fox picture at the Belle tonight for the last times it was the greatest compliment they could have paid the lovely and talented actress.

With the public reception of her picture, "Wings of the Morning," yet to be recorded at the time, Annabella executes undertook to star her in the new film confident of certain popularity. Subsequent acclaim accorded Annabella's debut performance the producers were taking no gamble.

"Under the Red Robe" finds Annabella co-starred with Raymond Massey, and, Conrad Veidt, as a beautiful figure in the most romantic age.

Crammed with up-to-the minute World News Events is the popular Metrotone News, and an uproarious Hollywood Star-Personality comedy, "His Fest Gid."

USE OF INVENTIONS

The late Senator Marconi a few days before his death spoke of the tragedy that inventions made for man's good could be used for his destruction. He expressed the fear that these inventions might lead to the ruin of all that is precious in the modern world's inheritance.

It is a fact that the wireless has been made to play both parts by man—a blessing and an agent of ruin in time of warfare. One has only to think of poison gas a product of invention for the destruction of men, offset by the gas mask and now comes word of an invention of another poison gas which removes the soda-lime in the gas mask, so rendering it useless. That is to be expected. Science is impersonal, but it is man that decides. Science will not halt with a poison gas; there comes a gas mask and then with the gas mask in general use along comes something to destroy its effectiveness. Such will happen in inventions. Even the air man breathes for life can be used in compounds for death.

But this two-sided rule of science is not confined to inventions alone. The most precious instincts of humanity can be stultified and used for the basest purposes.

Unfortunately while there is a general feeling against war, the possibility of war remains to terrify mankind, and in consequence war is not yet placed in the class of the immoral. That is why inventions can be used for good and evil. But in the moral and social realm man is not permitted to use inventions and products for the ruin and destruction of fellow men. When a world sense of the fact that war is international immorality is attained then there will be no fears that inventions can be used in such a wholesale way to cause ruin.

Yet even in the social sphere, there are what many contend are certain practices or institutions permitted which they say are ruinous to their fellowmen. On this opinion is divided and so certain institutions are permitted. But in the main the trend of effort is to remove such factors.

As man in his upward climb of civilization has eliminated private warfare and revenge in the relations of men and society has progressed, so the day will probably come when internationally it will be impossible to make war. As society would not have developed under a system which allowed the private feud or revenge, so the world is not yet near what it might be were war but eliminated.

Until man wipes out war, men will use almost any invention for the purpose of international conflict.

KNOWLEDGE OF TRUTH

One of the most upsetting factors in the "spiritual experience of our day," according to the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, New York, "is the disturbing fear that religious insights and faiths are poetic and rather than factual—that they are romantic rather than rational—the creatures of our wishful imagination rather than of our careful investigation."

An honest mind avoids fooling itself, he explained and seeks confidence that in religion man is dealing with the truth.

The preacher said that the scientific method of getting at the truth has monopolized the field. The impression has prevailed that there is only one way of reaching solid truth, namely the rigorous, unpoetic, logical, rational method of science. To gather the cold hard facts, build up the solid generalizations, verify the generalizations from the facts until Q.E.D." can be appended to the process—that is the scientific method of getting at reality.

"The sense of beauty, for example, is one way of dealing with reality. Up from the same deep sources of creative power from which our analytical intelligence came, came also this responsiveness to beauty. It, too, is built into us, is an integral part of us, and the wise use of it, just as much as analytical intelligence, brings us on rapport with something real. It is going to require more than all the materialists ever can do to explain the beauty in his world as an accident. It cannot be an accident, a mere by-product of fortuitous physical elements. All this beauty must tell the truth about something. The sense of beauty is not simply an emotional experience; it opens one door to reality.

"The love of persons is another highway to real knowledge. Einstein, who has corrected Newton's phrasing of gravitation, may some time have to be corrected himself, but there are some things a man knows about his father or mother or friend that never will have to be changed. About the most certain kind of knowledge we possess is knowledge of people. We do not get at this vital kind of knowledge by merely scientific processes. We learn truth in this realm mainly by insight, intuition, sympathy, appreciation, friendship, love. As Paul said about Christ, 'I know Him whom I have believed.'"

HOUSES

Houses are interesting!
There is something about a house
Appeals to your mind.
It is so trim and snug, as though to say;
"Behold my virtues!
Within my walls, all is fresh innocence;
I am undefiled!
Neither muddied floors nor scratched woodwork
Mar my integrity.
I am history unwritten. All modern invention
Aids my sophistry."

There is something about an old house
Appeals to your heart.
It is so careless of its beauties, so wise;
It has lived!
It has a consciousness of hospitality,
A marred benevolence.
Its ancient creaks have many tales to tell of those who tended it
In its growing.
All knowledge and understanding, belief and love
Make its simplicity!
Houses are interesting!

THAT HORRIBLE EYESORE WHICH HAS DISFIGURED THE CHURCH STREET CORNER ON BRIDGE STREET for these many moons is now in process of removal. A prominent corner like this with churches on two corners and a rectory on another disfigured by a jagged hole in the ground and heaps of rubbish on the other—how such a condition should have been permitted to exist so long is beyond understanding. The old opera house building was torn down and the best part of the materials removed, while the rest was permitted to remain as an eyesore and a nuisance. Not only that but it was dangerous. Fortunately no serious accident occurred but the offense to the eye was aggravated and prolonged. It is gratifying to learn that the property has been sold to Dr. James H. Forrester, medical specialist, who will erect a fine residence and office thereon and thus redeem the property from the disgrace of a dump-heap.

"THE GREAT SALVALI" IS DEAD. Adolph Lewis Salvali died recently in Amos, Quebec, away up where the north begins in earnest, a small community created by the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific, Quebec-Cochrane section. Amos is one of the raw, new towns of the Ontario-Quebec frontier where prospectors and lumbermen are more numerous than other type of humans, where sweaters, shoepacks and moccasins predominate and golf clubs are seldom if ever seen. "The Great Salvali" was well known to theatre goers in Belleville and in every community, large and small on the country-side. He was an adept with cards and an entertainer of sorts. He spoke French, English and German fluently and was frequently engaged to travel with circuses through the province of Quebec to make the announcements in the French language. When vaudeville was in its prime he travelled in the big money and it is said of him that returning from a tour well headed one time he gave his blind mother a five-hundred dollar bill, tucking it under her plate at the table as a surprise. When his mother took the bill in her hand he asked her what denomination it was. The old lady felt the bill and said: "Well son, it must be a lot of money because it is so thick." Salvali visited Belleville with the Conklin carnival, was here during the U.E.L. celebration and recently travelled with the Wallace Carnival. He was a native of Nashua, New Hampshire, seldom saw him for he was a real trouper and could adapt himself to any branch of entertaining, circuses and carnival shows in the summer, stage shows in the winter. He certainly was an interesting character, and like all good troupers generous to a fault, stony broke one moment, but cheerful and eagerly planning for a stake the next—plenty money at other times and always willing to share it with less fortunate troupers—and so another stage light has dimmed "The Great Salvali" is no more.

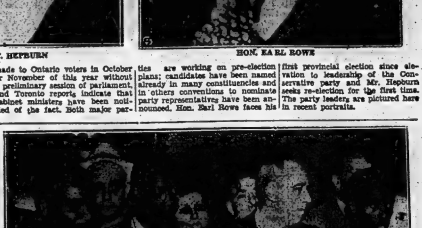
PRE-ELECTION STRATEGY OCCUPYING ONTARIO PARTY CHIEFTAINS

HON. MITCHELL F. HEPBURN



HON. EARL ROWE

Through Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn, Premier of Ontario, has declined to admit that an election is forthcoming, both Liberal and Conservative party organizers are fairly certain that an appeal will be made to Ontario voters in October or November of this year without a preliminary session of parliament and Toronto reports indicate that cabinet ministers have been notified of the fact. Both major parties are working on pre-election plans; candidates have been named already in many constituencies and in others conventions to nominate party representative have been announced. Hon. Earl Rowe faces his first provincial election since alienation to leadership of the Conservative party and Mr. Hepburn seeks re-election for the first time. The party leaders are pictured here in recent portraits.

And I got out of bed and started to sneek downstairs in my pidjeammers, and I tripped in the dark and went down about 4 steps in a setting position to the 2nd floor landing, and I sat there a while without hearing any sines of anybody being woke up so I kept on going down and my hocky stick was still on the front steps and I started back upstairs with it feeling lucky, and I was almost all a ways up and I tripped again on account of being too careful, and I fell on my hocky stick and it broke in half with a noise like a pistol going off, and I quick kept going and jumped in my bed hoping nothing would happen.

Wich something did, being pop and ma lighting the hall lite and starting to come upstairs, and ma saying, What's this, who's are these pieces of stick?

CHAPTER VII.

Kate said that night, "You say the law allows us to plan on Lucy a while. But if we've got to go, let's go quickly! Prolonging the agony only makes it worse."

Caroline agreed, though shrinking at the thought had stirred up the "yes, I think the sooner we move the better," in her mind. It would break our hearts to stay on here—the way things are."

Major consented. The next day was Sunday. They passed this uneventfully, pretending that nothing had happened, but on Monday Caroline went into packing, beginning with a sort of feverish haste, confronting the first move of their lives as if it were no more than housecleaning.

The fact that the five most important suites of furniture were to be left behind was almost as much a shock to the girls as the loss of the house and farm.

Caroline said, after their grandfather had told them and had gone out of the room, "I'm glad I've two long pier mirrors! The old sideboard? Our very best!—Can you take it to Kate's?"

Kate answered slowly, "I'm trying to think of something around that familiar dining room as she spoke. Well, maybe just the set, Carolina. This furniture's been here always. It seems to belong to the house. Nancy always said she wouldn't fit into a modern house or a cottage. Seems as if you can't get it into the tenant house!"

They both laughed a great deal that day. They packed, and found they were shocked and highly hysterical, and their laughter came when are so akin. The Major, hearing their bursts of hilarity, would shake his head, surprised and hopeful, not catching the hysterical note that ran through it.

"Maybe they don't mind so much," he said to himself prayerfully.

Morgan Prentice, coming out to Mead Meadows that night, found Kate stunned and remote. He said to her, "Kate, you've got to tell me about it, honey. I've known it for four or five days. And I've known for a year or two that it was on the way. Anybody could see the old gentleman was riding for a fall."

"Everybody but Caroline and I," Kate replied. "He's been actually crafty about hiding his worries from us. Let's get away from these packing boxes. Let's go outside."

Morgan was willing enough. They left the library and went out into the yard, walking slowly and close together across the darkening stretch of heavy-scented sickle and June roses hung in the air. When they reached the pasture fence, Kate's horse came up to her, pushing his whitish nose against her shoulder, as gentle as a moth in spite of his size.

She said, aside, "Brown Boy!" and gave him the petting he begged for. Then she stepped back on the flank and drove him away.

"I wonder how he'll like his new quarters?" she said ruefully to Morgan. "The barn at the tenant house is pretty old-fashioned."

"Forget it tonight, Kate." Morgan said decisively. He drew her to him and kissed her. When she tried to speak he kissed her again, and presently her head was nestling dimly, responding as always to love making.

They went back to the house and sat on the garden steps. Kate's face slept higher, so that Morgan's head rested against her knees and she could stroke his hair.

He said, "I'm dead tired, honey. I'm sorry I had such a long 10 hours sleep the whole week-end. I'm rocky——"

"Dear complaint!" Kate answered, frowning into the darkness. She rubbed his temples expertly with her long strong fingers. She knew that what this did to a man of his stain strength and vitality went out of her, transferred from her body to his. And, after a while, the touch rarely kept its magic in reserve. They sensed it from moment to moment themselves. Yet tonight Kate thought with a quick and fleeting bitterness, "I'm tired, too. Why doesn't he think of that? I'm tired of nothing but his arms from dancing——"

But when he reached around and took her two hands and held them captive and kissed their palms, lingeringly, as Kate knew he came as soft as wax again and she could think of nothing but his utter charm.

Above the tinkling notes of the old piano, the trite little song she was singing came out to them in the darkness: "Lady dressed in jade, hold me close at the masquerade—"

They listened idly, Morgan said, "That what stirred you up?"

"It's a tired green," Kate told him. "Not a pretty jade at all. She was wondering about Eve Elwell and her three-year-old girl Barbara. Morgan had offendently been with them often over the week-end, "Something that nothing had happened, but on Monday they were back into packing now with a sort of feverish haste, confronting the first move of their lives as if it were no more than housecleaning.

Kate said, "Those dishes don't go with the house, Mr. Howard. They're what's left of my grandmother's Haviland. You probably don't know what Haviland is. If you want something to use for yourself, there's a box of fancy crockery I'll leave for you."

"Never mind," he replied, deliberately ascending his mountain height. "I wouldn't put you to the trouble. I'll just order a set of Spode or Wedgewood sent out from Charleston."

He showed her thus that he did know what Haviland was. He showed her that he could even buy Spode and Wedgewood by the set, for a price. His proud, bitter mind told him that it would make her, in her blue-blooded way, hate him the more.

He stumbled out, without speaking further, leaving her trembling with helpless anger. When he had gone she leaned her head on the tall old sideboard and burst into tears.

CHAPTER VIII.

On Monday morning Kate and a man hired for the occasion began to load the household belongings on the two-horse farm wagon.

It was surprising how much they had in all the years that the personal furniture of the house was being added to. Kate, with a pang, left to them the dilapidated furnishings of one bedroom—the room that had been Caroline's when the cooking equipment. She fell like the woman of her name, a false step in the way this philosopher to ask him the meaning of life, and the wise philosopher answered, "Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die."

Morgan had his own sly wisdom when it came to living. "Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we live." Maybe he had purposely refrained from talking of the things that were grieving her, Kate thought. She believes this, for she was in love.

By the end of the week the packing was accomplished. They had decided to move on Monday. Kate, on Sunday afternoon, went to Morgan's apartment.

It was while Kate was emptying her bureau drawers of the keepsakes that Cathy came panting up the hill to bring her. "Miss Kate, the old woman demanded belligerently, "do de dishes go wif de furniture?"

"Certainly not," Kate answered, "Dey don't go wif de furniture, either, Cathy. Miss Caroline and I will follow in your coupe with whatever's left, soon."

"Yes," Cathy said. "You got 'em all packed but dem fine ones in de built-in cupboard, an' Mister Howard said dat'll do when dem others is packed. Grah'dad didn't bring him in, did he?"

Cathy replied, "Major Sam didn't bring him. No'm! He brought him by himself. He's walkin' all round down stairs——"

Kate had gone to the window. She ran down the steps and went out to the garden gate. Her blazing eyes met the insolent look of a tall young man who slouched against the gate, his hands in his pockets. He was a rougher version of Cathy's father. Even in her anger she noticed that. "Are you Mr. Howard?" she asked.

"Yes," he answered, straightening a very little.

"Mr. Howard said crisply, "get out! Get out till Monday! Until you're told to come, I don't want to give you the keys, you can come in. Not before."

"Yes'm," he came with your grandfather's leave. I've been buying some implements from him. I asked him if I could come in and look over my place." The last two words were drawled unmercifully.

"Oh!" exclaimed Kate, weak with rage. They looked at one another, taking stock. He saw a girl who filled him with admiration and longing and hate. She saw a man who stirred her pro-

She banged it shut and shot the bolt, not glancing at the gracious sun-light above, not looking at the curving, gleaming banisters of the stairway as she ran down the hall.

They left by way of the side hall. Major Howe looked much older from without with his big brass key. He put the key on a long chain and several others and handed the ring to Zeke.

"Take this to Mr. Howard out at the barn," he told him. He spoke gently as he always had, marvelled at his self-control. Or was it resignation? If so, she did not share it. Just under a set of Spode or Wedgewood sent out from Charleston."

Heath, Harold; family with most grandchildren, Mrs. W. J. Archer; oldest grandfather present, Allan Bailey; youngest grandmother present, Mrs. C. Bailey, Detroit; oldest grandmother present, Mrs. S. J. Sager; youngest father present, Mr. Geo. A. Bailey; father and driving contest, Mrs. Carl Clancy; gentlemen's button contest, Percy Post.

The remainder of the afternoon was spent in visiting friends and in games. Several pieces of family groups were taken. During the afternoon Mr. C. C. Heath treated the crowd to ice cream and the sports of the day there was a candy scramble for the nearly everyone took part in.

There was on display a "Bailey Family Record" book prepared by Evelyn Bailey which showed record of all the deaths, marriages, births since reunion was first started in 1928, also showing several snap shots which had been taken at previous picnics and several clippings of family interest. This proved very very interesting to one and all.

During the day the secretary received telephone calls from a number of guests of two families who were unable to attend.

Girl's Personality Reflected by Lips

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE LOOK at a woman's mouth and you know the kind of a person she is. Miss Prudy keeps her lipstick tightly closed. Her mouth is a cat gist has here close to her teeth and her upper lip curls in her eyes. The selfish girl has soft, relaxed lips. The girl with the twinkle in her eye, the love of fun, is uplifted. You like her. You know she's worth while. She is the kind to talk to and always good company.

More than a lipstick is required for the pretty pouters. They should be anointed at night with an odorless cream made for the purpose. It is very necessary to keep the skin surface smooth. When polishing the lips, rub the finger lightly around the mouth a bit of massage. Place the first finger in the centre of the upper lip, thumb and second finger at either end. Keep the first finger centered with the color finger and thumb to bring the lip into a "cupid's bow."

Massage the lower lip, by placing the first finger in the centre beneath it, drawing it up in a smoothing motion.

We hear about dimpled elbows but what about the knees? Knees are nothing to sing songs about. They are out of sight, so they are out of mind.

During the bath scour the elbows with a rough towel. The skin is coarse there. Then rub them with lemon juice, oil, salt in bevaled talcum powder to form a paste and go to bed.

Eyelashes can be improved by applying a mixture of Put it on at night, touching the roots of the little fringes with the tip of it.

Some girls use mineral oil on the eyelids as well. The shining surface brings out the sparkle of the eyes.

Cold sores usually appear when the digestive machine is upset. It's a scar, best not to tamper with them. Spirits of camphor has been recommended in the past. It is a substance that acts as an irritant. When this happens, the lip swells, and the glands at the side of the neck are affected.

It is advisable to keep fingers away from pimples so that the infection isn't spread. Wash the hand, not play and because quite cross when fingers have been fought with. Barbara shunned all talk about early life as she avoided castor oil.

Then once on a journey, Barbara picked up a magazine. When she next seat by a man. Barbara turned over the pages, intrigued by the pictures. Then she read a story in the middle, one near the end, and finally she settled in her chair and began at the beginning. In this popular magazine the reading was very mixed in quality—a few stories had real literary merit, a few were trite, and a number of others were just good tales. But Barbara enjoyed them all.

Aunt Selves It

At the station Barbara bought three more magazines and took them up to her room to read at night when she got back to Bayfield. There, later, Mother found them and told Father, who was appropriately shocked.

But Aunt Mamie said: "Leave her alone. Don't you dare say a word to her!"

Taking the magazines, she picked out a few of the really good writers who had some fine novels to her credit. Then she went and bought and, explaining the connection, sent them to Barbara. Barbara read them all and asked for more.

GOOD MANNERS

Waiting Table

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me the correct method of waiting on the table?

Do you serve from the right or left?

From what side are the dishes removed?

2. What should be removed from the table after each course?

1. It is the usual custom for the waiter to serve from the left of the guest.

The plates are removed from the right. Beverages are served at the right and the dishes are on the right of the plate.

2. After each course, the waitress should remove all dishes that have to do with the service of that course. If a salad plate is used, it is allowed to remain on the table with the salad fork until the next course. The plates for the first course, the course to the roast, are placed on this service plate — the plate that is used only for food — the fish or entree plate. Then the salad plate is placed on the table with the fork.

Before any course is placed, the silver not used in the preceding course is removed. For instance, suppose that, for the dessert course, you have placed both knife and fork, and suppose that the guest has only a fork—then the knife that has been placed is removed before the next course is passed.

After the salad course, the table is crumbed, and made ready for the dessert course. That is, the salts and peppers are removed, the bread and butter spreaders are removed, and all remaining place-silver is taken off.

Usually the dessert service consists of the dessert plate, with the finger bowl on it, and on the right of the finger bowl the dessert spoon and on the left the dessert fork. The guest removes the finger bowl (with the doily, if one is placed under the finger bowl) to the left of the plate, and a bit up from the plate. He also places the spoon at the right of the plate, and the fork on the left of the plate. Then the plate is ready for the dessert.

If fruit is to be served after the dessert course, the dessert plate is brought in without the fingerbowl —just the dessert plate with the plain silver service of the dessert spoon and the dessert fork.

For the fruit course, the service is the fruit plate (of the size of the dessert plate) with the finger bowl on it, and on the right of the fruit knife and on the left the fruit fork. The guest lifts the finger bowl to the table on the left of the plate—place for the fruit knife on the right and the fruit fork on the left. And then the plate is ready for the passing of the fruit.

The coffee is served after this, at the right of the plate, or by the waitress, in the living-room, the coffee being already poured out in the cups, which are on a tray with the sugar bowl and the cream pitcher. Or, just as correctly for an informal party, the hostess may have the coffee tray placed before her on a coffee table or any other low convenient table, and she herself may serve the coffee. She asks each guest how he or she prefereces as to "how many lumps" and as to "whether or not cream."

Teach Child To Enjoy Books

Associating Reading With Pleasure Best Way to Train Him

By LISA GRENELLE

When school closed for the summer, Barbara threw all her books on the floor at the end of the closet—and that was that! On principle, Barbara refused to open a book for the rest of the summer. Those endless rainy days when there wasn't much else to do.

Father talked to her about the good to be derived from books. Mother talked to her on the subject, too.

Father suggested Thackeray. Barbara "loathed" Thackeray. Thackeray was out. Mother suggested school reading list.

Mother suggested Dickens. Barbara couldn't abide the thought of Dickens. Miss Thayer read Dickens aloud to the class in the upper school in the last period on Fridays, as a treat, and Barbara thought not a treat requested by the girls.

Miss Thayer liked Dickens. She read him with an opportunity to express her sentimental nature. Miss Thayer interpreted Dickens according to her own ideas. And the girls were expected to listen to her attention. So Barbara didn't relish the classics. They had been dished out for her—hands into a dry, unreal chore.

Had Dislike Early

And the very fact that Barbara came from a literary family only strengthened rather than weakened her dislike for books. When she was but little, books were her rivals. Father was always engrossed in a book when he was home. He would not play and became quite cross when fingers were fought with. Barbara, fearless, keen and imaginative, Barbara shunned all talk about

Fashion Flashes

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

TWINS in print make the nicest summer costumes. Here in this pleasant floral design is a suit with the full-length coat and a light-weight dress of chiffon the same design in crepe makes the skirt and wraparound sash.

SWEET SIMPLE AND SMART is an opening frock of white linen. The bodice is cut low in front and back and the halter bodice are of white satin with white checked linen. There is a matching checked bolero.

EASY TO RECOGNIZE are Schiaparelli fashions. Typical is the brilliant Italian designer is an evening frock in black lace over short-skirted silhouette. The fabric is white silk crepe, printed like music with the ribbon for the bars and roses for the notes.

FRESH AND YOUNG is a summer frock in white pique with a trimming of hydrangea in green and set off by wine-colored satin ribbon.

ALL THE CARE and fine tailoring in the world are lavished on some of the best sports coats we've found town this summer. A smart navy with great skirt and sleeve braided eggee buttons tightly over a frothy blouse of rose-colored organza with a huge butterfly bow.

WHEN IN DOUBT as to what to wear bank on black with white. Here's a charming frock of rayon of ivory silk crepe with a pencil stripe in black. Long with short sleeves and a subtly draped bodice, it has a self-girdle and is at its best when accompanied by a big black hat.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

We have heard time and again about "problem" children. Today based on a child's behavior, we have no means uncommon, of the child with a "problem" parent. Consider, for example, the plight of this unhappy girl.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Twice have my mother's extravagance kept me from marrying men who were in every way desirable, and whom I loved truly. Yet—are my final court of appeal. Role shall I solve this problem!

"I have used to be very well-to-do. Father was a lawyer with a good practice, but the horrors of the depression took a big bite and made him an easy victim of the "big-line" type of salesman.

"He had stocked stenography and typing, and got a job at a salary of $150 a month. We could live happily on that if it were not that mother cannot fit herself to our reduced circumstances.

"She has a course in physical training to reduce, which I want all necessary, and I had to foot the bill—for $75. The next time she "plunged" (this time for earrings), she borrowed from my fiance. "I'm borrowing" she repeated three times before he told me, and hinted like "to be free."

"I paid the bill, and practically the same thing happened the next time I became engaged. I paid that bill, too. I think my second fiance, tired of visions of a borrowing mother-in-law, was relieved when I gave him a chance to break with me, which he did. Now mother has borrowing power over my girl friends and chance callers; and I'm at the end of my rope.

"I have been crowded by my sisters and brothers (who are married and decline to have mother

MARKET COMMENT

Yesterday's market was featured by the comparative activity in two old-time market leaders, Brazilian and Montreal Power. Both issues have always been favoured by investors and may fully be expected to share in any resumption of the bull trend marketwise.

Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines recently declared its 286th regular dividend of 1% and its thirty-seventh extra dividend of 1% a share, payable on August 16th to shareholders of record on July 28th. This makes the fourth extra dividend of 1%, or 4 cents a share, declared this year. To date dividend calls for distribution of $482,700 and when paid it will bring total disbursements for the year to $1,263,000 and the total since dividends began in 1913 to $45,782,400. Hollinger is the second largest dividend payer in the American continent, Homestake, which has paid dividends since 1879, being first, and Lake Shore, third.

Sladacona Kenyn Output $282,157

With production of the No. 18-gold brick on July 16, of unstated but value of $22,713, Stadacona Rouyn Gold Mines' output for the year to put to $282,157 since the first pour-ing took place on Dec. 4, 1936. The last brick was figured at 800 fine.

The recovery was the result of approximately 10,000 tons of ore taking averag daily mill run 1,000 tons. The ore is represented by the last brick is approximately $6. As a matter of fact, the ore has been coming in at time around 340 tons daily, but consideration is being given to put through, with all material from development work, in addition to underwriting underground justify, it, the mill will be kept at current duty, otherwise it will be stepped back as conditions warrant.

Promising Features in Canadian Investment Market

Mid-summer finds Canadian business at the crossroads in the number and variety of conditions side by side with discouraging aspects, and the investment market viewed from the long range, outweighing the discouragements. The small crop indicated in the West stands at the top of those factors regarded as most important to the economic welfare of the Dominion. If 75-per-cent of the 1937 crop of No. 1 per bushel of wheat will offset somewhat the disappointing yield.

Closely ailing with the wheat situation is freight tonnage of the railways. While carloadings have shown substantial betterment during the current year, the increase which has reflected itself in higher gross earnings, in many cases, has fell in some quarters that an immoderately low wheat yield will be detrimental to the general trade movements during the latter part of this year. This is problematical, but at the same time, it should be remembered that movement of base metals, heavy manufactured goods, pulp and paper products and other merchandise of the type which rail products will continue satisfactory. Moreover, gross earnings are augmented by a heavy influx of tourists, is a real boon to the rails.

Tourist traffic is the most profitable "industries" in the Dominion, is that year expenditures from all former records for value to the country. Not only does it bring retail trade in many centres, to the provincial governments in indirect taxation in the form of gasoline, sample, and special fish and game licenses, etc., is considerable.

Foreign trade based on many of the above factors is continuing to make very satisfactory progress and excise returns being decidedly higher during the recent year surpalse the last wave of prosperity began to wane.

Flish Service

In view of the extensive gains in security prices over the past twelve months, the investor will particularly should be expected at this point. Moreover, due to the fact that the pressure of seasonal conditions is now reducing the large progressive business programs may support a higher market. However, going to the end, as the case for profit is already extremely small. The prices for goods will also rise. The chief sufferer in the family of small means to whom every cent that goes into the family budget for food is important. Competitors of the food industry, free from such discriminatory taxes, will be the chief ones to benefit.

The interests of the general public, as against the interests of a small minority, being adversely affected by this discriminatory taxation, we have started a series of institutional advertisements, the first of which is now appearing in over seventy newspapers in the Province of Quebec. We hope that these advertisements, by accurately and fairly setting forth all phases of the problem, will clarify the issue in the minds of the public.

Your company's financial condition remains excellent. Working capital is ample. Cash and call loans show an increase over the year end figure.

Toronto, July 28—(CP)—Prices held steady on a fairly active stock market here today. There was little change on the cattle market, but the calf market was active and lambs were strong. No prices were established on hogs but indications were steady to firm, sheep held steady. Previous prices on off-track hogs was $10.30. Quotations follow:

A firm calf market was clearer, offering $8.50 to $9, for choice veal-ers, with others ranging downward to $5. Grass calves sold at $3 to $4.50.

Lambs were strong at $10.50 for good ewes and wethers, with other grades selling at $8.50 to $9.50. Sheep were steady at $1.50 to $4.

Hogs were dull, fed and watered, made $10.50 with $1 per hog premium on sales of cars of 100 hogs or more, off grades. Sows brought from $7 to $8.

Scarcity of cattle and calves prevented a market.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal July 28—Local egg prices continued higher yesterday, with receipts light and insufficient to take care of the demand. The market was steady to easier, while cheese, butter and poultry showed little change. Receipts were 974 cases of eggs, 507 boxes of butter and 1,000 pounds of cheese during trade arrivals.

Sales at the Canadian Commodity Exchange were 600 boxes of Quebec fresh eggs, 1,000 pounds of No. 1 being three lots of 200 boxes each, with the market quoted at 24½ to 25c a dozen.

The open market was generally held at 25c.

Six Months' Report Of Dominion Stores

The semi-annual report of the Dominion Stores Limited just issued by the president, Garfield Weston, and general manager to the shareholders states:

"Net profit after providing for depreciation and Federal and Provincial income for the first six periods (36 weeks ended June 12th) of 1937 amounted to $1,000,000 as compares with a loss of $26,992.21 for the corresponding period of 1936.

"Sales for this period show an increase of $174,094.22 or 10.7 per cent. The average number of stores operated was 479 compared with 493 in 1936. Many of the 14 stores closed in the Island of Montreal district, but that less territory could be well served with our remaining 32 stores. A few locations have been transferred and a few new stores opened.

"No one can foretell questions today that companies such as ours have performed a real service in helping to perform, a valuable service for the public, and more particularly the working classes, in reducing the retail cost of good food. If discriminatory taxes are to be imposed on the chain stores, obviously costs are going to be raised, as the margin of profit is already extremely small. The prices for goods will also rise. The chief sufferer in the family of small means to whom every cent that goes into the family budget for food is important. Competitors of the food industry, free from such discriminatory taxes, will be the chief ones to benefit.

"The interests of the general public, as against the interests of a small minority, being adversely affected by this discriminatory taxation, we have started a series of institutional advertisements, the first of which is now appearing in over seventy newspapers in the Province of Quebec. We hope that these advertisements, by accurately and fairly setting forth all phases of the problem, will clarify the issue in the minds of the public.

TRIBUTE PAID TO COL. ADAMS

Full Military Honors Given Former O. C. of Regiment

With full military honors and an impressive ceremony at all high military officials of the district in attendance, Col. C. A. Adams, V.D., former officer commanding the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, and County Treasurer of Prince Edward was laid to rest in Glenwood cemetery, Picton yesterday afternoon.

Preceding the body lay in state in the Church of St. Mary Magdalene where many friends passing the flower-banked bier, upon which lay the sword and hat of the dead officer.

At 2.30 p.m., the church was filled to capacity for the service which was conducted by Rural Dean Cecil Winger, assisted by Rev. Capt. F. Arthur Smith and Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne.

Rev. Winter's text was from 1st. Timothy 6:15 "Fight the Good Fight of Faith." He said that the Christian life was a battle in which those who fought were crowned, after fighting a good fight under a good leader. The word of God had been given to them as the Anglican's greatness, for the Christian life distinguishes ignorance, guilt and misery.

Finally the audience had gathered to join in the last sad rites for a beloved soldier and friend.

Story - Book Ending Occurs In Four of Eight Games Played In Major Leagues on Tuesday

Medwick's Homer in The Ninth Defeats Giants by 9-8

ROLFE BLASTS ONE

Four Ply Swat in 11th Gives Yankees Win Over Tigers

By BILL BONI
Associated Press Sports Writer

Outside of a flat-swinging baseball writer for all in which he can take part in casting a pop bottle at Ump's nothing the baseball fan loves more than the "miracle" finish.

The home run, that soothes over a distant fence with the score tied and two out in the last frame of the ninth, or the relief pitcher, who strolls in to fan the heavy hitter with the game on—have a kind of story-book ending that keeps conversation alive.

There was enough fruit for conversation tied up in yesterday's big league baseball show for customers to bore half the country's wives to distraction. Four of the eight games weren't decided until the last half of the final inning.

Most spectacular of the blows struck in winning causes were those delivered by Joe Medwick of the Cardinals, Robert (Red) Rolfe of the Yankees and Leslie Scarsella of the Reds.

Ducky-Wucky Blasts One

Medwick, who has been leading the National League batting parade for so long it's a habit, waited for the tricky moment to connect for his smack ripe 31st homer of the year. The Giants had let the score start at 8-8 after the Gas House Gang's eight-run blast knocked Carl Hubbell from his props and third Giant pitcher Al Smith had retired the first two batters to face him in the ninth. Then up came Ducky-Wucky and plastered one against the left field bleacher rail to win the ball game 9-8 and drop the Giants three games behind the Cubs, who won a 5-3 decision over the Dodgers.

Scarsella's four-master, which scored Val Goodman ahead of him, saved the day and his 19th victory for Lefty Lee Grissom, the Reds' rookie who had given up only one hit for eight innings, after he had slipped for three and two runs in the ninth. Harry Craft's double made the final score 5-3 for Cincinnati.

Yanks Stretch Lead

Rolfe, delayed his K. O. punch until the 11th. The Tigers, having put over a run on Walt Suding in the first half of that frame, were leading 6-4. But Rolfe's circuit clout with Frank Crosetti scoring ahead of him, made it 6-6 in favor of the Yanks and stretched their American League lead to six games.

Less dramatic, but effective, were Billy Myers' ninth-inning single, that drove in the run that gave Washington a 6-5 victory over the White Sox, and Philadelphia's Bill Werber's eighth-inning double that brought in two runs and halted the Braves.

In the other games, Red Lucas planted a six-hitter on the Phillies to give Pittsburgh a 4-1 triumph, and the Brooklyn 15-hit attack topped Ted Sox, 8-6, and gave manager Jim Bottomley his first triumph on the road.

COBOURG SQUAD FORCED TO DROP OUT OF LEAGUE

Lack of Players And Attendance Is Reason Given

NOT GIVEN RELEASE

Joe Gould Not Eligible to Play With Norwood is Ruling

Unable to carry on through lack of players and attendance, the Cobourg entry in the Central Ontario Lacrosse League notified the president on Tuesday that they were forced to drop out of the league. The Cobourg team had four more games to play and all of them away from home, so their default will count as a win for each of the other four teams in the league and makes the standing at this writing (Tuesday) and before the Rovers met Norwood in Trenton, as follows:

	W	L	TP
Peterboro	10	0	8
Oshawa	8	2	6
Belleville-Trenton	6	3	5
Norwood	4	6	4
Cobourg	0	8	0

Cobourg were scheduled to play in Oshawa on Monday night but were unable to get a team together so Gene Dopp of the O.A.L.A. was notified not to send a referee.

The following are the games left in the schedule to play: July 28, Rovers at Belleville-Trenton; July 30, Oshawa at Peterboro; August 2, Belleville at Oshawa, Norwood at Peterboro; August 6, Oshawa at Belleville; August 9, Peterboro at Oshawa; August 11, Belleville-Trenton at Norwood, Belleville - Trenton at Peterboro; August 13, Peterboro at Norwood; August 20, Peterboro at Belleville.

On Friday night of last week Joe Gould, formerly of the Belleville-Trenton Rovers, played for Norwood against Oshawa in the northern village. The Norwood team informed Rovers that the president of the league, who is managing the Norwood, had given Gould his release. This was not so in any sense of the word as Gould had never approached us for any such purpose and we couldn't give him his release if we wanted to. The game was played under protest, but as Oshawa won that game, the protest will not be pressed.

However, the matter was brought to the attention of Gene Dopp, referee-in-chief of the O.A.L.A. by which this Central Ontario League is affiliated, and Mr. Dopp has notified us that Gould cannot play with Norwood. The lacrosse association is affiliated and Joe Gould "Gould played more than two games with Belleville, then he cannot play anywhere else, and even if he never played for them he still cannot play for Norwood without a release from the club he was first playing for."

While our sympathies in lacrosse matters in this league will always be with Norwood—and Joe Gould—in this matter we must, when all other places hereabouts failed, back the decision of the referee and say to any player in this league else there would be all sorts of trouble. Joe Gould is a fine lacrosse player, an invaluable player to the Rovers team, and he will find the welcome mat burning in the window for his return.

The Rovers are scheduled to play two games next week with Oshawa —in the meter city on Monday night and in the Trenton arena on Tuesday night. Arrangements have been made by the Oshawa manager that these games be laid over until next week when there will be no play-off chances of the two teams. However, this will have to be threshed out this week-end.

Harry M. Moore,
President C.O.L.A.

ASH OF BUFFALO HURLS NO-HITTER AGAINST CHIEFS

Performance Somewhat Marred by Game Being Seven Innings

TORONTO SPLIT

Berly Wins by Shutout And Leafs Lose Second in Eleventh

(By the Associated Press)

A little more of this no-hit pitching in the International League and batters can spend their time in duguts reading the backs of playing cards.

Ken Ash, veteran Buffalo right hander, pitched the second no-hit, no-run performance in three days and the third of the league season last night, when he beat Syracuse Chiefs 4 to 0 in the first game of a double bill. Lloyd (Whitey) Moore of Syracuse, tossed a no-hitter Sunday, defeating Montreal, pitched another earlier in the season.

Ash's performance was somewhat marred because the game went only seven innings.

Bill Harris followed Ash's game with a four-hitter and handed the Chiefs their second shutout of the evening, 7-0. Johnny Vandermeer, Buffalo's fireballing southpaw, distributed heavily to the Bisons' scoring.

Hildit, a newcomer to the International League, for the past two days, checked the Montreal server the Giants and Royals split a double bill, Giants won the opener, 5-4, and Royals took the night cap 5-0. Phil Weintraub and Jack Redmond hit homers for the Giants in the opener and Gus Dugas got his 11th in the same game.

Paul Dunlap, Montreal centre-fielder suffered a concussion of the brain when he was felled by one of pitcher John Mekeil's pitches in the first inning.

Newark Bears blasted out their 72nd victory of the season with a 10-4 win over Rochester and Toronto Maple Leafs split a double header with Baltimore Orioles, winning the opener, 3-0, behind John Berly and losing the second game in the 11th inning, 6-5.

Ottawa, July 28 (CP)—Augmented by 31 first round byes into second round byes, 64 players started out today at match play in the second round of the Canadian amateur golf championship.

Only the fittest could still be in the running by nightfall, for another big blow struck at the survivors finished the morning tour. Two more rounds Thursday will bring the field down to the four semi-finalists, who will play 36 holes to determine the two left for Saturday's final, another 36-hole affair.

Freddie Haas, jr., of New Orleans, 1936 champion, drew a bye in beginning his 18 holes of play and was drawn today against Russ Case of Vancouver, who moved along by defeating J. J. Wood of Hamilton, 9 and 8, record score of the day.

Scattered upsets marked the competition, although Thumbie Lawson of Victoria disappeared from the tournament when Frank Sherman, jr., 20-year-old Hamilton youngster, won out on the 18th.

Frank Corrigan of Ottawa Chanticleer took a surprise defeat at the hands of Bert Bamble, Ottawa Rivermead, 2 and 1, and Frank Palmer of Winnipeg, member of Manitoba & Williams Golf Club, was eliminated by Jim McLaughlin of the Rome Club, 2 and 1.

Sandy Somerville of London, who advanced with a 4 and 3 win over Bobby Runge, Ottawa Hunt, was drawn against J. P. Cowie, of Montreal.

Between the Lines

After a decade of steady trying the United States trunk players finally regained the Davis Cup yesterday. Don Budge scored-lopped Yankee, who has been undefeated on the courts this year, triumphed over Bunny Austin of England to give the Americans their first Davis Cup championship since 1927. Frankie Parker, United States, clinched the cup with three straight victories over Charles Hare, England, however, it marked the eleventh time the United States has won the Davis Cup since its inception in 1900. Budge is considered just about tops insofar as the amateur ranks are concerned today. His uphill fight has been short, something like four years of Davis Cup play.

The United States may have lifted the Davis Cup, but British sailing enthusiasts are more enthusiastic than ever regarding the possible winning of the America's Cup by T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavour II. Let Alone the fact that back in the early 20's when the Yankees sailed off the American Cup race owing to the fact the blow was "too heavy" for their defender against the late Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock 3rd. have the hopes of the English sailing fraternity been so high as they are today. The great race between Col. G. M. Sopwith's Endeavour 2nd and Harold S. "Mike" Vanderbilt's Ranger is scheduled to commence off Newport, R.I., on Saturday. It is estimated that this endeavours to lift the America's Cup has cost Mr. Sopwith a mere $2,000,000.00 in the sale for a record old mug. The course is over 30 miles round and the winner must win four out of a possible seven days of racing. This time Mr. Sopwith is not making the same mistake he did in 1933, when he employed an amateur crew and lost a golden opportunity to lift the America's Cup after winning two out of the first three races. The Endeavour is manned by a professional sailing crew this trip. So watch out guys and gals.

Due to indifferent patronage the Cobourg "Combines" lacrosse club has tossed in the sponge and gave given up the ghost in the Central Ontario Lacrosse League and of their remaining games have been ordered to be rewarded to their scheduled opponents as wins. This decision leaves the Belleville-Trenton Rovers two full games behind the Oshawa 222's. The Rovers have five games remaining to play including two with Oshawa and the principal battle now is for second place, with Peterboro being conceded the league leadership at the clubs approach the playdowns. Incidentally the O.A.L.A. has suspended Joe Gould for playing with Norwood this-after noon after signing a Rover contract and playing more than two games with the latter club. Gould receives no release from President Harry Moore and should know better than to try and pull a stunt like that.

"Honey" Tompkins, star right winger of the champion Belleville Rodmen, (Peterboro softball intermediate word champion) was in Oshawa yesterday conferring with "Doc" Rowden, well known Oshawa athlete and recently appointed Motor City hockey coach, relative to the possibilities of locating in the Motor City. Tompkins was offered a job with a Peterboro industrial concern but refused to be investigated the work he was to receive, if it were revealed he would be working on piece work with no guarantee as to the length of the employment or assurance of wages. Naturally Tompkins is endeavouring to better himself and obtain a position where he will be protected after his hockey playing days are over. "Honey" will be back in time for tonight's game at Belleville lacrosse game at the Trenton Arena, however, considering the Rovers are looking for sweet revenge over the Terriers tonight.

The Belleville Kiwanis Juniors, having won their last two starts, hope to clinch a play-off position in the South Hastings League with a victory over the Shannonville "Hawks" this evening at the Fair Ground. Manager Bill Cook worked out his entire pitching staff at practice on Monday evening and has Leroy Weeks and Joe Kelleher ready for tonight's game at Belleville lacrosse game at the Trenton Arena, however, considering the Rovers are looking for sweet revenge over the Terriers tonight.

It will certainly be a pity if baseball is to be cut out in this city this fall. A new type of sport was developed in football, that allows a person to get out in the open in all kinds of weather and enjoy a real good workout. The executive are to be commended for the way they have carried the financial load for the past season and everything can be arranged to allow Rovers two full games in the O.R.F.U. Another meeting will be held on Thursday night and it is hoped there will be a number of professional men, who played the game in their college days to appear at the meeting and give the club advice and counsel. A swell team could be put together with the Belleville Rovers in the O.R.F.U. and probably an intermediate title would be brought to this city. There is no doubt football will pay its way in this city if properly handled by a strong executive. No doubt Dr. H. E. Kennedy could be induced to come out of retirement to coach the team and with Billie Hughes as trainer, what a swell combination that would be. All are cordially invited to attend the meeting at the Y.M.C.A. tomorrow night.

I am sure I would have won a mint. But it is too late now because it will be a long time before again have fifty grand to spare again. And the mistake is disappointing indeed, because I am very anxious that I should try the system out. I am, in fact, that desirous of the sweet comeback when I first mentioned the proposal to the system I have played has cost me all my bank and my shirt, I say: "But I have actually at last," I say to her, "figured out a betting system which will win us several barrels of cherries positively!"

"That is wonderful, darling," she replies. "And I am sure it will work out perfect this time because you are such a terrifically smart man."

Well, naturally I am glad that after nearly years at my stable-mate, she still appreciates my points. And I tell her so with words and gestures.

"And now," I continue, "as we have saved up fifty thousand dollars which we have practically no use for, I am going to put it on this system and we will start using it as soon as possible."

Therefore, I set to work at once putting the final touches on my mathematical progression which will win us a million at least with ease a child. And I tell the wife not to let no one disturb me unless it is very important. But she says this morning while I am wetting my hair plenty with a pad and pencil, and the sisters in Hank Simmins, the feed guy, and gives me the high sign that she could not get rid of him.

Why it is I do not know, but it always happens that when you have some dough all called away everybody you know is running into money trouble. And that is what is the matter with Hank. He says that while I have not paid my two bill for the stake for four months he knows that my credit is perfectly good. But he is in a hole then on account of one thing and another and therefore he would appreciate it if I would oblige him by giving him cash in hand. At $500 per week the load is almost six thousand bucks, which at this time I need in order to play my system. But after all, Hank has been very kind to let the bill run

WOMAN, TWO MEN DIE IN MONTREAL FIRE

Blaze Traps 3 Lodgers, Inmate Rescues Woman, Others Escape to Safety

Firemen Discover Bodies, One of Which Is Not Identified

HEATER IS BLAMED

Suffocation And Burns Given as Cause of Deaths

Montreal, July 29 (CP)—A woman and two men, one still unidentified, lost their lives in flames which swept a rooming house early today in the centre of the city on the corner of Clark and Vercheres street.

Firemen searched the ashes of Arthur Crouk, 42, Eva Clark, 30 and a man found in the woman's room, for identification and burns from the fire which swept the top floor of the three-storey stone and wood house.

Cecilia Boisvert of Ste. Therese, Que., holidaying in the city, was taken to hospital suffering from serious burns to her face, head and shoulders and numerous head wounds caused by breaking glass.

Heater Is Blamed

First warning of the fire, thought to have started from a heater in the hallway on the third storey, came from a woman living in a flat adjoining the rooming house.

Firemen arrived at the same time as Nelson Vezina, 27, a lodger in the rooming house, led Miss Boisvert, to safety. Vezina, trapped in his own room by smoke and flames, climbed through a window and edged his way along a narrow terrace to reach Miss Boisvert's room. Vezina, clad only in underwear, dressed the young woman to a small gallery, from where they were rescued by firemen who wrapped Miss Boisvert in a cloak.

There were about 15 persons in the house when the fire started, with most of them, including those on the second floor, making their way to safety. The flames had grown to such proportions, however, it was impossible to reach those on the top floor.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Thunderstorm frequency

There are six areas in the world where thunderstorms occur on over one-quarter of the days of the year. They are Southern Mexico, 100 days; Panama, 135 days; Central Brazil, 160 days; Central Africa, 150 days; Madagascar, 85 days; and Java, 95 days. The last is the most thundery region of the earth. For the earth as a whole there are only on the average 36 days a year with thunder.

In general thunderstorm frequency is greatest in the equatorial regions, less in temperate and less going north or south.

In the Antarctic they are unknown, but in the Arctic they occur about once in ten years. Area for area they are much less over the oceans than over the land.

Hockey Player Provides Upset In Golf Tourney

Ottawa Hunt Club, Ottawa, July 29—(CP)— Pete Kelly, red-headed golfer from Charlottetown, pulled the big upset of the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship today, when he eliminated Bobby Reith, of Winnipeg, 4 and 3.

Kelly's victory was against a player favored to go through to the final for the title defended by Freddie Haas of New Orleans.

Reith, finalist last year against Haas, went out in the fourth round when Kelly put on a workmanlike 68 in the first nine holes to earn a two-up margin at the turn. At that point, he was two under par with 35, while Reith had 36 for a medal score.

Denis Morse of Chatham, Ont. knocked out Dave Arnott of Winnipeg, 3 and 2. Arnott held a two-up advantage leaving the eight, but Morse put on a great show to win six holes in a row. They halved the short 12th and the match ended when both took par at the 18th.

Six Pars After Turn

Kelly who plays hockey with Detroit Red Wings in the National Hockey League, ended his match with Reith with a string of six pars after the turn. He was dormie on the 11th and 12th where his tee shots faltered. Freddie Haas of New Orleans, defending champion, advanced to the fifth round with a 4 and 3 win over J. Watson Tuite of Royal Montreal.

Gandy Greenfield came safely through the fourth round against Chuck Unknown, Aurora. Alex Gerard, Jr., of Southampton, N.Y. Sandy won 2 and 1.

Jimmy Todd of Victoria, kept the West in the chase with a one-up victory over Jack Lowe. Fred Hobliest of Toronto Lambton, 4 and 3.

CYRUS ASHTON CASE ENLARGED

Crown Evidence in Manslaughter Hearing Is Not Completed

Port Hope, Ont., July 29 (CP)—Charged with manslaughter and theft of a car in connection with the deaths of Miss Edgar Weir, of Detroit and Kathleen Freer of Toronto, who died of injuries here last Thursday as the result of injuries when struck by a car, Cyrus Ashton was taken before magistrate here today. After about half the evidence of the Crown was taken the case was adjourned until next Thursday.

Upon the recommendation of Col. F. D. Boggs, Crown Attorney, an application for bail was denied until after all the evidence has been taken.

Ashton was not asked to elect or make any plea.

Beaudry Balmforth was unable to explain a statement made at the inquest last week that he arrived at the scene of the accident Ashton was lying on the ground alongside of the car.

William Black said he saw Ashton run away from the car and did not see him again until he was found. Other parties who arrived at the scene of the accident Ashton was lying on the ground beside the vehicle.

JAPANESE BOMB CITY OF TIENTSIN IN RETALIATION

Chinese Almost Drive Out Enemy Troops in North China

BUILDINGS AFLAME

Japan Shows No Regard For Foreign Residents or Buildings

Tientsin, July 29 (AP)—Japanese warplanes bombed Tientsin today, endangering the lives of thousands of foreigners, in an effort to rout a Chinese attack that threatened to drive the Japanese army from the North China stronghold.

The principal battle-fronts of the gateway city to North China, including famous Nankai University, the central railway station and the militia headquarters, were in flames.

The Chinkiang International bridge connecting the foreign concessions and the Chinese city was ablaze.

Chinese and Japanese troops fought hand-to-hand in the streets with their entrenching tools in less than 100 feet apart.

The Japanese planes struck simultaneously at Japanese troops entrenched in the city and Chinese in the major drive to force the Japanese army out of North China.

Drove Japanese Back

The battle which centred on Tientsin was being fought from Tangku, Tientsin's port 70 miles to the east, to Fengtaiwan Japanese field headquarters 10 miles to the south. Chinese drove the Japanese from the three key railway stations and overran the Japanese concession.

At mid-afternoon Japanese warplanes, flying low, bombed Chinese positions throughout the city withdrawal began to be spread to the foreign areas and foreigners resident there.

"The seriousness of the situation," the Japanese command admitted, "has compelled the military forces to attack the Chinese positions directly, although we would rather not expose the city's foreign residents to peril."

The Japanese declaration of policy said they were "regretfully forced by the Chinese concentrations and actions to resort to this most drastic measure."

The declaration also said the Chinese concentrations were a flagrant violation not only of the Boxer Protocol of 1901 and other agreements granting extraterritorial rights to Japan and other powers.

Station Burned

The first bombs on the Japanese air raiders in the city was the automobile garage and the Asiatic Petroleum Company's oil tank at the Hukden railroad. The eastern railway station was enveloped in flames and only a few moments later Tientsin's city hall was set afire.

The air attack was the signal for Japanese ground forces to move against the Chinese concentrations at barricades in widely separated sections of the city.

Known foreign casualties in the street fighting were one French colonial soldier and one Italian soldier killed and a Chinese member of the British Consulatuary wounded.

A shell fell into the British Municipal workshop enclosure, next to the barracks of the Sikh Punjabis and Fusiliers, but failed to explode.

Chinese Claim Victory

Chinese claimed the Japanese were being thrown back at numerous points within the city and on the skirts of the city. Twenty miles to the east at the Twin Fort cities of Taku and Tanghu Japanese were

HEART BEAT STEADILY

London, July 29 (CP)—A month after surgeons had twice removed his heart to close two stab wounds, Harold Aldridge, 23-year-old munition worker was back at his job filing shells.

The story is told in the Medical Journal The Lancet, by Dr. William Gissane and Dr. Bodo Schulenberg, surgeons who performed the operation.

The lung covering was opened and a wound found in the envelope which encloses the heart. This envelope was opened but nothing could be seen of the heart.

Gissane inserted his hand inside the envelope and gently levered out the heart, which beat steadily. A wound three-quarters of an inch long and another half an inch within the first surgeon still held the pulsing heart in his hands. The heart was then replaced.

To their dismay the heart envelope again filled with blood as one surgeon again put his left hand inside the heart envelope and traced a second stab wound on which his finger and the operation was repeated. In the envelope one cut of 2½ and was walked 40 yards. In 28 days he was discharged.

Land Mine is Blamed For Belfast Explosion

British Press Indignant at Political Terrorism in Ireland Coinciding With Visit

London, July 29 —(CP)—Indignation was expressed in the press today at the political terrorism in Ireland that coincided with the visit of the King and Queen of Belgium yesterday.

The Daily Mirror asked "why it was thought necessary for the King and Queen to go to Belfast?"

Belfast police carried on an extensive inquiry into the explosion of a land mine which exploded near the route of the royal procession but had made no arrests.

Charge Explosion Deliberate

Under the headline "Behind the explosion, at a warehouse, was deliberately primed and erected.

It was thought the terrorists had failed to damage the city's main power and light plant, which was nearby.

Hundreds of Londoners gathered near Euston station in the early morning to give Their Majesties a warm welcome on their return.

Crowds of city-bound workers cheered the King and Queen when their special train pulled in. The platform was flooded with flag and evergreen. Their Majesties chatted briefly with railway officials before driving away.

Belfast authorities waited last night until the King and Queen were safely aboard the royal yacht and homeward bound before they announced:

Fuse is Found

"There was found in the hole caused by the explosion what looks like a bag of rags and which also contained some explosives. Experts in the bag had been placed against a stone and to the explosives was attached a considerable length of fuse—possibly a time fuse. The fuse was found and is in the possession of the police."

The Daily Mirror referred to Belfast's "cauldron of religious or fanatical hatreds" and asked:

"What next? A trip to the borders of Abyssinia? A call on Mr. Gandhi? A visit to Nigeria?"

"Childish Ebullition"

The Times termed yesterday's outrage "childish ebullition." The Telegraph found it "difficult to speak with restraint."

"On the face of it," said the Daily Herald, "nothing could be more senseless than the series of outrages by which extremist republicans have chosen to celebrate the King's visit to Northern Ireland.

Calls For Trap

"Yet in fact it is not a mere display of ugly feelings and ugly methods. It is a nicely contrived trap into which the British people are expected to walk. The calculation of the conspirators is that the British people will be aroused to an intense indignation by the sinful spilling of outrage and blood and that their indignation will turn against Ireland in general and De Valera in particular.

"And there will go another chance of Anglo-Irish reconciliation. Extremists fear, not without reason, that De Valera is working for an honorable settlement, and that the United Kingdom may be not unwilling to meet him half way."

They fear the rekindling old flame of animosity to destroy all hope of such a settlement, and to take a new enmity between the two nations. But we hope it will be easy not to allow these provocations to affect in any way Anglo-Irish relations, and to work steadily and steadily for an Anglo-Irish settlement."

Times' Comment

"It is apparently the firm belief of the Irish terrorists," said the Times, "that they have only to convince people of their own lawlessness in order to persuade them to come under their law.

TWO PREMIERS TO HOLD PARLEY

Hepburn And Duplessis to Discuss "Natural Resources"

Toronto, July 29 (CP)—Premier Hepburn of Ontario last night announced his intention to confer with Premier Duplessis of Quebec in the near future regarding "the administration of our natural resources." At Chandler, Que., yesterday Premier Duplessis forecast a conference between the two provincial industry in Quebec and Ontario.

The Ontario Premier declined to define his term "Natural resources" when asked whether he had in mind both power and timber. He would emerge from the projected conference with Premier Duplessis and that the two governments might "introduce measure of mutual advantage."

"I have no hook office," said Mr. Hepburn, "practically all the (pulp and paper) mills were in the hands of receivers. As the result of co-operation with the government of Quebec we have been able to rehabilitate the properties and they are more prosperous today than ever before.

"We are hoping to receive the same measure of co-operation from Quebec in the future. I hope very shortly to have a conference with the Premier of Quebec regarding the administration of natural resources, and hope to introduce measures of mutual advantage."

Jack Dempsey Forced to Pay For Protection For Restaurant

(Editor's note: With Lucky Luciano, New York vice car behind prison bars for 30 to 50 years stretch, special Rackets Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey opened fire on gangs preying on legitimate business. He found a city of fear. This is the first of a series of stories on "Racket-Smashing" in New York City.)

By ROGER L. GREENE

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, July 29—(AP)—Listen, guy, I'll chop out your tongue and throw it to the dogs.

A blaze-eyed youth, with twitching lips, leaned far over the desk in the office of a big New York restaurant. The man behind the desk went white.

"I'll see," he faltered. "I'll do the best I can."

The man was Max Walscikn, attorney for Owney Madden, the youth, later identified as James Plummer alias Jimmy Doyle, head of an extortion gang in the trucking industry.

Went to Prosecutor

Walscikn went to Special Prosecutor Dewey's office and told his story. He also brought in Max Greenberg, slender, mustached young brother of the head of the trucking firm. Greenberg, too, described a beating he had suffered at the hands of seven plug-uglies in connection with the shake-down racket.

It was in the back of the garage changing my clothes. Each one of them would come grabbed to something, when they came in. One got an ax, another a chair. They took hold of the room. They threatened me all together."

It was the new story. It was the same in many fields of legitimate enterprise—laundries, bakery, bakery, electrical contracting, garment and other industries.

"Out of this investigation will take an affidavit from you," Dewey said. "It's not going to be easy. You've been to see me. We work quietly. That's all."

From his desk drawer, Dewey took a newspaper clipping. It read:

Price of Rackets

"Rackets in New York": Police game $100,000,000; Beer racket: Local shakes $20,000,000; Prostitution, 12,000,000; Gambling, $300,000,000; Racket industry $10,000,000; Baker racket: Bakers' association, $5,000,000; Bakers' union, $2,000,000; Second-hand bricks $2,000,000; Restaurant racket $2,000,000; Poultry racket, $1,000,000; Trucking shakedowns $1,000,000. Total $350,000,000 a year.

It wasn't complete. But it showed, at least, that the staggering annual "slush fund" organized crime in New York had to draw on.

Farouk Invested Egypt's King, Promises to Guard Liberty

First Ruler of Free Egypt Since Turks Overran in 16th Century

NO CORONATION

Cairo, July 29 (AP)—Farouk I, a stalwart youth of 17, today was invested as the first king of an independent Egypt since the Mamelukes were overrun by the Ottoman hordes of the 16th century. With a dignity far beyond his years, the husky-shouldered monarch took the oath before his assembled parliament.

He vowed "by Almighty God to respect and to make respected the laws of the Egyptian people, safeguard the country's independence and defended its territory."

Shouts of "Vivela Malek!"—"Long live the king!"—throughout his land echoed the acclaim that broke out among the assembly in the parliament building.

Egypt Has No Crown.

There is no crown of Egypt and the ceremony was an investiture rather than a coronation in the western sense. The suggestion that Marseille, France, July 29—(CP-Havas)—An unidentified submarine sank a Spanish freighter off the French port of Grau Du Roi, it is reported here today.

Forced to Enter Port?

First reports said the ship, plying between Marseille and Alicante, had been the victim of a torpedo attack (Greater credence, however, was given to later reports which said the ship had been stopped by the insurgent cruiser Canarias near the Balearic and forced to enter the port of Palma, island of Majorca.

The ship carried a 100- ton cargo of milk.

The store was closed on Wednesday afternoon and four others as is the custom during the summer months, and Mr. Coulter and his family were in Pontoon, when the fire broke out but word was received by them and they returned quickly. A bucket brigade formed by the neighbors saved the adjoining buildings but it was learned nothing was saved in the store or the Post Office. This is the second time that a building has been bombarded on this location, both owned by Mr. Coulter.

"They are hanging on the trees in clusters", said a young Rezabeau Hills fruit grower today commenting on the crop borne by a tree he described as the Astrachan apple tree. "It is the first time in my life that I have ever seen apples bear such a heavy crop. And the size and color of the fruit are perfect, although I have seen bigger apples. The majority of them are rich in color and flavor, and are clean from worms and spots."

HERBERT KELLER SOON RESCUED

Small Craft Capsizes on Way to Fishing Grounds

While upwards of 100 persons gathered on the government dock yesterday afternoon to view the landing of the catch of Herbert Keller from the white-crested waters of the Bay of Quinte was made of Maurice Callaghan in his power launch after the youth's small sailing craft had foundered in the slight gale off Cow Island.

Enroute to Massassa in his boat on a fishing trip, Keller who was alone at the time experienced difficulty with the craft under the pounding winds. A heavier gust finally overturned the boat and occupant.

Front Launching sped to the rescue over the rough waves. A line flung ably by Callaghan was managed to reach the youth, who was then towed with the boat to shore in exhausted condition.

SLIGHT DAMAGE TO OVEN ROOM

Fire Department Battle Blaze For Over an Hour

Flames rising from an ignited vat of lapan, which occurred after an employee had dropped hot cast-ings into the mixture, resulted in slight damage to the Bake-Rite Room and contents of the Belle-hurst Hardware Company shortly before five o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The flames quickly spread and although the automatic sprinkling system did not function quite perfectly it was not successful in checking the fire. The fact that while the building is attached to the main building of the company and separated by a fireproof door the practically fireproof nature of the Oven Room with its heavy walls, roof and slides of heavy cement construction was responsible for the fire being held to a minimum.

Windows in the room were broken and damaged by the heat but the loss of the contents was slight. Fire Department squads answering an alarm raced to the scene and reduced the blaze after an hour's battle.

GULLS RETURN TO OLD HAUNTS ON BAY

The gulls are back. This week the white-breasted birds have again appeared in the city's waterfront and lower Moira River in their white numbers, picking their living from the water with familiar cries after an absence of weeks on Lake Ontario. Thousands of small shad washed up on the shores of the lake had provided better feeding grounds there.

MAIDEN LAUNCHING SUCCESSFUL ONE

Much like a vagueur of old on lengthy portage, a resident of the city whose back was bumped and head obscured by a heavy canoe slung across his shoulders made his slow way down Victoria Street this morning, eased the craft into the water of the Moira at the end of the street, unstrapped a paddle, and with measured, staid stroke paddled down the bay. The staid smile of the owner proved the maiden launching a successful one.

Large Cabin Cruisers Make 'Lost Channel'

Twice so far this year large cabin cruisers from United States ports, visiting Belleville harbour have successfully negotiated the "Lost Channel" a narrow cut in the rocky shoal which stretches from the lighthouse in the Bay of Quinte west to the marsh. Skippers and crews of the visiting boats probably travelling without local charts and sublimely unconscious of the risk they have taken.

The feat has been made all the more remarkable in that in neither case has speed of any knots been slackened, nor were pilots on the lookout for the narrow channel over shoal, a barrier to all but very shallow craft.

Two other craft this year from outside points, have been grounded in this same shoal, managing to refloat again after considerable difficulty.

The small channel through which the hunter and pleasure craft is hardly more than boat-wide, and is not readily found by even her veteran boatmen of this city.

STICK POKED IN EYE OF TERRIER

Valuable Animal is Given Treatment by Veterinary

While teasing a Boston Bull Terrier pup, by means of poking a stick through a wire fence, another dog boy poked the eye out of a valued canine, the property of Mrs. Thos. Jamieson, 22 Isabel St. yesterday in the vicinity of the West Belleville playgrounds. Police were notified and investigated to find the guilty parties. According to reports received the boys playing in the West Belleville playgrounds have begun to the habit of teasing the Boston Bull pup by poking sticks through the fence, while the dog would endeavour to obtain possession of the stick with his teeth. Yesterday one of the boys poked his stick too hard that it came in contact with the dog's eye, poking it out of its socket. As the dog was a valued animal, it is still under investigation. The dog was later taken to a veterinary where professional services were obtained to relieve the animal's pain. Police stated such actions must be curbed at local playgrounds.

JAPAN BEETLE NOT HERE YET

However Traps Will Be Set in Immediate District

Concerned over the destructive toll in the United States of that nation's newest pest, the lustily colored Japanese Beetle, entomologists of the Dominion are awaiting with apprehension first reports of the appearance of the ravaging beetle in this country.

Although there has been no evidence as yet of the presence of it here, it is bound to come, according to entomologists of the local Dominion Entomological and Parasitical Laboratory.

This week beetle traps will be set out by the local laboratory in the immediate district of Belleville, in corn fields, orchards, vegetable gardens and back yards of the city itself in an effort to discover its presence here. The traps which will resemble the old-fashioned fly traps with round funnel-and-paper-cut green and white, will have their own special attract. They will be baited with a suitable scent mixture of geraniol, a scent of which the beetle is particularly fond and will be similarly tagged with identification marks. Residents of the section are asked not to molest the traps.

The beetle is described as "the newest of the destructive aliens" by Canadian and American entomologists. It has been a pest feared for many by those connected with this work. It causes damage to fruit trees, grapes, low and leafy vine courses impartially. One of the worst features of the larvae is their feed on the roots of grass, shrubs and flowers, while the adult beetle feeds on the foliage, as recorded out by the local laboratory experts.

The pest is brightly colored, is about one-half inch long and can easily be distinguished from other insects. It is of bright metallic green, except for the wing covers, a large section of which are copper-brown. Positive identification may be made through the five white spots on either side and two near the tip of the abdomen.

Reports of any such insect found will be appreciated by the Belleville Laboratory.

(Chatham)

Chatham, July 29.—Mrs. Alimira Lecoeq, widow of Lucas Lecoeq, died here Wednesday. She was born near Belleville. One son, two daughters, two sisters and two brothers survive.

MRS. EUSEBIA RAY

(Fuller)

Mrs. Eusebia Ray, wife of Mr. Samuel Ray, Port Perry, Ont., passed away on Wednesday, July 28th, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Harry Redcliffe, at Fuller, Huntingdon Township, with whom she had resided for the past two years and during which time she had been in failing health.

The late Mrs. Ray was born in Prince Edward County 82 years ago, her parents being the late Joseph and Lydia Parks. City Choir Visits Colborne Church

On Sunday, July 25th, evensong was sung at Trinity Church, Colborne, by the choir of Christ Church, Belleville under the capable leadership of Mr. O. M. Mayhew.

The visitors gave an exhibition of very devout and beautiful worship rarely heard in a country church and much proved an inspiration to the local choir and congregation, long to be remembered. Mr. Mayhew is to be congratulated on his success with boys' voices, on this occasion there were eighteen and one couldn't help noticing the thoroughly trained choir over this section of his choir, particularly in the rendering of Wesley's "Blessed be the God and Father." In this the soprano solo was remarkably strong and clear, the antiphonal singing of the anthem "Judge Me O God" also was very well done and Stanford's setting of "God Save the King" The rector, the Rev. P. W. Roberts, took the service on A. a highly note Unusual but which enabled the congregation to respond more freely. Tallis' Festal responses (E.F. C.M. setting) were used, and the Psalms and Canticles sung in speech rhythm from the Parish Psalter.

There was no sermon, the rector explaining that where the ministry of song was so eloquent there was no need for more. The lesson was read by the Rev. C. T. Lewis.

The occasion proved a very happy experience for the Colborne choir; an admirable meal was provided by the rain which came unexpectedly just as all were ready for afternoon tea on the rectory lawn, traffic on the highway was temporarily halted while jubilant guests beat a hasty retreat across to the Parish Hall carrying dishes of raspberries and cream, bread and butter, cups, plates, chairs, etc. The rain was very welcome to the community, nor did it hinder the church being almost filled to capacity. In the summer months when churches are sparsely filled and people enjoy an outing, such a gathering as this ends to promote good fellowship, besides showing how really beautiful the Church of England service may be when rendered by a capable choir.

Newlyweds Enjoying Trip on Motorcycle

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Turk, of Windsor, who still bear slight traces of the confetti which fell on them earlier this week, and now taking a carefree honeymoon jaunt on a motorcycle were visitors in the city for a brief time today, en route east to Ottawa where they will spend the remainder of their honeymoon. Mrs. Turk and their machine completed in a local bicycle shop caused the short stop over.

So far the trip has been an uneventful one, it was reported by the newlyweds. Except that at Oshawa, a small gift case containing the bride's best wearing apparel for the trip was unstrapped from the rear of their machine and stolen while they ate lunch yesterday afternoon. A leather case containing more valuable accessories, was left untouched.

Mrs. Turk who rides the pillion seat of the motorbike declares the trip one that has been worth while, and interesting. Both keen fishermen, they stop at inviting lakes and try their skill. Some days are expected to be spent in the Rideau district at this sport.

OPENING AN INDIAN RELIGIOUS FESTIVAL

The Raj Kumar, of Mahindal, (small state in Bengal, India), is shown giving the first pull on one of the huge ropes to start the traditional religious car festival observed in the state annually. Thousands of pilgrims grasp these ropes and haul cars containing images of their gods. In earlier years the huge vehicles sometimes became uncontrollable and crushed many of the pilgrims beneath the wheels.

EXTORTION GANGS

Smashes Extortion Mobs

In swift, hammer-blow succession, starting early in January, 1937, Dewey smashed at extortion mobs fattening leeches on restaurant, trucking, used brick, poultry, bakery, electrical and coal-and-feed industries. He piled up 64 convictions—all "big shots"—before the frightened racketeers knew what was happening to their supposedly post-graduate schemes.

On the side, in a whirlwind drive he smashed a $5,000,000 policy or "numbers game" racket—a Harlem Syndicate dominated by two West India negroes.

It was reputed the biggest of the many policy banks which take an estimated net profit of $100,000,000 a year in pennies, nickels and dimes.

Meanwhile, the racket nemesis was exploding the $1,000,000-a-year restaurant shakedown conspiracy, sending the seven leaders to prison for terms ranging from 7 1-2 to 20 years each.

Even Dempsey Paid

Victim after victim testified, under Dewey's skilled questioning, of paying huge sums for "protection" age of their gods. In earlier years the huge vehicles sometimes became uncontrollable and crushed many of the pilgrims beneath the wheels.

SHARP DECLINE IN CORN PRICES

Twenty Cents a Dozen Ears For Bantam Prevailing Price

In spite of early morning showers a large numbers of farmers and growers placed a fine display of farm and dairy produce on the city market today. Faced by a sharp decline in the prices of sweet corn, which dropped suddenly from thirty five cents to twenty cents per dozen ears, prices generally showed a noticeably lower trend with red and blue berries heading the fruit decline dropping to a new level of ten cents per box with case lots offered in some places at nine cents.

Vendors in general are at a loss to understand the sudden fall in the prices of corn. While the logical reason that quantity is increasing was advanced by some, the majority claimed that the drop in price is disproportionate with the advance in production. While corn was not offered at the market today.

Net prices also marked a new low with bushel lots quoted at eighty five and ninety cents. Box lots were offered at ten cents. Home grown tomatoes remained fairly firm selling at 75c with a fifteen cents with eleven quart baskets quoted at eighty cents. Little clients, a new variety of large shelled peas, found popular favor in the eyes of Thursday morning shoppers noting a slight rise in price as they sold for twenty five and thirty cents per quart. Cucumbers were plentiful and sold well at three for five cents.

Montmorency cherries ran second to berries in the price department, basket lots selling today at sixty cents. Red currants at ten cents; blackberries at twenty five cents per box; Yellow Harvester apples at five and ten cents per box rounded out a variable fruit display.

Huckleberries were scarce today with only a few boxes offered at twenty five cents. Red Astrachan apples of fine size and quality were available in small quantities and sold well at fifteen cents per box.

Whitefish and trout were quoted at eighteen and twenty two cents per pound respectively. Eggs were quoted at twenty seven cents per dozen.

The 1,000 drivers, members of a teamsters Union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor accepted a compromise contract with forty-four Buffalo wholesale grocerion dealers just as the staple food shortage became acute.

Amazing! Unique. Different! is "Night Must Fair"

At the Belle Theatre tonight and Friday, matinee and evening, Belleville-sent-sizzling screen lovers will be startled and pleased in observing the genius of some of the most unique films that has been presented from Hollywood. It is called "Night Must Fall" and stars Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell.

"Night Must Fall" was a London stage play and Montgomery suggested that his studio adapt it for a picture. That is an ordinary procedure, but the extraordinary phase was Montgomery's eagerness to play the leading role. The part is that of a pathological killer who commits murder with the least of reason but the most of cunning.

For a star of heroic roles to deliberately choose such a part was daring and, in the light of his subsequent performance, highly commendable. Montgomery has brought to the screen something that never appeared there before. He has talented cooperation from Miss Russell and a highly capable cast of supporting players.

"Night Must Fall" is not a mystery story On the contrary, the audience knows in advance that it is watching the criminal, even before he commits his act of violence. The result is fascinating and remarkably effective as a thrill producer.

M.G.M. brought over some of the players from the London stage play who appeared there for 55 consecutive weeks. These include Dame May Whitty, Matthew Boulton, Matthew Boulton and Kathleen Harrison Others who score are Alan Marshall and E. E. Clive.

"Night Must Fall" is one of the most unique pictures of its type to reach the screen. It is different, daring and decidedly entertaining screen fare, Thursday and Friday.

"Pay as You Enter," a highly amusing "Our Gang" comedy precedes the feature attraction.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's biggest musical comedy of 1937, the Merry Marx Bros. in a two-hour laugh-Jamboree "A Day at the Races" begins a four-day engagement at the Belle Saturday, with Alan Jones and Maureen O'Sullivan supplying the romantic interest in this outstanding screen treat.

Muriel Evans and Roger Pryor in "Missing Girls" new playing the Capitol Theatre.

INTEREST IN ART GROWING

"The museum has in the past quarter of a century advanced to a much higher position as an active cultural agent than it has ever held.

"The are gallery is no longer a static institution; if it is performing its function properly, it is as dynamic as a motor factory and of much more lasting influence in the life of the people."

This statement appears in the annual report of the trustee of the National Gallery of Canada.

A healthy growth is marked in the activities of the National Gallery operations. In five or six years the correspondence of the gallery has jumped 359 percent, lectures throughout Canada 439 per cent, loan exhibitions throughout Canada 225 per cent, works of art received or shipped 85 per cent, and refunds to the National Gallery vote 1,236 per cent.

The report shows that "where are education should be in is obviously the public school. It is a sign of better time in this respect that the school authorities almost everywhere in Canada readily co-operate with local public art exhibitions for this purpose." The case of Toronto is cited where each year 30,000 school children are conducted through the art gallery in school time and under the direction of a specialist employed by the Toronto Board of Education.

During the year three oil paintings were among the accessions, five gifts and bequests. One of the latter was an Anthony Van Dyck, "The Death of Adonis", the bequest of the late Norman MacKenzie, K. C. of Regina. Others were "The Roman Forum" by Cavaliere Giovanni Paolo Pannini (1691-1764), presented by Norman Patterson of Fort William and David B. Milne's "The Water Tank", "Contour and Rim Trees" and "The Empty House", the gift of the Hon. Vincent Massey and Mrs. Massey of Port Hope, besides four diploma works "Italian Women Washing" by Harry Britton, R.C.A., "Sumach Hill" by H. S. Palmer, R.C.A., "Portrait of a Young Lady" by R. S. Hewton, R.C.A. and "Twilight" by R. W. Pilot, R.C.A.

THE FOREST AND THE COMMUNITY

Few people realize the value of wood. Practically everything we do throughout the day is connected in some way with products from the forest and from morning until night the articles we use in work and play can be traced, either in whole or in part, to trees.

It can be easily demonstrated that forests play an important part in any country. The presence of trees have a moderating influence on climate because large areas of trees keep the air cooler in day time and slightly warmer at night and there are not the extreme changes in temperature which are brought about by severe winds which swoop over the country when the trees have been cut down. The presence of large blocks of woodland, as well as individual rows of trees, serve as windbreaks and in the summer time these intercept high winds and in this way prevent the drying out of the land and the drifting of the top layer of soil, especially if it happens to be sand. On the prairies, and even in some parts of southern Ontario, we have had evidence of this in the last two or three years and thousands of acres of good pasture and farm land have been injured or destroyed by drifting soil.

The presence of trees has a beneficial influence on the supply of water in springs and rivers and is of great assistance in storing water which feeds underground streams and springs. Trees have a tendency to hold the snow in the spring allowing the water to seep out gradually into the creeks and rivers instead of causing heavy floods. In many parts of the country hillsides of two kinds can be observed. The first is one from which all the forest has been removed, leaving perhaps an area of barren land with little tree growth or vegetation. On such a hillside, which is called a watershed, we get a large flow of water in a few weeks in the spring, after which the creeks which take their rise in such an area become dried up. The second type of watershed is one which is completely covered with trees and vegetation of smaller growth and from these we do not get such a large flow of water in the spring but the snow is held back and creeks are fed slowly and continually throughout most of the summer.

Where such springs and rivers are used for reservoir purposes it is very beneficial to have the hills in which they rise covered with trees and other vegetation. Not only does such growth retard the run-off and guarantee a more continuous flow but high water erosion from such by creeks which take their rise in areas which have been stripped of all forest growth.

One of the greatest benefits of forests is from the standpoint of recreational purposes. In the last few years, and especially since the building of main highways, many thousands of tourists have been attracted to the Province of Ontario. And no small amount of this interest is attributed to the presence of trees, lakes and streams and all that they mean for tired city folk. So that, while the forests are important directly to the people who grow and own them, they are also indirectly of great financial benefit to all the residents in the country.

HOMEY THINGS

The holly-hocks about the porch
Are bright and gay with bloom,
The pink petunias scent the air,
And in the sunlit room
The summer sun is glinting
Through the kitchen window pane,
And the breezes softly whisper
That summer's here again.

The dahlias that we planted late
Are growing strong and green,
Their bloom will give up pleasure
Ere the autumn winds blow keen;
The limpid lake is calling
To the peaceful shadowed shore,
Where swallows swift are skimming
The placid waters o'er.

The geraniums that we started
A few short weeks ago,
Are shining now resplendant
In a gay and ruddy row;
And in the cosy kitchen,
Upon a cushioned chair,
The yellow cat is sleeping
Without a thought of care.

The little clock is ticking,
The summer hours away,
The kettle too is singing
A tune all blithe and gay;
And on the kitchen table
A bunch of roses red
Dispense exotic beauty
And this sweet fragrance shed.

O little house of memories
With all your simple cheer,
How dear you grow, and dearer,
With every passing year!
Though oft we daily wander
Afar on spirit-wings,
The world holds nothing fairer
Than life's sweet homey things.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED SINCE THE OLD HORSE AND BUGGY DAYS—especially with commercial travellers, who used to travel by rail, by stage, by boat and by horse and buggy, doing the back concessions in snow, wind, mud or rain, when it took days to do what is now transacted in hours. Motor cars made a decided change in the life of the commercial traveller, conveying himself and his trunks hither and yon speedily. The hotels suffered because the traveller shortened his stay very perceptibly. Now comes the trailer in which the traveller carries his samples, a travelling sample room, also sleeping and living apartments. One traveller we know covers his route with a trailer, and takes his family with him. They live all summer in the trailer, camping in tourist parks for the night and claim that they enjoy it to the full. The traveller says it is a vacation while working.

CHAPTER 55 O.E.S. PICNIC AT LAKE

The white sands of Lake Shore Beach on Lake Ontario, near Brighton, yesterday held one of the season's largest and most enjoyable picnics when 200 members of The Belleville Chapter, No. 55, Order of the Eastern Star, had a record day at their annual picnic. Well over one hundred were present to take in the day's sports, amusements and generally good time.

Welcomed by Mrs. Grace McEwan, Worthy Matron, and Mr. Harry Seager, Worthy Patron, of the local chapter, the picnickers at once made themselves at home in the most approved fashion. Sports of all descriptions filled in the earlier part of the day, followed by scrambles of peanuts, candy, and gum in which both children and older children took part; with a ball game completed the long list of the feature attractions.

Following the open air activities those present enjoyed a bunteous outdoor repast on the long tables. Only the inmates of the bear and the gathering dusk halted the activities of one of the most successful outings of the Chapter.

Winners of the various sports events were:

Girls' Race, 6 years and under—Mary Vivian.

Boys' Race, 6 years and under—Gladys Jones.

SCOTTS W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of Scotts W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. J. A. Lott on July 3rd, with the President, Mrs. Chapman, in the chair.

The theme of the worship service was "The friends of Jesus in Canada."

Mrs. J. A. Lott sang "I would be true" which was followed with prayer by Mrs. Moon. The roll call was responded to with the books of the New Testament. Interesting bits of news from Korea, Africa, Japan and Central India were read. Mrs. Alton Sine favored us with two selections on the harp. A short story "The brotherhood of Barnabas" was read, followed by hymn 262 and the benediction. Mrs. Lott with some members assisting then served a most delicious lunch. Mrs. Moon and Mrs. Neil, conveners for the July meeting had a travelling apron as their special means of raising funds.

Mother Also Needs New Clothes

Dressing up Daughter Alone Not Enough Lisa Grenelle Says

By LISA GRENELLE

ARABELLA HAD come to the age when clothes were beginning to be of real importance. Arabella also had discovered that she had a pretty face and a shapely figure, and that various admirers had been followed her passing with their eyes.

Arabella had become vain, in a nice way, of course, and very conscious as to how she looked and how she could look much better, if she only had one of those new striped chintzes, for instance; one of those big floppy hats, with a ribbon hanging down the back and one of those new short, full, evening dresses.

She received many invitations now—to dances and dates and house parties, to which she was dying to go, if she had something to wear—something smart and new and glamorous, of course. She complained to Mother.

Buys Only for Her

Finally Mother weakened, and wheedled some money out of her, for her for a new dress for Arabella. She took part of her small personal allowance to buy Arabella a lovely, luscious hat.

So Mother pinched and scraped to give Arabella pretty clothes. She got nothing for herself—only about in dresses two and three years old.

Mother really didn't mind not having anything new or smart this year. Nor did any of Mother's friends think any the less of her for it.

But daughter Arabella did.

"Mother, you're not going to wear that awful old thing this evening, with Dorothy and Clarence and that funny boy Jack?"

Mother, being human, "blew up" at that. "Your father can't afford to support two extravagants—" and she went on from there.

Ungrateful Girl?

Arabella was properly ashamed, but a bit resentful, too. Mother should have managed better. "Why did you give me those things if you couldn't afford it?" she asked her father.

Which proves that children are ungrateful creatures! Ungrateful, full of excessive sacrifice, yes. It makes them feel small and uncomfortable. It is out of proportion.

Arabella is at the self-conscious age, to be sure. That might explain does it give her to dress up like a fashion plate, and to bring her friends to a shabby home, to be greeted by a dowdy mother?

Arabella's age, her daughter should be indulged a little in the matter of clothes. She needs the support of a few new, smart frocks. But she also needs the support of reasonable, well and dressed parent. If the budget is low, the money must be divided to clothe both properly.

Fashion Flashes

Coming along already are suits for autumn wear. A nice model is of the velvety woolen in dark navy red. Sleeves, saddle collar and big bow are all of shaved lamb, dyed red to match the fabric.

Something new is an evening frock fashioned of pale grayish lavender lace jersey. It is covered at the waist and over the entire skirt with iridescent sequins. The full sleeves of the skirt are split up at the side and worn over the shoulders, like a scarf. Pink tulips rest appear at the base of the shoulder straps.

Simply Smart is a four-cornered beret of white felt with large arrow, in red, white and blue embroidered at each point.

A good selection for a travel frock is a model in very sheer navy blue crepe, trimmed with collar and cuffs of fine white pique. This is attached to the bodice by a large number of tiny composition buttons, making it easily detachable for laundering.

More gorgeous than ever are the new furs. An exquisite evening coat is a floor-length princess model of black caracul with facings of white ermine on the graceful cape sleeves. The convertible Ascot collar may be worn open or closed.

Hands up to show a charming short glove of white doeskin. The flare at the wrist is edged with tiny doeskin flowers.

How Women 'Keep Young'

By HELEN POLLETT

Women don't wither as early now as they did in former years. Look at the photograph of your great grandmother at the age of 40. She looked 60. The reason older women are hanging onto youthful appearance is that they are more active, lead more varied and interesting lives than women did years ago.

There is a greater interest today in athletics and outdoor sports. Oily cosmetics are used with a lavish hand; they keep the skin smooth. The friction necessary for their application forms underlying fibers.

There's no such creature as a "bawling" woman. In Victorian novels we read about the melancholy beauty. She must have been a "wash-out." Now we know we have to keep smiling. Beautifying has made many a household happier.

The fly in the ointment nowadays is the tacos women are limited to have. Their waist line is hurried, and as they hurry along they set their jaws like bear traps. Whenever they catch themselves at that trick, they should do a smiling and unsmiling facial exercise.

When brushing the hair, brush it away from the scalp, instead by strand. Brush until the scalp tingles.

Don't economize when buying a hair brush. A narrow one does a better job or removing surface dust than a wide one. Have bristles of medium length; long ones are inclined to buckle. After the grooming, spread fingers and thumbs over the scalp and life the flesh away from the bones. Hair lives only on the blood streams, arousing to the silky threads.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, Int'l. King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Since we've had any record of human relations, jealousy has been regarded as the supreme test of love affairs.

Where a cooling romance, displacement by a rival is imagined to be the perfect combustible to re-kindle love flame.

But of late, jealousy is "suspect". The customarily destructive force of emotion, they say, to go with all our modern gadgets of telephones accessible to call and pantihouses to hide. Still, the old tricks work at times, even if it makes two problems grow, where only one grew before.

Take this girl's letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I can't remember the time when I didn't know Phil. We were in grade school together and my first money he ever earned (cutting a neighbor's grass) was spent on his double cream soda because he had one too.

"Everything went smoothly until just before graduation, when he got sort of "mad" about Dorothy. I did, and invited another girl to the prom. A trusted friend told me he was going to do this, and I matched her meanness by asking another fellow.

"Well, you never saw anybody look so sick as Phil did, when I appeared! I was having a perfect time with this new boy than I had ever had with Phil, and I knew Phil was heart-sick, and hang on him when we danced.

"Well, if he was going to put on a little act of making me jealous, I acted harder and made him very jealous. So, last Wednesday night he came over to apologize for the way he'd acted about bringing another girl 'round where I was. He kind of walked, expecting me to apologize for bringing the other boy. But I never said a word. I'm glad I did a nice evening, but it wasn't quite like the old days, he didn't take the other girl out. I saw them together at the movies a day or two ago, when I was with my new friend.

"When I first took up with this new boy, I didn't like him at all. He bored me to tears, but now—I hate to confess it—I begin to see his many fine points. He's kind in ways. He is very considerate, and he's always glad to spend money on me, and show me a good time, much more so than Phil ever did.

"And what other girl's chum told me that Phil was becoming serious over her. They go swimming together: she got a prize for swimming last year and all the boys like to swim with her, because of that old prize. She's one of those out-of-door girls, burned brown as an Indian. I don't care much for that.

"If I hadn't grown to like this other boy, I would tell Phil to choose between us, as I wouldn't play second fiddle to any girl living. Would it be well to see just how things turn out and not do anything especially before fall, when Phil is going to college, and I am going to take up decorating with Dorothy, and Phil is the kind the other boy is 19.

"Undecided"

At the above heavenly ages, double-dating complications will continue for some time. Don't pull any dramatic stuff like asking Phil to choose between you two girls. You're doing the same thing yourself. Just keep on doing the way you're going. "Enjoy your youth, it will not stay" as the poet Herrick has reminded us.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The Man Orders

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Arguing as to whether you serve a fruit cocktail after a tome or a fruit cocktail instead of soup? Is police cocktail instead of soup? Do you always order one or the other, but never at the same time. Am I right?

A. When a gentleman and a lady are dining together, the lady usually orders for him, but if her preferences and order for them both, or should they differ, the gentleman's. 2. After a person has visited a friend and has been asked her a gift as a token of appreciation of hospitality, and does thank-you notes, can they be sent together or should they be sent separately?

Reader.

1. You are right—serve one or the other. 2. Thank-you notes should be sent separately.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a person asks his guest as to her preferences, and then, he, the host, gives both orders to the waiter, is he careful to mention her order first? Does differ. A well-bred woman guest does not give her order directly to the waiter, nor does she, during the meal, ask the waiter for anything that would make her wishes known to her host, and he directs the waiter. It is the host who asks for manicure.

2. Either is proper.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Does a widow assume her own initials when her husband dies, and drop his? Does Mrs. John Brown become Mrs. Mary Brown?

Widow.

Correctly a widow uses exactly the same forms of name that she used when her husband was living. For instance, her visiting-card still reads Mrs. John Alan Brown. A letter addressed to her reads also in her formal name: Mrs. John Alan Brown. She still signs her business letters like that.

Very truly yours,

Mary Smith Brown (or Mary Brown) (Mrs. John Brown).

Mixed Tourney at Local Greens a Most Enjoyable Affair

LOCAL RINKS WIN

Zeran, Wonnacott And Watkins Each Skip Rink Into Prize Money

One of the season's most enjoyable lawn bowling events was held at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club greens yesterday in the club's annual mixed doubles tournament. Eighteen rinks competed in the day's competition with two rinks from Kingston, one each from Consecon, Norwood, Stirling, Madoc and twelve rinks from Belleville competing. The tournament honors for the day were won by Ted Green's rink from Kingston with Mr. E. Zeran's Belleville rink placing second. Following the day's play, that lasted well into the night, refreshments were served the players with the ladies of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club being hostesses. The tournament was voted one of the most successful in the district for the current year.

Kingston Rink High

First honors were won by Ted Greene's rink from Kingston with three wins high. The rink consisted of Mrs. F. Newman, Mrs. Ted Green, Frank Newman and Ted Green. Attractive wool blankets were presented the winners in each case. Second, with three wins high, was the E. Zeran rink of Belleville, consisting of Mrs. E. Zeran, Mrs. Fred Hindle, Charles Hyde and E. Zeran, skip. Wooden pail-over presents were given the gentlemen with coffee percolators being presented to the ladies of this rink.

The Belleville rink of A. E. Wonnacott, skip, O. Hales, Mrs. C. L. Hyde and Mrs. Wonnacott were next in line with two wins high, the ladies receiving sandwich plates and the gentlemen shirts. President George Watkin's rink was the one game high winner, with the lady members receiving silk stockings and the gentlemen copper whistling bottles. The rink consisted of George Watkin, skip; R. Gas House Gang of St. Louis Just a Mild Breeze When Playing Against Big Boys

First Division Clubs Have No Trouble Now With Cards

WARNEKE BEATEN

Yanks Silenced With Two Hit Hurling of Eldon Auker

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sports Writer

What ever has happened to the Gas in the St. Louis Cardinals, the original Gas House Gang?

Except from Ducky Wucky Medwick, who hasn't changed from the villain role, the rough, tough, nasty boys from the other side of the railroad tracks appear to have become a bunch of empty bags.

They can still knock off those perennial pushovers, the Dodgers and Phillies, perpetual second-division lads, but when they come up against the big boys, The Gas House Gang has become just a mild breeze. Without Dizzy (acre too) Dean, there isn't enough pitching and pep to get a rise out of themselves.

The Giants' Cliff Melton let the Cards pile up three runs in the opening frame yesterday and then stopped them cold with six hits through the last eight innings. Meanwhile, Mel Ott and Wally Berger belted out homers as the Giants clubbed Lon Warneke for five runs and won the game, 6-4 and 8-4 win.

The victory didn't help the Giants much, however, as Brooklyn also clouted the Dodgers 7-5 to hold their one-game lead on the National League pack.

Yanks Shackled

The Yankees found their bats shackled by the right hand offerings of Eldon Auker and went down as their most humiliating defeat of the year. Auker offered them just two measly singles and the Tigers came through with an 8-1 victory.

Since the Yanks don't even give a thorough going over by the Senators, and lost 11-8, the victory for Detroit put the Tigers in second place, although still leaving the Yanks with a six-game lead.

The Athletics put on some astonishing batting fireworks to club Cleveland Indians 11-7 for the second straight day. Boston Red Sox came from behind twice to top the Browns 5-4.

MILLING CROWD ENJOY TACTICS AFTER BOUT ENDS

Amateur Wrestlers Please Small Attendance With Fast Work

LOCAL BOY WINS

Principals in Main Bout Engage in Fist Fight

A fitting climax in which principals, spectators, referee and handlers engaged in a lively fistic encounter, while a milling crowd stayed around the ring yelling its approval, ushered in amateur wrestling at the Arena last night when Red Garner, scrap-hardened undefeated international lightweight champion of the simon pures in one of the fastest exhibitions of the mat game seen here in many a moon, held his title against the clever fast-moving Peter Pernokis of Greek extraction in the main attraction.

The bout was a thriller from start to finish with both lads displaying a fine knowledge of the fine points of the game and at times clamping on holds that would place the ordinary man in the hands of the referee. Garner, the speed king, was the keynote as the one hundred and forty pounders flashed about the ring, dropping each other with well-timed elbow smashes, flying tackles and other holds favored by the more experienced exponents of the grunt and groan game.

But the small crowd rose to its feet in the dying moments of the last fall, when Pernokis, after miserable tactics drew their ire. He dropped the red-head, with a brace of flying tackles then smashed his out of the ring. Garner apparently infuriated, flashed to sudden life. His tore into his dark-skinned opponent while the referee stayed his approval and pinned him with a body spread after the Greek had nearly successfully "rung" him between the ropes.

Crowd Milis Around Ring

Then, as the crowd milled around the ring, Pernokis accepting referee's outstretched hand, suddenly uncorked a right smash to the jaw and laid the red-head low. Referee and handlers jumped into the ring with several spectators. Garner rose from the floor and tore into his opponent in a fierce display of fisticuffs. Outside the ring the crowd milled shouting its approval. Finally the tumult ended and the small group went home well satisfied with the afternoon's performance.

It took Garner just sixteen minutes to pin Pernokis in the first fall of the main bout, and here the spectators were treated to some splendid wrestling. But the second fall while the Greek won after eleven minutes of hectic battling was productive of questionable tactics on the part of the latter's one. He had Garner in difficulties several times and actually pinned him to the mat to win the fall. The thing and deciding fall saw both lads give all they had with the above mentioned results. Garner won the fall and bout in fifteen minutes of wrestling.

No Match For Brown

Jim Timoski, Ukranian flash, proved no match for Tommy Brown, Belleville amateur. The local mainstay disposed of his slim opponent in two fairly good bouts of a three-fall match taking the first in eight minutes and the second in two minutes less.

Ed Gandy, another clever local wrestler, teamed up with Bert Crowthall, Toronto "Bedman" and gave a thrilling exhibition of the mat game but when the ring and gave a fine display of arbitrating. Paul will do, in spite of the gentle rassling he received at times from the crowd and the fact that he was on the receiving end of a few flying tackles during the evening's entertainment. He handled his men well and in no time was in difficulties.

The initial offering at the Arena of the slimy, pure type of wrestling caught on with the small crowd present last night and the card offered next Wednesday will likely attract a much larger gathering.

The results: Main Bout—Red Garner, 148, Belleville, defeated Greece, in two falls out of three; Buddy Brown, Belleville, 148, threw Jim Timoski, 142, Ukraine, in two straight falls; Bert Crowthall, 145, Toronto, threw Ed Gandy, 146, Belleville, in 16.48.

Referee—Clifford Faux, Belleville.

RAMBLING ROVERS SCORE 10-6 WIN OVER NORWOOD

Local Lacrosse Team Safely Entrenched in Third Position

GAME QUITE CLEAN

Only Two Major Penalties Dished Out by Referee Laughlin

Trenton, July 29.—(Special)—Without the services of several of their running players, the ramblers Belleville Rovers scored another victory over the Norwood Terriers last night, when they defeated the Normen 10 to 6 in a very stubborn box lacrosse match at the Quinte Street Arena. The attendance was much better than usual probably owing to the fact that the contest meant little to either team's standing in the O.L.A. box league. The triumph gave the Rovers a firm hold on the third rung of the ladder and was their seventh win of the season in twelve starts. The Terriers opened the play with a strong offensive drive, which saw the heavy scoring of the Belleville aggregation late in the initial session. The contest was unusually scrappy throughout with the exception of two major penalties in the final period, when Logie and Lalonde were sent to the bag for long rounds on a slashing charge. The winning troupe scored their goals in pairs, with the hat-trick coming in the second frame when four points were collected.

Hold Scoreless in Period

The invaders tallied one in the opening canto, two in the second stanza and three in the final session. The Rovers scorched in the third period. Five exhibitions between the pipes by both net custodians was the reason why the score was not larger. Rovers in the second canto got an exceptionally brilliant rushing down the floor which saw Shalla put one by the defence of occasion to assist his team mate on an attack. Harry Baker smart Norwood rover was the only casualty registered receiving a deep gash in the ear in the first period that required stitches to close. Dr. Farncombe attended to the injured wanderer.

Jack Lalonde holding down the centre position was in the limelight all evening with a classy display of speed around the visitors net and was credited with the individual honours, honours sharing in pairs of goals and four assists. Drake and Clay were effective and netted three goals apiece, while Logie and Tighe each scored a pointer for the Rovers. Hunter bagged two goals to take the Norwood scoring honors while his teammate C. Puffer drew four assists: Baker, Scott and S. Puffer each counted and Scott made an assist for the northerners. Hunter and C. Puffer combined to open the scoring for the Terriers, in the first minute of play. Rovers came back with two counters before the period was ended, Logie and Tighe each scoring a pointer. Belleville play getting a hot pass from Tighe. Harry Baker was finally rewarded with a goal after a beautiful up front performance for the invaders. C. Puffer gave Baker the pass. Jack Edmunds served a two minute penalty for tripping Scott too. C. Puffer's assist to garner the Terriers' third counter. As the frame ended Jack rifled Lalonde's pass into a wide open Norwood net for Belleville.

Players mixed in the beginning of the third quarter with the result that no major penalties were dealt out. Logie was sent to the cooler for five minutes for slashing Chuck Puffer across the face and a short time later Lalonde was given the same count for wielding a high stick, that caused an injury to Harry Baker. Playing two men each Belleville held the fort until their team got back to full strength. Drake running the whole length of the floor scored for Belleville and gave the finest exhibition of stick-handling in the game. D. Smith of Norwood, was banished for five minutes for slashing and while he was in the pen Lalonde, Anderson and Burdes combined to score for the Rovers. The canto closed.

Slurred Weak Rally

The visitors staged a weak rally in the final quarter and outscored their rivals. Tighe banked Burdes' assist into the Norwood cage after the whistle sounded and Drake chalked up Belleville second counter of the period on a pass from Lalonde. Drake drilled the ball into the Terriers' net a few seconds after on assists from Houson and Lalonde. With only seven minutes remaining the Norwood gutted stick crew ran into a trio of goals. Steve Puffer counted the first from Scott, Hunter beat Steve C. Puffer's pass and Baker concluded the rally. A fight that might have resulted in a free-for-all when several spectators hopped over the boards to take part climaxed the fixture. But the scrap was nothing more than a wrestling show and the main contestants shook hands after they pulled themselves from the bottom of the heap. Gilbert Clay and Edmunds were the official batters. Teams—Norwood, goal, Rogers; defence, Rathwell, D. Smith; rover Baker; centre, C. Puffer; homes, S. Puffer Hunter; alternates, Scott, Godin Edmunds. Belleville—goal, Parr; defence, Houson, Burdes; rover, Tabbe; centre, Drake; homes, Lalonde, Clay; alternates, Anderson, Vall Logie, Robinson, Referee —Laughlin of Belleville.

CORBINS RALLY TO WIN BY 5-4

Asjmaa Juniors Victims of Heavy Hitting of Lockmen

Limiting the opposition to scoring qualities in only one inning Con Harris hurled the Corbin Locks to a 5 to 4 victory over the Asjmaa Juniors to fortify the championship position in the Senior Softball League at Coleman Flats last evening. The defeat of the Asjmaa kids, however, lowered them further into the mire of the cellar position.

Harris hurled ten hit ball, the Asjmaa kids rallying in the third to count five of their hits and all of their four runs, while the Corbins came from behind to knot the count in the fourth and push across the winning rally in the seventh.

Home runs were a big factor in the game on the part of both clubs as Frank O'Neill put the Asjmaa kids out in front with a circuit drive, with two aboard in the third while Harold Reid cuffed a homer in the initial frame but was out at the plate trying to stretch a triple in the ninth. Cam Adams, of the juniors wielded a potent bat as he collected four hits in five tries, O'Neill getting a double to pacejunction with his home run. Johnnie Bawden slapped a trio of singles for the winning Corbins while Cam Cook belched Carson, the Asjmaa moundman for a brace of safeties. The fielding features of the game supplied by O'Neill and Reid opposing first baseman. O'Neill made a fine stab of Renn's liner in the sixth while Reid had a double play unassisted in the fourth to terminate a rally.

Harris struck out five and walked an equal amount while Carson whiffed three and passed four via the four ball route. The final games of the Senior Softball schedule are slated for Friday night with the Asjmaa juniors at Point Anne and the Purcival Stores meeting the Belleville Sargents at Coleman Flats. A postponing game with the Percival Stores and Corbin Locks will be played locally tonight, however.

SALUTE TO Love

For bookcases they would use two sets of backless shelves from the fruit cellar. These and all the woodwork must be painted white. So Kate added three gallons of white paint and some brushes to her list.

Caroline said, "We'll have to put the walnut table in the middle of the floor, for lack of wall space. The love seats will balance most anywhere we put them. Maybe we'd better make a focus of this one window, since there's no fireplace."

In the Med Meadows attic they had found a carved Victorian "center table" with a cracked marble top, and two love seats of walnut, upholstered in frayed satin of chilli. It was these that they were discussing.

Kate remarked, "We can't afford good damask to upholster them with, even if we put it on ourselves. We'll have to find something cheap and deceiving."

Caroline nodded agreement. "And let's leave the portraits upstairs in the junk room," she suggested. "They'd look queer in here."

"Kate compromised, "All but Captain Bobby and Aunt Ada will do. We'll put her in the middle, facing the front door because her red dress gives such a touch of color. We'll hang Captain Bobby on this wall space, right here with the mantel opened under him as usual..... We'll put the bust of Hohenstaufen on one end of the shelves, and the Dresden rust-lion on the other..... There's room for the miniatures, too, and the snuff box."

Caroline looked at her slate's absorbed face and thought, "When you're in love, nothing really gets you down! Gods bent on making this place over, though it ain't-tah Morgan in!"

x x x

That evening in Kate's surprise, Morgan Prentiss drove out from town in the June dusk. They had no telephone now, so he came unheralded. They were sitting on the front porch when he drove up.

When he came in, a strange sense of the unreality gripped them all. The Major soon stole away to attend to something at the stable, and Caroline went to "help Abby" prepare dinner. Kate was left alone with him.

She said eagerly, "The roses are so beautiful, Morgan! Last night I cried over them. Because I was so happy, I mean."

"Did they cheer the place up?" he asked. Kate told him earnestly, "They've cheered me up, too. 'Rag Bag the Rose'! You're a dear to send them."

"I thought you could scatter them all around," he said eagerly. "Some in every room."

"Why?" Kate asked honestly.

"I haven't any vases unpacked yet. We had to put them in a box in with cans. And I left the can on the back porch in the shade to keep the roses fresh——"

He burst into laughter, looking offended and chagrined. "I'm a mutt! I'm back porch! Lord, what tender sentiment!"

Kate almost wept. He chirred, "Oh, Morgan! Now that I think it, it does sound terrible! But I was only trying to save them. And I slept with your note under my pillow!"

She leaned toward him tenderly penitent, childishly humble. Willing him to understand. Wordlessly he understood, realizing how he'd devastating to her was the fall of the house of Med, how cruel the contrast between her new surroundings and those she had left behind. Recalling these new surroundings. Wanting him to see that she could keep his roses in a milk can on the back porch and still think them heavenly.

But he leaned away from her, sighing a heavier, rending breath of injured pride. She saw his cameo contours in the match flare, and curl of his crisp black hair. She wanted to caress him back to tenderness. He was too angry and scared now.

He punished her by talking of Eve Elwell for half an hour. After that he forgave her and talked about himself. Then he made love to her, and her heart melted again with happiness.

CHAPTER X.

Jeff Howard paid his landlady, gave directions for the forwarding of his trunk and valise, got into his car and drove away.

He was on the way to the Blue Grass farm that was to be his home. One day only he would stay with the Elwells, visited the place, and that brief visit, punctuated by the insolence of a groom, convinced him had whetted his appetite for complete possession.

Today he would receive the keys. Today he could walk through the rooms and halls, could open the great front door and step out on the porch with the fluted white columns, lord of all the acres.

He arrived before noon and drove his long, noiseless roadster up the drive that led to the barn. In the yard near a side porch he saw a negro boy playing marbles; he would wait. Very quietly he took his way to the barn door.

The emptiness of the big stable affected him quaintly. All the things that usually encumber such a place were gone—ropes, halters, saddles and the like. Any, carry all, that welcomes even horse nests were absent. Yet two horses remained in their stalls tied by halters to the mangers. Jeff went near and looked at them. By the left shoulder of each bold of them he knew them to be riding animals. Both were fine, and let him stroke her head, but when he put out his hand toward the bay, he lunged.

At that moment a small Negro boy of seventeen or so entered the stable and approached the stalls. Seeing Jeff, he stopped short, then stepped in his tracks to stare at him.

The man said shortly, "I'm Mr. Howard. I own this place now."

The negro, a handsome boy, vaguely resembling Abby, stood at attention.

"You're heard of me."

Jeff Howard said shortly, He recognized distrust and aversion when he saw it. Last week when he had been sure of his Negro man and his groom had looked at him in that same sullen manner. "What's your name, boy?"

"Jesse Rutherford B.," answered the urchin shortly.

Jeff Howard said with mocking intention, "Last name Hayes?"

"Yessuh."

The man burst into quick laughter. "Both of us named for presidents!" he said. "Rutherford B. Hayes an' Thomas Jefferson Howard! Well, now."

"Yessuh," responded the boy distrustfully. With the sensitiveness of his race he detected bitterness and shrank from it. He went to the stalls and untied the horses.

"Where you at?" remarked Jeff. "Who do they belong to?"

"Black horse Miss Caline's. Big un's Miss Kate's."

x x x

Jeff Howard cleared his throat and asked another question. "Miss Kate she still got with the reddish, colored hair?"

"Yuh," Rutherford B. answered, and led the horse away.

Jeff Howard stood in the empty stable with his hands in his pockets and a derisive smile on his lips, unconscious of the grave of his Negro body as he struck a pose which would have delighted a sculptor. "Kate!" he said aloud. "Well, he knew her name now." Kate. It rhymed with hate. Couldn't be better. Shakespeare's shrew—

He went out of the deserted barn and closed the door and walked across a pasture and a cornfield. He walked until, turning to look back, he could see the house and the roof of a granite tombstone there. "Julius Caesar to the contrary, and below it, "Beloved and faithful body-servant Rutherford Hayes Med. An example to his fellow-slaves, an inspiration to his master. Born April 3, 1902. Died Father Abraham, 1864."

Jeff Howard stood upright and looked back at the grave. Among some of the Blue Grass people were elements that further and saw that all the stones marked the graves of slaves. Yet to this day the plot was kept inviolate. Even here.

He climbed over the iron fence and walked toward the house, irritated by the memory of the high proof of humanity among those proud first families who had ruled his state.

As he approached the house he saw that two shabby cars were parked under the spreading elm. He informed him that the old man and the two younger girls were in Maysville. It was the girl who had said, "Good morning, Mr. Howard," when Caroline came out and the yard last week. Not friendly, exactly. But not mean, either.

In the smaller car the tall girl sat. He noticed the sun's sunlight to burnish her hair. She seemed to be in the midst of a pile of junk, but her face was high.—"Your head's mighty high, Kate!" he said to himself, and laughed softly.

He stepped behind a clump of trees to watch and feel out. His interest in the spirit reflected in the spectacle, yet he could not bring himself to face these people at the moment of their downfall. Something inherent in his character still prevented it. Or was it something sensitive?

They were hardly out of sight when the old Negro man came to the door. Jeff Howard heard the wagons drove off also, and he was free to enter the house.

He walked through the rooms and told himself that they were his. His! They were more impressive than he had realized. The ceilings were higher. The furniture was handsomer.....

Yet a feeling of futility and loneliness laid hold of him. The house seemed to him an empty shell without spirit.

The thought caused him to laugh at himself in shamed-faced chagrin. He said aloud, "Let it get a new spirit! It's my house now!"

He would use the downstairs bedroom for his own, he decided. The room that had been the old man's. It held a great square poster bed with a faded silk canopy. A bath-room opened off the room. Twenty-five years ago, Jeff recalled hearing from his lawyer, the old man had modernized the place, building a large windmill on the creek, water, and converting a couple of dressing rooms into baths. He had run in electricity, too. Only the heating remained antiquated—open fireplace in all the rooms.

x x x

Jeff went upstairs to inspect the two big bedrooms that occupied the front of the house. He wanted to discover which room had been Kate's. He concluded—and correctly—that it was the one with the higher books in the clothes closet.

He said aloud, "I'll dry some of my tobacco in here. Spread it all over——"

The thought of the defilement stimulated him. The girl had said he could eat from crockery dishes! She had looked at him with eyes that rejected and repelled him. She had said to him, "Get out till Monday!" Well, Monday was here.

The furniture was carved rosewood, though he could not have named the wood. The head of the bed towered toward the ceiling. The footboard was quaintly low. Yet it was the dresser that intrigued Jeff most. The drawer handles were carved roses, under which the fingers could slip; the tall mirror was flanked on each side by a series of round little shelves, gradually sloping toward the top. He merely grew "Victorian—not museum stuff by any means—but its size and elegance impressed the mountaineer profoundly.

He thought of the cheap little varnished dresser with the cracked mirror that his mother had owned, and the old resentment welled within him like gall. His mother was dead now. Dead, he remembered, without having had a chance to enjoy the money that came too late. His possession of this house would be his revenge for her ashamed fate.

As he turned to leave the room he saw a shoe lying on the floor near the door. He knew immediately that it was the girl who dropped there on the occupant's last trip from the room. He pictured the tall girl with the reddish hair, one spilling it from her arms, and exclaiming in vexation, "Oh, there's that darned high!"

He stooped and picks it up. It was a slender black kid pump with a rakishly high heel. The heel was still straight and true, but the toe was scuffed, and in the thin sole a hole was worn through.

Jeff Howard carried the shoe downstairs, holding it by the heel on a rubbish heap. A more urgent matter came to his mind and his thoughts took up the new subject with their usual intensity.

He went down to the bedroom he had chosen for himself, took off his coat and hung it up. The shoe he absent-mindedly put in a far corner of the wardrobe, like a dog burying a bone. There! Now there was no psychologist near to tell him he had perpetrated a significant act..... When he found it there next morning he angrily hurled it through the window. It fell dow. It lodged in the forked branches of a tree, and he felt consternation on a robin family. Leaves hid it from view. Jeff did not know that it was there, nor that the sharp little heel already had made a bruise upon his heart.

CHAPTER XI.

After Kate and Caroline had finished painting the woodwork white there was a long pause. Kate in one of the cans. Kate's brush was still tempting her. She said to Caroline, with an innocent look, "I must put Grandad's name on the mail box. Come, let's talk about it——"

"Do it neatly," Caroline warned. "The box sits right beside the front gate, you know."

Kate nodded and went out to the picket fence. With a corner of her brush she painted Grandad's name on the box in even, blocked letters. But beneath it, in large and RICKETY HOUSE in letters twice as large and very straggling..... When Caroline came out and saw it she frowned and burst into laughter. She called to Kate's father to see. He laughed, too.

Only Abby was not amused.

"What dey all laughin' bout?" she asked Zeke. "What Miss Kate done gone an' paint on dat mail box?"

Zeke slapped his leg in merriment. "Done wrote her granpa's name," he said. "Den she wrote 'Rickety House' under it. Rickety mean 'bout to fall down!"

Abby snorted in anger. "I guess I know what rickety mean, all right. I guess everybody know! But what de sense callin' dey ten-ants to it? What for we got to point dah fingers at 'em?"

The little joke caught on in Rickety House. The younger girls sensing the fact that humor was the only tolerable weapon with the Meeds' new position, directed mail to them with that address attached. There came a letter from Caroline to the Med girls of Rickety House that was a masterpiece of satire. It came from Cynthia Chenault who would be a senior at Wellesley the following year. The letter was engraved, but there was an informal note accompanying it. It read:

Dear Country Jakes! You will spend the night at my house, of course. Come before dark. I have a tiny dinner in the library because the downstairs will be ready for the crush. I've two men coming for every girl, so you know it? And a little orchestra you've heard over the radio. Louisville papers please copy. Don't worry about——

x x x

Kate paused and scrutinized the paper. She said to Caroline with a sharp little frown between her eyes, "Cynthia rubbed out something and written over it. At first she wrote 'don't worry about new dresses', but she's rubbed out the last two words and written 'anything.' She needn't give any thought to our clothes! We generally look all right, don't we?"

Caroline said hastily, "Now don't get steamed up over that, Kate! You're as touchy as the dickens. If we're going to turn into a pair of sensitive plants and go around with chips on our shoulders, then we're sunk——"

"Your metaphor's cockeyed," Kate answered. "Sensitive plants don't have shoulders. However, I get the idea. I guess it do look for slights and condescension. I've got to quit it. Our poverty won't make a dairy, or your friends unless we keep waving it at them like a sore thumb in a bandage."

"Perfectly," Caroline said, continuing to manicure her nails. "Pinish reading the note, please."

Kate resumed. "Don't worry about anything, dear. Just come. Affectionately, Cynthia."

"Good old Cyn!" Caroline said. Cynthia was her own age, and she had never seemed to belong to any particular set. The whole town, the entire state claimed her. She was a tall, smart-looking brunette in whom a distant French strain was still visible. She had good nature and plenty of money to fortify her, and that, with her gayety, made her share of male attention, local and visiting. Hence, she rarely was always sat-ureen.

The Major was pathetically pleased to learn that the girls were to go to "a big party" together. "It'll do you good, honey," he said, to polish the sedan in preparation for the big day.

"You've got one shiny fender, anyway," Caroline told him with a grin at his agonized eye. "Drive carefully, girls. Well! Bless my heart! Is that Cynthia just to stay overnight?"

Caroline said, helping Zeke stow them in, "We don't want to crush our pinnace clothes. Grandad, so we're taking a bag each."

x x x

"Well fixed for clothes, are you?" asked the old man anxiously. The white-haired Cynthia in his voice touched both girls' unspeakably. Caroline busied herself with her gloves. Kate with the starting of the engine. They could not look at him. They could not look at tears that came into their throats. All his life he had been so generous, so lavish with those he loved. How to say nothing to give away there was bewilderment and a fleeting fear in the tones of his courtesy and voice.

"Plenty!" they assured him together. "I have a new dress, you know." Kate reminded him gaily, and Caroline's was the last year's to be regent!" No need to tell him that their satin slips were frayed, their stockings darned and their four slender feet had known clothlessness through grim necessity.

They kissed him and drove away to turn into the house in a mellow mood, proud of the two girls who were to be the envied granddaughters. Kate, he reflected, had a head for business. Caroline was a little too shy and retiring. But, take them all in all, they were of a mighty fine stock. He would just drink a julep on it. No, drat it! A julep meant ice, and that meant—dinner! Ice electric refrigerator. With a sigh and a shake of his head he went to the little wooden box on the back porch and raised the lid..... Just as he thought. Not enough ice to throw at a cat! Every day or two Zeke hauled a chunk of ice out from town, but it dribbed away "mighty fast" in this weather.

'LEFTY' WEEKS EARNS TRIUMPH OVER THE HAWKS

Kiwanis Juniors Almost Assured of Playoff Berth

SCORE 15 4-1

Club Team Hitting Better And Defence is Excellent

The Belleville Kiwanis Juniors strengthened their position in the South Hastings League and, virtually assured themselves of a play-off berth as they trounced the Shannonville "Hawks" 4 to 1 at the Fair Grounds last evening. The win places the Kiwanis kids two and one-half games ahead of the tail end "Hawks" and safely fortified in the fourth play-off position in the league standings.

With Keith Weeks on the hilltop the Kiwanis Juniors played stellar ball in the field defensively as Weeks buried five hit ball to scatter the Hawks' hits well. Weeks was only in trouble in the second when the visitors scored their only tally. From that point until the game was terminated in the sixth on account of darkness, Weeks was master of the situation, allowing only three scattering baffles to reach first base after the second and none to get the distance to each. He retired the side in order in the first, third and sixth frames. Weeks struck out eight while his control was perfect as he failed to pass a single batter.

The Hawks used their ace moundsman, Ken Judy, who has twice downed Weeks this year, but his wildness and errors paved the way for the Kiwanis' first counter, walked three and had two wild pitches, which let the runner home entering into the ultimate scoring. Joe Kelleher had a brace of singles, Russ Gibbs a timely double and Eddie Plummer a stinging single to right to garner their safeties. Dies with two, Little, Spencer and Gibbs counted all of Shannonville's five singles.

The victors scored their lone tally on a two error round in the five singles in the second. The Kiwanis Juniors opened the initial frame when Ronsky was safe on an error, stole and scored on Kelleher's one base blow. Kelleher subsequently scoring on a passed ball. Collins opened the third with a double and scored on Kelleher's second hit, while Ronsky scored their last run after walking, stealing and scoring as Weeks hit safe on an infield error. The Kiwanis kids can clinch a play-off berth in the league by winning either Friday or Saturday's tilt with Shannonville.

NEWARK BEARS DROP TWIN BILL

Defeated by Rochester Due to Light Hitting of Farm Hands

By the Associated Press

Those "super-team" yells about Newark Bears are dying down to whimpers.

The Bears first half race into the International League pennant drew all the accolades the experts were heaping on the first place team of Toronto, but the second half has been a different story.

With Keith Weeks on the hilltop the Kiwanis Juniors played stellar ball in the field defensively as Weeks buried five hit ball to scatter the Hawks' hits well. Weeks was only in trouble in the second when the visitors scored their only tally. From that point until the game was terminated in the sixth on account of darkness, Weeks was master of the situation, allowing only three scattering baffles to reach first base after the second and none to get the distance to each. That crack little nare, Calverine Gaston, now owned by Jerry Lynch and Jack Penny, walked off with second money in the Free-For-All race at a Community picnic at Roblin yesterday afternoon. Calverine Gaston is being driven by Billie Smith this year and is entered in the big Civic Holiday race at Napanee on Monday. Yesterday's race was merely a workout for the mare.

The punt sailors of the Belleville Yacht Club reverted back to mid-week sailing yesterday and only three class "A" boats faced the starter's gun Dicke Smith's boat winning by a substantial margin over the After You and the Alaska. A stiff nor'-wester blew and some unusually good times were made despite the numerous tacks needed to negotiate the course.

Amateur wrestling was introduced to Belleville sport fans at the Arena last evening, even if no doubt but the "amateurs" have something the pros. lack. The lighter and more youthful boys showed their willingness to mix matters, while their agility and general ring ability proved satisfactory to many. As a matter of fact we interviewed some hardened wrestling fans who assured us they would much rather see the type of wrestling provided last night, than the pros. Red Garner is still the undefeated international champion as he triumphed over Pete Peroulis, of Oreene, in a bang up bout last night. The sorrel-topped lad, whose head only reached the top strand of the ropes, proved by his fine wrestling repes at least. We firmly believe the amateur wrestlers would out-draw the pros in time, if they continue to provide the class of entertainment afforded the fans last night.

With Tony Paschowski on the mound the Kingston Ponds strengthened their hold on first place in the O.S.H.L. yesterday with a 6 to 4 win over the Oshawa team, who had the great "Lefty" Biddle on the firing line. The Napanee O'Brarde transferred their home game of yesterday to Peterboro and won a slugfest from the Petes to the tune of 13 to 10, making the O.S.H.L. race a battle for all playoff positions.

Omer Tofly Woodley's Kiwanis Juniors got out in front they are tough to beat. The kids hung up their third win against a victory inside of a week with a 4 to 1 victory over the Shannonville Hawks last evening. Keith "Lefty" Weeks and Woodley had a shutout chalked up in his favor, an error and some indifferent ball support being accounted for the Hawks' lone tally. True enough the Kids' second mound star their runs on errors, but they had two earned runs on their credit. Roger Woodley has his juniors playing a good brand of defensive ball, in other words a snappy double play to step a Shannonville rally in the last inning. This Weeks has the markings of a potential good pitcher. He has had a fairly fast ball, a nice curve and surprisingly good control for a youngster, but his greatest fort is his willingness to give everything he has while in the game. Proper handling and the boy should have a brilliant future in the diamond game.

Red Townsend's Asjmaa juniors did not fare well last evening dropping their schedule game 5-4 to Corbica. The big battle in the local softball loop today is now between the Percival Kids and the Asjmaa kids to determine which team shall finish in the fourth berth and gain a play-off position. Home runs were the deciding factor of last night's tilt.

Any hopes the Canniffon "Kilers" had of romping through the South Hastings League without a loss were dashed on the hard rocks of disappointment last evening when the Foxboro lads handed the "Killers" their first defeat of the season, winning 4-1. The Canniffon squad had eleven consecutive victories before they ran into last night's snag.

The Belleville Rovers fortified their play-off chances in the Central Ontario Lacrosse group with a 10 to 6 victory over Norwood Crescents last night. The game was marked with systematic passing and heavy checking, especially by the Rovers. Both goalies stood out with Fox starring in the Belleville nets as he made numerous remarkable saves. "Honey" Tompkins, who is far afield negotiating for next winter's activities on the ice, failed to return as was expected. Perhaps Honey has come to roost. Last night Clay, Lalonde, Drake and Roche all played good lacrosse for the Rovers, while Puffer and Scott looked the best for the Tigers. The Rovers have been invited to play a league game in Wellington next week. In all probability President Harry Moore will rush the group play-off, now Cobourg has withdrawn from the league.

SEVEN OF BRITAIN'S CRICKETERS WHO WILL TOUR CANADA WITH M. C. C. TEAMS FOR EXHIBITION MATCHES

J. M. Brocklebank, well known Oxford bowler, who is a nephew of the famous Sir Stanley Jackson, former prominent figure in Yorkshire cricket. Brocklebank has played cricket in many parts of the world.

N. O. Wykes, of Essex, is expected to show Canadian cricketers something about fielding when he tours the Dominion, with the M.C.C. team. Wykes is also a punishing batsman.

H. J. Enthoven, the old Middlesex cricketer, who at one time looked like being one of England's cricket captains. But he didn't have the time.

A. P. Singleton, who recently led his team to a brilliant victory over Cambridge in the annual Varsity cricket match. Singleton is besides being Oxford's captain, one of Worcestershire county's strong players and can both bat and bowl.

A. G. Powell, is the wicktkeeper of the M.C.C. team and has an imposing record behind the wicket this season. He is an old Etonian and can get runs with the best of them. He also played lots of county cricket.

J. T. Newe, is one of the bowlers of the M.C.C. tourists and is a Kent boy. He has been getting five and six wickets every week and Canadian players may find him difficult to play. He also can get runs with the bat.

Here are seven stars of the M.C.C. team which will tour Canada in August, starting with an unofficial test match in Toronto against a team selected from all Canada by Hon. R. C. Matthews.

CANNIFTON LOSES TO FOXBORO 4-1

First Defeat For Canniffon During The League Season

Canniffon, July 29 (Special)—Foxboro's fighting Irish Canniffon's 11 game winning streak here last night, when they handed the homesters their first defeat of the current season. Errors proved the undoing of the Canniffon boys as they kicked and bobbed, the ball for no less than four glaring errors and nearly every one figured in their 4-1 loss. Bill Cooney and Ted Hall did their slan sign hung out, as both B. Cooney and Fred Thompson for the losers were real stingy with hits, each giving up only three safeties apiece. Lorne Jarrell proved a thorn in Wilkins' side as he cracked a double and single, but "Bud" had no trouble with the rest of his last year's teammates as he retired the side in order in the second and fifth. "Bud" struck out an even half dozen, while he walked two and his one Slingshot struck out seven and also walked two.

Retired Without Run

Canniffon filled the bases in the first on a double, a hit batsman and a walk, but Wilkins bore down on Jack Simpson and forced Smith to pop to first for the third out. Foxboro won the game in the second, when Wilkins walked, Bresse singled and Wilkins came across to centre ice two bases, scoring two. Canniffon came back in the third to score one on Jarrell's and Empson's one base blows. Foxboro pulled away from Canniffon in the fifth when as Seeley got a life on an error, Bresse singled, Seeley taking third to score on a passed ball, C. Wilkins was safe on another error, and B. Wilkins drove in the final run with a single.

Canniffon pulled off the only double killing when Hughes took Empson's drive in the fifth to Up Wilkins before making the out at first. C. Wilkins read out for Foxboro with his smart playing around first, but catch of Savage's drive in the fourth was the real smarity done.

THREE JOCKEYS INJURED IN FALL

(By the Canadian Press)

Injured in the first spill since Eddie Arcaro was hurtheaded, Jockey D. McDougal was recovering in hospital today. He lost five teeth and suffered head injuries, but his condition was not regarded as serious as first feared.

McDougall went down as Calumet Kid, mount in the seventh race, tangled at the first with Jockey Paul Remillard's Deedle and Fingist with Jockey Conway Aboard. All three were thrown. Conway and Remillard escaped with a shaking up.

While favorites came home in front in the first five races on the Queen's Park card, Primavecy came through with a surprise victory in the return $32.20 and gave the lie to turf experts who bought him a year ago. Nobody else wanted Primaveep then. Evans, an apprentice, had the mount in the run and for training and in a five-furlong spring Primaveep showed his heels to the favorites.

IN STIFF BLOW JOKA WINS RACE

Only "A" Class Boats Appeared at Starting Line

With a stiff northwest blow, that kept the lighter craft from venturing from the harbor, only three class "A" sailing punts of the Belleville Yacht Club remained under mid-week sailing races in the Bay of Quinte yesterday with Duke Smith's Joka returning to form to win over Maurice Callaghan's After You 3rd and Harry Beatty's Alaska, 4th, boats finishing in that order.

The three craft got away to a splendid start with the Joka taking the lead on the first out-going leg and was never headed. The initial lap of the race was completed in the astounding time of 20 minutes with keen competition being seen by a few faithful sailing fans. The Joka out-maneuvered her rival on the west leg of the second lap and widened the distance to win by two full minutes.

Following Commodore Merle Baldree, chairman of the sailing committee of the Yacht Club announced a general meeting of the club would be held in the clubhouse this evening for the purpose of preparing plans for the Belleville Yacht Club's annual regatta which is 10 minutes to be held on Labour Day this year. Many changes will be made increase their programme and assure the citizens of the finest aquatic regatta on the local waters in many years.

QUEBEC SQUAD WINS INTER-PROVINCIAL GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Nosing out the Ontario squad by a single point, Quebec's four-man golf team captured the Willingdon Cup, emblematic of the inter-provincial team championship of Canada, in matches at the Ottawa Hunt and Golf Club. Quebec's four-man aggregate for 36 holes was 619, with Frank Corrigan scoring a final tie to clinch the honors. The winning squad is pictured after their victory. They are, left to right, Frank Corrigan, Ottawa; Phil Parker, Montreal; G. B. Taylor, Montreal; Jack Archer, sub, Montreal; and Guy Rolland, Montreal.

TENNIS

The Belleville Tennis Club moved further into the lead position and fortified their hold on first place in the Bay of Quinte tennis conference by taking all five points in their tournament versus the Stirling netsters at the Bay of Quinte Country Club courts yesterday afternoon.

Although the Belleville Club took all five points in yesterday day's competition their triumphs were not attained without struggle, as the Stirling players put up a torrid battle in most every match of the day. Third sets were needed in the ladies' doubles, mixed doubles and one set of the men's doubles before the local netstars came down victorious. Murray Mitchell and Spencer Evans experienced little trouble in their sets, while the same held good for Miss Grace McCrery and Art Cole in the first of the mixed doubles, being two sets set.

The results of the day's play were:

Ladies' Doubles—Evelyn Jack and Kay Henley, Belleville, defeated Margaret Rindle and Helen May, Stirling, 6-1, 2-6, 6-3.

Mixed Doubles—Grace McCrery and Art Cole, Belleville, defeated Phyllis Stockleser and Doug Ashley, Stirling, 6-0, 6-0. Marion McLean and Ted Doyle, Belleville, defeated Cecil and Harry Lovibond, Stirling, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2.

Men's Doubles—Bud Odell and Lou Grimes, Belleville, defeated Louie Grimes and Ken West, Stirling, 3-6, 6-3, 6-2. Murray Mitchell and Spencer Evans, Belleville, defeated Doug Mayne and Fred Fisher, Stirling, 6-3, 6-0.

CALLING 'EM

The rugby football play-offs to be employed by the O.R.F.U. next autumn have been revised according to reports emulating from the parent body's head office. A provincial body is interesting a new series, to be known as the intermediate "B" series. In each intermediate group throughout the jurisdiction of the O.R.F.U. the club finishing first in the regular group schedule will play-off in an intermediate "A" series, while the team finishing second will continue in the new intermediate "B" series for provincial-wide play-off. This information comes at a most opportune time with the Belleville rugby football moguls meeting at the Y.M.C.A. tonight in an effort to put the fall classic on a paying basis in Belleville. We understand Peterboro and Cobourg have strengthened their team considerably, the Ortums importing three or four from the champion Lindsay scrub. Again Cobourg has two new faces to add to their last year's team already. If the "Checks" expect to cope with such packed opposition it looks as though their best bet is to amalgamate with the R.C.A.F. and field a strong enough club to demand the support of the fans. Tonight's meeting is open to all for suggestions relative to the future success of the game locally.

Tommy Carruthers was eliminated in the second round of the Canadian Amateur golf champions hip by Mel Rogers of Ottawa, 3 and 2, in his first attempt at big time golf Tommy did remarkably well and will doubtless benefit from the experience gained in the Canadian amateur.

The grand sailors of the Belleville Yacht Club reverted back to mid-week sailing yesterday and only three class "A" boats faced the starter's gun Dicke Smith's Joka winning by a substantial margin over the After You and the Alaska. A stiff nor'-wester blew and some unusually good times were made despite the numerous tacks needed to negotiate the course.

WEST END GIRLS AND BOYS WIN

Playground Schedule Advancing Rapidly to Conclusion

A belated rally of two runs gave the West Belleville Midgets a 4 to 3 win over the Kent East Belleville playground rivals in a scheduled Playground League baseball game yesterday.

The boys from the East Hill held their opponents in check for the first two frames, but runs in the next two innings resulted in the West Hill team coming from behind and ultimately winning. Wright, Bean, Woodley and Dayock scored runs for the winners while Adams scored two and Daverick one for the East Hill.

R. Hall was on the mound for the winners and buried splendid ball after a shaky first inning start while B. Bunton, the East Hill hurler, started well but was hit harder as the game progressed.

The line-ups: East Playgrounds—Denike, Adams, Bunton, Daverick, McIntyre, Cronin, Mills, Hibbard and Lattimer. West Belleville—Keegan, Mason, Cranitz, R. Hall, Sheppard, B. Hall, Wright, Cook, Bean, Woodley and Graves.

Score by innings:

West	0	0	2	2	0	0	—	4	runs
East	2	0	1	0	0	—	3	runs

West End Girls Win

In the girls' section the West End Junior Girls continued their winning streak by defeating the East End Girls 26 to 19, at the West Belleville playgrounds yesterday while the West End Midget boys evened their series versus the East when they trounced over the Easterners 4 to 3 on the latter's home ground in a tidy tussle yesterday also.

The remaining games scheduled in the Belleville Playground League are:

Midget Boys—Aug. 3—East at West and Aug. 10—West at East.

Junior boys—July 30—West at East; Aug. 3—East at West; Aug. 13—West at East.

Senior boys—July 30—East at West; Aug. 3—West at East; Aug. 13—East at West.

Junior girls—Aug. 3—West at East; Aug. 5—East at West.

Senior girls—July 30—East at West; Aug. 5—West at East; Aug. 13—East at West.

All games are played in the afternoon, except the senior boys which are scheduled to commence at 6.00 p.m. on the day scheduled

GOOD RUNNING FORM BUT IT'S WASTED ON THE UMPIRE

Augie Galan, of the Chicago Cubs, is displaying great running style, in this action shot, as he spurs the ball bag during the first inning of a game with the New York Giants in the polo grounds. New York. But Galan's form didn't impress the umpire, Augie was out on the throw from Chiesie to Frey to Leslie.

YOU ARE A KNOCK-OUT! HOW DO YOU DO IT?

You Can Do It Too

WHY DO YOU choose to be thin, languid, listless, short-tempered, nervous, lacking in energy and ambition—"all in"? You need not be if you follow the thrilling experience of millions of others in Canada and 57 foreign countries and take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Try this fine old tonic treatment and you will be surprised at your prompt return to normal weight, your new pep, good nature, confidence, bracing energy and renewed ambition.

Lack of sufficient iron in your blood starves your whole system—cheats it of "The Makings" of rich, red, nourishing blood, and you slump to indifferent or poor health.

Read this convincing testimony of Mrs. B—, which is typical of thousands of such letters in our files:

"For the last eight years I have not gained a pound. I never had any ambition to do anything. I couldn't eat; just picked at my food. My husband went everywhere alone because I wouldn't want to go. None of the medicines I took seemed to do me any good. However, since I have taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I have gained five pounds. I eat three good meals a day and I certainly enjoy doing my housework. Also my husband doesn't have to go out alone now; I accompany him. It seems as if I have just started to live my life."

Start today to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and soon you, too, will feel new energy, revived ambition, good health through the new, rich, red blood in your veins.

Pretty Dumb

By SCOTT W. RYALL

There's a little Italian peddler who parks his pushcart across the street from Ginsburg's Kash & Karry Grocery in the Ninth ward.

He sells ties and shirts and socks. He doesn't sell many but then he hasn't many to sell and is quite content to look over his stock at night and grin happily.

"Buena! Tony have stock for de open, tomorrer. Si!"

Ginsburg grinned at him. He thought Tony was pretty dumb but then he was wop. Anyway he was pleasant.

"Sure Tony. But don't you see, if you sold all your stuff you'd be able to buy some more and still have money?"

"But Tony no have to buy," he explained. "Tony have to sell, Signor." Two bucks, feefty cent." He wept, bows with the two dollars and a half.

The next day it rained. The gray water was streaming from the tenements when he looked from the window. It rained all day and he didn't go out because there would be no trade. His umbrella wasn't so good and there was no use getting wet to sell nothing.

The storm kept up through the second day while the two and a half dollars shrank to a quarter. The third morning it was still drizzling with a bitter wind from the north and Tony brought his cart from the shed, covered the stock with canvas and pushed his way to his post.

He grinned across at Ginsburg as if it were the most pleasant weather. Then he put up the great striped umbrella with a hole here and there, and pulled back the canvas a little to give the passing public a hint of hidden sartorial elegance.

When no one stopped all morning he went over to the grocery and stood by the gas heater.

"No business, Tony?" Ginsburg asked.

Tony shook his head. "Tomorrow, maybe."

He grinned confidently and kept his thoughts to himself. He was thinking how quickly two-fifty became twenty-five cents and what it would be like if tomorrow and perhaps the day after were the reasons for that.

The rent was due the day after tomorrow. That wasn't so nice to think of. He abandoned the comfort of Ginsburg's store and went back to his cold post.

He sold a twenty-nine cent tie and two pairs of shoe laces. That made thirty-nine cents, enough for spaghetti for the next day. He decided he had better not think about the rest.

The low clouds brought an early evening and he really felt glad because he was so tired of seeing everything gray and also he was pretty cold. The left side of his clothes was sticking damply to him.

He shook off the puddles of moisture which had gathered on top of the canvas and was rearranging it when a man stopped at his side.

"Just a minute," he said as Tony started to fold the umbrella. "I'm gonna buy something."

Tony was so surprised and enthusiastic he threw back the cover with an utter disregard of the driving mist. The man chose two ties for a dollar each and a shirt. He was well dressed.

It was a good sale and Tony was happy and warm as he hurried to Ginsburg's for change. When he had given the man his money he looked hopefully along the street before replacing the cover. As he lifted it, he saw a crumpled five-dollar bill beside the cart wheel.

He did not pick it up immediately. There was something stunning about seeing five dollars there in the wet. The man must have dropped it, he thought, and raised his head to call.

The customer had stopped about fifty feet away and was shifting his bundle from one arm to the other while he went through his pockets.

Tony knew at once that the man had missed the money. But he didn't call out. He was thinking of how much five dollars meant to him. That it would pay the rent for two weeks.

The man turned and caught his eye. He came back and Tony covered the crumpled bill with a big wet shoe.

The customer inquired about the money and Tony shrugged his shoulders. He helped the man look around the pushcart but did not move his foot.

The man smiled ruefully and said he must have lost it somewhere else and went back the way he had come, looking carefully from gutter to buildings.

Tony beat quickly and picked up the money. He turned his back toward the stranger and wiped the mud from it. His heart pumped excitedly.

It was his, wasn't it, he thought fiercely. Hadn't he found it?

He opened it out and the drops from his hat fell on Lincoln's face as he stared. He was still trying to convince himself that it was really his because he had found it.

He looked from the bill to the distant man. He felt himself slowly losing his recent customer because he wouldn't, get out of sight and he knew he'd feel that his find really belonged to him.

Then he called, "Hi Sir!" angrily and waved the five-dollar bill like a limp flag.

Later Ginsburg hollered from the curb where he was setting out garbage pails.

"How's business, today, Tony? Rotten, huh?"

Thirty-nine cent and a dollar twenty-seven. Tony informed him grinning. "Tony maka wan feefty-six."

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Puds Simkins and Sid Hunt and Glasses Magee was sitting on Sid's front steps talking and arguing about different subjects, and some lady with a loose looking package started to go passed, saying, "Hey any of you boys got a rubber band in your pockit, if you have I'll give you a penny for it.

Sure, I have, lady, I think I have, me too, so have I, lady, us fellows all said talking together, and the lady said, One's enough, you'll do, you spoke first.

Messing Puds, and he quick started to empty out his pockets, showing her 3 bottle tops, a bell bustle, a key ring, a empty spool, a unsharpened pencil stump and a half a apple but no rubber band, saying, O, I thawt I had one.

Well then I'll take yours, the lady said.

Messing me, and I hurry up undumped my pockets and showed her 4 bottle tops, a empty pill box, a ace of spades, a pair of horn rim glasses without any glasses in them, a medium size nails and 2 small screws but no rubber band, and he said, O dern how am I going to hold this package together?

I got one, I think, lady, Glasses Magee said, and he took out everything he had, being one bottle top, 2 corks, a small size screw driver with the useful end broke off, 2 pipe cleaners, the top of a fountain pen and a lady's hair curler but no rubber band, and Sid Hunt hurry up started to see if he had one but all he had was 6 bolt tops, a little plate belonging on a egg cellar, a peach stone, a golf ball, 3 Mexican stamps, a silver handkerchief, and the lady said, Well if I'd wanted to start a junk shop this would of been a perfect place to stop, but I want a rubber band, O dern.

And she kept on going holding her package together.

THE COUNTRY IS CALLING

From Belleville good roads reach out in every direction leading to the great open spaces, the finest of scenery, the best of fishing and hunting in season. Over the Hills of Hastings lie thrills in which romance and reality join to make the most enjoyable of outings. Reminiscences of old time gold rushes can be heard from the Oldest Inhabitant in the villages, mineral indications can be seen everywhere, for this county has more and varied mineral deposits than any other section of Canada of similar area. Hills and valleys, lakes and rivers, big and little, abound with splendid roads winding in and out, ever opening to new scenic beauties revealing an endless panorama of marvelous scenic beauty.

On either side Lennox and Addington Counties and Northumberland County offer their own attractions while to the south Prince Edward County, rightly called "The Garden of the Gods," invites admirers of beautiful scenery, well tilled farms, agriculture in all its phases, and spendid fishing. Belleville's excellent hotels make splendid headquarters for visiting motorists who spend the days in the country in the most beautiful surroundings and return each night to Belleville if desired.

Belleville citizens should spread the glad tidings of this great playground of Nature of which this city is the centre. Let their friends near and far know that a vacation can be spent pleasantly and profitably here. You can entertain your summer visitors grandly if you know the best places to take them. Ask the Belleville Chamber of Commerce for information regarding the best vacation spots of this district. The Chamber of Commerce is yours —use it.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE CLOSE

Toronto, July 29—(CP)—Stocks declined today on increased volume in hitting the Junior Golds and the Western Oils chiefly. Some of the industrials held their ground and the Base Metals registered only moderate losses on light turnover. Following a sharp dip the Junior Oils came back to cut their losses by half but the general tone was heavy at the close.

Lake Shore was offered in considerable volume and it worked back to 50 for a minor loss. Dome and Hollinger were steady while losses of 10 cents 15 cents were boarded for Moneta, Noranda, Sylvanite, Chibougamau and Pamour and O'Brien declined 25 cents. Beverly Oils were quite worked back a few cents each, among them Arnfield, Red Lake Gold, Base Metals, Bidgood-Kirkland, Stadacona, Base Malartic, Prairie Petroleum, Powell-Rouyn, Central Patricia and Slave Lake.

Coast Copper stood out with a loss of close to $1 in the Base Metals. Smelters and Noranda weakened a half point each and Fernd Orville and Watts-Arnold weakened about five cents each. Silvers were quiet and mainly steady.

The industrial share market was lacking in feature today. Profit-taking sales of Utilities closed fractionally lower and the Steels and miscellaneous issues displayed resistance to pressure.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, July 29 (AP)—Feeble rallying efforts under leadership of steels, were made in today's Stock Market but the general trend of leaders failed to be impressed.

Earnings statements beyond the steel department and gains of fractions to a point or a few points by favorites near the final hour. A few specialties tilted forward. There was a fair turnover but minor losses. Transfers were about 700,000 shares.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

MARKET COMMENT

The proposed changes made by Dominion Steel & Coal Corporation of four Canadian subsidiaries of U. S. Steel Corporation is in line with the broad intimation given by Mr. Arthur Cross, president of the Canadian company, in his remarks to shareholders at the annual meeting held on May 5th last. Mr. Cross stated, in part: "It will continue to be the policy of your directors to do all that lies within their power, under present conditions exist (rising demand) to improve the financial, operating and competitive position of this corporation so that when less favorable conditions develop, as they inevitably will, it past experience is any guide, we may be able to maintain satisfactory working conditions for our employees and preserve the investment of the shareholders' equity."

Operations by the company were reported at full capacity for the first six months of the current year and the outlook was recently known to be satisfactory for operations for the final half of the year. If and when approval is voiced for the purchase at the meeting of shareholders scheduled for August 12th, it will widen the company's market for primary products and will establish the company as a producer and distributor of both primary and finished steel products.

While there is considerable talk of a United States boom in the business of over 100,000,000 bushels in prospect for the current year, shipments to date have been small. However, it will definitely favor the Continental Export and Great Britain will require large supplies. Should the latter countries have been able to produce this year's crop, actual takings have been disappointing. It is believed potential outside buyers of North American wheat have protected themselves by purchases of deferred options with the intention of standing for delivery. In such circumstances they will not want actual delivery of their wheat options until much later in the crop year but will prefer to continue production of using up their own supplies first.

Market students have been giving several reasons for the recent unfavorable action of the stock market. They include the doubts regarding the second half of the U. S. Steel meeting, doubts now removed; the probability of financing by several companies; the fact that the market is now at a level where resistance was to be expected. Of course, the question of possible financing by U. S. Steel is not yet settled. But it is postponed for some time, and should not be a important market factor for the time being. Steel's Chairman Gary, in private share for the second quarter, were up to the highest estimates, and must be considered definitely satisfactory.

Directors of International Nickel Scheduled To Meet Monday

Notice has been sent to the directors of International Nickel Company of Canada, Limited, calling a meeting for Monday next. It is altogether likely that the report on earnings for the first six months of this year will be laid before the shareholders. This statement, when published, will make excellent reading for the shareholders.

There is no information available as to how the directors will treat the question of dividend on the common for the third declaration of the year. Current earnings warrant an advance. International Nickel is a buyer heavy of Treasury Bills because of large surplus cash balance. Through this medium huge sums of money can be kept at work, and, at the same time funds are kept in liquid form.

"Part of the moral responsibility for yesterday's outrages must be borne by Mr. De Valera. Directly and indirectly he has fostered it and will throughout his rule, and on occasion he has himself insulted the King's representative in Dublin. We hope that to his republican followers the extreme application of his republican principles will prove a salutary lesson."

Liberal Paper Indignant

Belfast newspapers also broke out with indignant comment on the outrages.

The Northern Whig commented: "The idea behind the whole plan was to hurl defiance in the face of a living woman. Who framed and acknowledge but who is repudiated by Republicans of every shade in southern Ireland."

It declared the outrages "cannot alter the fact that the north intends to be master of its own destiny and its constitutional status will not be surrendered at the bidding of the Irish enemies."

The Belfast Telegraph said the outbreak "fills one with grave misgivings and show the utter irreconcilability of the Republicans."

Determined Ahead at

The Belfast News-Letter called the lawless incendiarism and looting "the work of a revolutionary organization within, aims at ruining the whole of Ireland."

In Ireland the hunt for the ensemble of the crime, with civic guards carrying rifles and machine guns patrolling the countryside throughout the night and finally arrested three men encamped on Dundalk bay.

They were brought to Dundalk under heavy guard. It was learned miles from Dundalk that a railway bridge was partly wrecked by dynamiters yesterday.

Bodies Are Found

About a half hour after the firemen arrived they were able to venture into the uppermost rooms where the personal had been trapped. Miss Clark and a manservant only an "Ear" were found side by side, evidently overcome by flames in their sleep.

Forcing entry into another room, firemen found the body of Mrs. Hamilton in her bed. Hearing moans coming from a small gallery off the rear of the first room, investigating firemen found a sobbing, dazed woman, who fainted a coat thrown to her.

After firemen proved unable to penetrate to the woman to get dressed, the job was turned over to policemen who faced the same problem when it was thought she might have to be carried downstairs. Constable Reynolds came to the rescue with wraps, deciding which apparently were suitable.

A Chinese roomer, who had all his clothes burned, lolled around in a ladies dressing gown.

BEES SO THICK HORSES COVERED

Owen Sound, Ont., July 29.—(CP)—Attacked by a swarm of bees one horse died yesterday and its mate is in serious condition while their owner and driver, William Fox, of Sydenham Township, had more than 350 stingers removed from his face and arms today. Suffering intense pain but his condition was not regarded as serious.

Fox and his horses were covered by bees. One horse broke away from the others and tried to roll over. His action prevented the other horse from getting away and it died.

Forrester was operating a binder on his farm when the bees struck. He said he had no opportunity to escape the attack. Dr. J. Forrester, physician, was called to attend the remaining horse and Dr. Ralph Sigsworth attended Forrester.

BRITAIN ASKS SUBJECTS' SAFETY

Assurance Given by Government of Japan

London, July 29 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Eden told the House of Commons today Great Britain had made representations to Japan about the safety of British subjects in China and that "certain assurances" had been received.

"The Japanese Government and local Japanese military authorities," he said, "gave certain assurance to the British Chargé d'Affaires at Tokyo in that respect.

"His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires has also emphasized to the Japanese Government the serious nature of the situation and the grave dangers inherent in it."

Great Britain, Eden said, is "not prepared now" to "take an initiative", to settle Sino-Japanese hostilities.

One reason, he explained, is because "Japan and the United States are not members of the League of Nations."

Storrs, Conn., July 30 (AP)—Strengthening of United States' neutrality laws and making them impartial to both sides in any war-like conflict was urged here today by Raymond Buell, President of the Foreign Policy Association of New York. "Our present neutrality act is so framed that America will not be drawn into the next world war," Buell said.

Edmonton, July 29 (CP)—Heavy rains throughout Northern Alberta farming areas late Wednesday and today were welcomed and prospects now are that cutting will be started in local districts within 10 days, according to the weekly report issued by the Northern Alberta Railways.

CHINESE ACCEPT BATTLE ISSUE

All Efforts to Maintain Peace Exhausted Say Officials

Nanking, July 28 (AP)—A high official of the Chinese Foreign Office declared today all efforts to maintain peace with Japan had been exhausted and "we accept the issue of battle."

The official's statement came after the Foreign Office had announced Chinese troops south of Peiping had defeated the Japanese Army at two strategic points and captured Fengtai, Japanese Field Headquarters five miles west of Peiping.

The Foreign Office spokesman said there was no question of a formal declaration of war as "legal warfare is impossible since the Kellogg Pact."

"But actual hostilities will be on a major scale and encompass all of China," he added. "It will not be the case of some Chinese soldiers in North China fighting the Japanese but instead will be all of China against Japan."

He said the Nanking Government expected "trouble to come to Central and South China."

"There is no longer any hesitation in China's foreign policy. Our efforts toward peace have been exhausted. With reluctance we accept the issue to battle and once fighting begins we never surrender."

BRITAIN STAKES ALL ON COMPROMISE SCHEME

Memorable Session Ends, It Witnessed Abdication And Faced War Threats

Wartime Prime Minister Joins Labor's Stand on Special Session

BELLIGERENCY RIGHTS

German Ambassador in London Blames Civil War on Communists

London, July 30—(CP Cable)—Parliament adjourned for the summer today, ending a memorable session that witnessed the abdication of King Edward VIII, the start of rearmament and, under the constant threat of war growing out of the Spanish conflict.

Foreign affairs occupied the last hours of the old session. Prime Minister Baldwin rejected an opposition demand that the House be called into session if the government decide to recognize the Spanish insurgents as belligerents, but promised that if the government considered the international situation "so serious that parliament must be summoned" it would reassemble. Captain R. A. J. Harvey, to do so. Normally the House will meet again Oct. 31.

Scheme is Stale

Eden declared Great Britain's compromise non-intervention scheme would stand or fall as a whole, that no major modification that would unbalance could be agreed to, and that, therefore, if the scheme is accepted the setting of the right honorable gentleman (Labor Leader Clement Attlee) that he could see no intelligent right cannot be granted except under conditions which break down in the scheme.

EXTRA OFFICERS SENT TO NORFOLK

No Trouble Expected But Constables on Ground if Needed

Toronto, July 30.—(CP)—Gen. V. A. S. Williams, Commissioner of Provincial Police, yesterday said two extra officers had been sent from Toronto to the Hamilton Inspectorate in connection with the tobacco labor market situation in Norfolk County. A laborer who was willing to take a job at $3 a day instead of the $5 to $6 a certain faction is fighting for was beaten this week.

"We have sent two constables to the Inspector at Hamilton," said Gen. Williams, "it is his jurisdiction and the men were sent in case there is any trouble. But we definitely do not expect any."

Force Augmented

Premier Hepburn declared: "Britain's compromise non-intervention scheme would stand or fall as a whole, that no major modification that would unbalance could be agreed to, and that, therefore, if the scheme is accepted the setting of the right honorable gentleman (Labor Leader Clement Attlee) that he could see no intelligent right cannot be granted except under conditions which break down in the scheme.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen Science Observer, Meteorologist

Climate and natural vegetation: If a trained observer visited a region he could get a very fair measure of the climate by what he saw there by the natural vegetation. Plants respond to climate; that is certain kinds of plants are adapted to certain combinations of temperature, moisture and sunshine and grow best where that combination prevails. The principal types of vegetation are: savanna, steppe and tundra, which are practically treeless plains in the tropical, temperate and polar zones; tropical forest, scrub and temperate forests and hot deserts and ice fields. All these plants flourish under right climatic conditions.

DEATH TOLL IN WRECK NOW 27

Error in Switching Believed Cause of Disaster

Villeneuve-St. George's, France, July 30—(CP-Havas)—Death toll in the derailment of the Paris-St. Etienne express near here rose, to 27 today as squads of rescue workers cleared away the splintered wreckage of the crash train.

At least 80 persons were injured in the accident, which occurred last night shortly after the train had sped past Villeneuve-St. Georges, nine miles south of Paris.

The Paris-Lyon-Mediterranean Railway Company announced it had established the wreck resulted from an error in switching, which caused the locomotive to hurtle in one direction and the remainder of the train in another, the fact that pilot grims returning happily from religious ceremonies at Lisieux, were among those injured, added to the horror of the accident.

Premier on Hand

Firemen, gendarmes, volunteer and Wabash Railway line officials were dispatched to the scene of the accident, about 15 miles distant from the Villeneuve-St. Georges station.

Their harrowing work proceeded under the light of torches and searchlights, throughout the hours of darkness.

Premier Camille Chautemps and Marx Dormoy, Minister of the Interior, arrived at 2 a.m. and watched the rescue work.

The highest toll occurred in a number of wooden coaches which overturned and were smashed into bits.

"I suddenly had the feeling the car was leaving the rails," one of the passengers said. "I was in the locomotive keel over almost beside us. Window panes split into 1,000 pieces."

France, Britain Invoked To Guard Trade Routes

Lloyd George Speaks in Name of Late Georges Clemenceau

FRANCE WAKING UP

London, July 30 (AP) — David Lloyd George, Great Britain's wartime prime minister, today invoked the memory of Georges Clemenceau, France's war premier, in a demand that France and Britain protect their Mediterranean trade routes from foreign guns.

Gibraltar, he said in the House of Commons, is in a dangerous situation.

"I cannot comprehend why France has stood what has happened," he said. "Do you mean to tell me that Clemenceau, had he been there would have allowed a confederation of Fascist Germany and hostile Italy to lay hold of Islands and fortify them so as to cut communication between France and her North African colonies? (Spanish Insurgents and Italian volunteers have inflicted damage on some of the Balearic Islands, off the east coast of Spain).

"It is unconceivable to me why France has not acted. She seems to be waking up, but not yet."

PREMIER'S UNCLE MAKES LAST RUN

George M. Fulton, 69, Refers to Motorists at Crossings

St. Thomas, Ont., July 30—(CP) —George M. Fulton, 69, settled back today for a rest and a chance to talk politics and onions with his nephew Premier Mitchell Hepburn. Fulton made his last run yesterday at the throttle of the Michigan Central Railway trains here from Windsor, Ont.

After 46 years of railroading in which he never struck anything with his train, Fulton made a record run with the crack passenger train Wolverine from St. Thomas to Windsor shortly before his retirement. He made the run in 82 minutes carrying 13 cars.

He started his railroad career here in 1893 and since then has learned that motorists are a funny lot. "They never will learn that they are under a handicap when they try to beat trains over a crossing," he said.

Hepburn to Sponsor Bill To Appoint Race Commission

Bill Will be Introduced at Next Session of Legislature

REGISTER JOCKEYS

Toronto, July 30 (CP)—Appointment of a government commission to control horse racing in Ontario was promised today by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn.

Creation of the Racing Commission, advocated by certain breeders and race-horse owners following the Manny Feder trial in Toronto, will necessitate legislation at the next session of the assembly and the premier declared definitely the administration would sponsor such a measure.

"There is nothing we can do until the legislation is passed but it is our intention to appoint men of high calibre who will restore public confidence in racing," the premier said.

Repeatedly Mr. Hepburn has expressed the wish that those interested in horse racing should run their own affairs and "purify the house" themselves when it appeared necessary. In his view of the recent disclosures which have developed he has considered it his duty that the government should take a hand.

Beyond reaching a decision on the general policy of appointing a commission to regulate racing, the government has not decided on any details. It was inferred however that one thing is almost certain, and that is all jockeys riding on Ontario tracks would have to be registered with the commission and would be responsible to the commission. The owners and trainers similarly would be registered and controlled.

The premier intimated the commission would be entirely independent though the government would have to take full responsibility for its appointment.

SKIPPERS' WIVES WILL BE ABOARD DURING THE RACE

(By Mary Elizabeth Plummer)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Newport, R.I., July 30.—(AP)— Two women who will be aboard the competing yachts during the America's cup races off Newport were the boss of friends today—on land.

Gertrude Vanderbilt—she will ask for the first time in an International Cup race on her husband's yacht Rainbow, tending the log—chatted gaily last night with Phyllis Ward Sopwith, who will be at her husband's side when the race starts, holding a stop-watch.

It will be the first time in the history of the great yacht match. Dad's wives have helped their husband's compete for the title.

Tom Sopwith, sportsman Englishman who is the challenger, scoffs at the tradition that a woman is bad luck on a racing yacht. His wife, who will be his time-keeper this year, has been by him at the wheel in the same post at the last cup races three years ago.

In 1934, Harold Vanderbilt's bride of a year watched him win the seventh silver trophy from an auxiliary yacht.

Mrs. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Sopwith met last night before a testimonial dinner given by the City of Newport for the two racing yachtsmen.

"Will you pose together?" asked photographers, "shaking hands?"

"Surely," said Gertrude Vanderbilt, flashing a smile. "We'll be big about it."

VIOLENT STORM DELAYS FLIGHT ACROSS CANADA

Survey Flight Plane Has on Board Transport Minister Howe

ON TO VANCOUVER

Expect to Have System in Operation Next Year

Montreal, July 30 (CP)—Wireless messages received at St. Hubert Airport today reported the airplane carrying Transport Minister C. D. Howe's party on a dawn to dusk flight from Montreal to Vancouver passed over Rock Lookout, Ont., at 10:30 a.m. E.D.T. The flight indicated one-third of the flight had been accomplished. Rock Lookout is 150 miles northwest of Port Arthur.

Montreal, July 30 (CP) — The Transport Department airplane making a dawn-to-dusk flight from Montreal to Vancouver reported today by wireless it had reached Rock Lake, Ont., at 7:30 a.m. E.D.T. St. Hubert Airport said it had taken off for Winnipeg, Lethbridge and Calgary 90 miles north of North Bay. Poor weather caused the flight to shorten instead of Kapuskasing as the Ontario refuelling stop.

Montreal, July 30 (CP)—Transport Minister Howe threw his golf clubs into a plane today and set off for dinner in Vancouver and 18 holes over a Pacific coast course before midnight.

After one false start, a big silver-bodied plane of the Department of Transport carried the minister and other aviation officials away into the misty dawn from St. Hubert's Airport on the first daylight-to-dark flight across Canada by land since Canada flying service.

Plane Back.

The great twin-motored plane got away on the coast-to-coast flight only after a violent thunderstorm had driven it back to the ground from a first take-off.

We just wanted some comfort up there," the minister said. He had decided with H. J. Symington, a director of Trans-Canada Air Lines, and Commander C. P. Edwards, director of Air Services in the Transport Department, to make the trip for the storm to blow over.

The storm lasted just a few minutes after the ten-passenger Lockheed monoplane had roared away from the airport. It scarcely had cleared out of sight, with Major J. J. Scott, veteran Canadian bush pilot, at the controls, when reports telling of the storm's fury began coming in from next stop at Kapuskasing, Ont. when the lightning flashed down.

Lightning Flashed.

"It was wicked," Engineer Leo Parmenter said after the plane had come back. Radiomen at the airport said they couldn't get the plane's signals. Co-pilot John Hunter said the lightning had been so vivid that the plane's portable wireless couldn't pick up Ottawa's directional beam. He was to guide the ship to Kapuskasing.

Once the brisk wind had carried the storm clouds out of the airport, though, there was no hitch in the take off—the big, silver-bodied monoplane, its two motors throbbing in a low note lifted effortlessly off the field and swung away into the west just before dawn.

Just before the first take-off, the transport minister outlined his duties

Naval Air Force of Britain Now Controlled by Admiralty

Announcement is Made by Prime Minister Chamberlain

DUAL CONTROL ENDS

London, July 30 (CP) — Prime Minister Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons today the end of Britain's dual naval and naval air force—henceforth will be under the administrative control of the Admiralty.

Heretofore planes attached to the fleet have been under dual control. When at sea they have been subject to the orders of the naval authorities. On land and in training establishments the Air Ministry has exercised jurisdiction.

Anomalous position of the fleet air arm for long has been the subject of controversy, and partisans of the navy have been conducting a campaign to obtain full control for the admiralty.

The prime minister declared the decision did not reflect on the present administration of the air force but had been reached because the government believed the time had come when unification would be the most satisfactory arrangement for the future.

Replying to a question by Captain Reginald Bernard, Conservative, as to whether the transfer entailed introduction of a dual system of training, Chamberlain declared he understood that matter would be worked out between the Admiralty and the air ministry.

Clement Attlee, Labor leader protested the announcement of the day of the adjournment of the House. Parliament's recall, he declared, would prevent a full discussion of the changes. He said stated the prime minister to use his influence to prevent the conference being continued between the two services.

Unfrocked Cleric Succumbs, Mauled by Lion in Sideshow

Harold Davidson Was Delivering Speech From Platform

GIRL BEATS LION OFF

Skegness, Lincolnshire, July 30 (AP)—Harold Davidson the unfrocked rector of Stiffkey, died today of injuries received Wednesday when he was mauled by a lion. He had been delivering a speech from the lion's cage as part of his job in a sideshow.

The attack occurred while nearly a hundred persons visitors at the Skegness amusement park, looked on in fascination.

He was giving an address in his "lion's den" when he accidentally stepped on the paw of a young lioness. An old male, aroused by the lioness' plaintiff roar, leaped upon Davidson, gripped him with his fangs and clawed his back and shoulders. Davidson attempted to fight the lion off with a walking stick but was thrown to the floor and mauled.

While spectators screamed, the sixteen year old girl cage attendant, Irene Norman, leaped to the rescue with a whip and an iron bar. She drove the lion back with blows from the whip and bar and helped to get the unconscious man out of the cage. Then she fainted.

At the hospital it was found that Davidson's chest bone was broken and that he was suffering from a severe shock fracture, nervous shock and loss of blood. His neck, face, hands, shoulders and back were deeply lacerated.

He has been attracting crowds in recent weeks with his amateur animal stunt.

Davidson died a victim of his penchant for doing strange things in strange places.

Since he was convicted in 1927 of immorality by an ecclesiastical court and deprived of his living he had used unorthodox methods of protest, such as "fasting unto death" in a glass case at a museum.

The immorality charges were made by two waitresses.

"The press and Mercury will be in operation between those two hours," Alexander said.

KIDNAP STORY OF FRED THAIN BEING STUDIED

Inspector Gardner Finds "No Evidence to Support Story"

ACCOSTED ON ROAD

Rawdon Farmer Says He Was Bound and Had Sack Over Head

Campbellford, Ont., July 30.—(CP)—Fred Thain, Marysburgh Township farmer, told Provincial Police last night he was kidnapped one day and held prisoner until Wednesday night by three men in an Old Sedan. Search of the district nine miles northeast of here had been made by 50 farmers after Thain disappeared Tuesday and returned home yesterday.

While stating certain angles of the case were still under investigation Inspector Gardner, Provincial Chief of District Provincial Police, said at Belleville, police had been "unable to find any evidence" to support Thain's story. Gardner received a report from Sergt. Harry Thompson of Thain, 58-year-old father of three children, told Sergt. Thompson he had gone to a local bank to renew a note around noon Tuesday and was driving back home in a horse-drawn buggy when three men in an automobile accosted him on the English Line of Rawdon, one mile from his farm.

Says He Was Bound

One of the men asked him for a flask, Thain said, and when he offered it to them they grabbed and bound him putting a sack over his head and bundling him into their car. They took $3 from his pockets and left him with about thirty-two cents, he said.

Thain said he believed his kidnappers turned east on the Tenth Line and after driving for "quite a long time" stopped at a farmhouse. He was kept in a cellar and tied to a bed, but was given nothing to eat or drink, he said. He remained there Tuesday night and all day Wednesday and left late Wednesday night.

Thain's captors then took him again in the car and took him to the Township Concession of Rawdon and the Stirling and Marmora Road, three miles from his home, Thain declared. He made his way to the nearby Hadley farm and told them his story.

DEATH LURKS ON WINDOW LEDGES

Heavy Toll Taken in Peculiar Accidents in New York City

New York, July 30—(CP)—The death that lurks on the window ledges of New York's tall buildings could afford to take a holiday today after reaping a heavy toll yesterday.

Life was crushed from two persons in falls that obviously were accidental. Others died in falls that similarly, but under circumstances indicating suicide—a window washer who fought for life while swinging by a shattered safety belt 18 storys above the street, and a 20-year-old sweeper who apparently was unhappy because their little son had pneumonia.

Joseph Lang, Bronx woman, forgot as any 11-year-old in the midst of summer sidewalk play, died in a plunge from a window of his home. It appeared he arose in the night for a drink of water and, dazed by sleep, mistook the window five floors up, for a door.

Stan Zielinsky fell 12 floors while washing windows at the Berkley Hotel. He was 45.

The window washer who escaped Zielinsky's fate was Jim Cannan, 38. After the one good end of his belt had given him his life, they say what seemed a lifetime his cries attracted two officerworkers. They "fished" him to safety with a window-opening pole.

TRAFFIC OFFICER ON MOTOR-SCOOTER

The sharp staccato of a small motor first alarmed then amused residents of Picton the other day. Then to their surprise they noted Traffic Officer Frank Smith riding the hurricane deck of a motorized "scooter" along the main thoroughfare. Officer Smith intends to give up his trusty "bike" for his new steed if it will qualify for section 2 of the Ontario Traffic Act.

BLOOD DONOR IS SEVENTY-ONE

REGISTER BOATS ENTERING HARBOR

Registration of all boats, work and pleasure craft, entering Belleville harbor will be undertaken by Harbormaster Robert Weddell, it was stated by him today.

The registration has been started as a means by which visiting craft are located during their cruise in local waters. Several fruitless long distance telephone calls were made at the government office in an effort to trace owners of pleasure cruisers.

WINTER HATCHING TO BE ATTEMPTED

A keen demand for turkeys will be noted this fall it is indicated by the fact that orders are already being filled for the day by turkey hatcheries. Incubation and artificial rearing of the turkeys is now being carried out by the Wensley Hatcheries in the city, who, it declared lower mortality in the birds than those naturally bred. For the first time this winter, facilities for rearing of chickens and other fowl will be attempted by the hatchery this season in an effort to keep up with the constant demand.

SALVAGE SCRAP IRON FROM RIVER BOTTOM

Modern salvage operations are not confined to the bringing to the ocean's surface of sunken treasure-laden ships. A weighty instructed pant of sow-like proportions manned by a man and a surprising youth stirred in a bathing suit yesterday combed the bottom of the Moira River near Lower Dam Bridge and with the aid of pieces of bent wire retrieved what appeared to be pieces of old scrap iron from the river bottom.

Their method of operation was novel, consisting of two pieces of board in the lower ends of which were attached ancient license plates of automobiles. Occasionally the youth climbed overboard into the water, affixed his bent hook to a submerged piece of iron, hauled it to the surface and threw it into the punt.

ROADS AND BRIDGES TO BE DISCUSSED

Important matters will be discussed relative to the roads and bridges of the county, when the County Council Committee on these particular phases of county work holds its regular meeting in County Clerk Eric Denyes' office on Friday morning of next week.

FINANCE COMMITTEE OF COUNTY TO MEET

Faced with a busy session, the Finance Committee of the Hastings County Council will meet in its official meeting in the County Clerk's office on Thursday morning of next week, when the matter of roofing of Shire Hall, which have been pouring into Clerk's office for the past few days, will be opened at this session and a tender likely placed. Indigents accounts will also come in for lively discussion at this meeting.

TOMATO PEELERS URGENTLY WANTED

Requests for approximately three hundred women tomato-peelers have been received from three canning factories of the district by the local Employment Office. A Belleville factory states that it will run its day-and-night shift and consequently will need two hundred peelers; factories from Bloomfield and Wellington to Prince Edward County have entered application for fifty and twenty-five women respectively.

Only a small percentage of this amount has registered so far, and unless a greater number signify their intention of doing this kind of work before August 18th, when the season starts, factories are liable to be faced with a serious shortage.

CHARLES COURT GIVEN TWO YEARS

Pleads Guilty to Serious Offence in Police Court

Charles Court, of this city, was sentenced to serve two years in the Portsmouth Penitentiary, after pleading guilty to a serious charge in today's local police court held before Magistrate W. J. Butler K.C. The crime you have pleaded guilty to is one of the most serious, outside of the capital crimes, Court. You have been ably represented by counsel and I have considered your case well. The sentence of this court is that you shall be confined to the government penitentiary at Portsmouth for a period of two years," was the only comment made by His Worship.

Court was arrested in his own home early this week, following complaints being received from the family regarding his actions. At preliminary hearing Court pleaded not guilty through his counsel, S. L. Howell, but in a special session of police court yesterday changed his plea to that of guilty. He appeared for sentence today.

"IRON SECOND" TO CONGREGATE

Festivities of Re-union to Continue Until Monday

Veterans from all parts of the country will once again congregate to talk over old times and renew acquaintances made during the dark days of 1914-1918 over the coming week-end, when members of the "Iron Second" battalion of the Canadian Expeditionary Force meet in Kingston for their annual re-union.

While there are but few of the original battalion left there are many of the "reinforcements" still living with all being blood brothers of the famous fighting unit. And the fact, that many members of the regiment were recruited from the Belleville section of the province means that several hundred veterans will attend the functions being held in the Limestone City this week end.

A special concert in Kingston Armouries will inaugurate the festivities on Saturday afternoon, when the Sergeants' Mess will be thrown open to all Second Battalion veterans. In the evening the veterans will parade headed by the band of the Princess of Wales Own Regiment, to the LaSalle Hotel, where a banquet will be held at 7.30.

Divine Service at the George Richardson Memorial Stadium will be held on the Sunday morning activities. Here a wreath will be placed on the George Richardson Memorial and the return march to the Armouries made. The R.W.C.R. band will attend this function also. In the afternoon a band concert in the park will be held with some of the veterans visiting the Royal Military College, Fort Henry and other Kingstonian points, of interest. A large number of veterans from Belleville have signified their intention of attending the re-union.

TRAFFIC LINES TO BE REPAINTED

Slower Drying Paint Will Be Used on Streets

Rendered almost illegible by traffic and weather conditions, the city's parking and traffic lines will be repainted by slower drying zone paint, members of city council were assured at a special meeting held last evening.

A settlement has been made by manufacturers of the paint for replacement of that which has faded, councillors were told by visiting representatives.

Cause of the fading was explained by city engineer Chas. Mott as being due to the fact the paint used was of the fast one-half-hour drying type. Traffic conditions in Belleville, it was further pointed out do not warrant the use of this, it was found by test. The paint which will be used to repaint the traffic lines will be of the four-hour type, and sections of Front Street will be barricaded until it has "set."

Painting is expected to commence at the first of next week with relief labor employed for the work.

At the meeting authorization of Monday, Aug. 2nd as a public Civic Holiday was made by city council.

SECOND STEPS TAKEN BY JAPAN

War With China Appears Closer Than At Any Recent Time

Tokyo, July 30—(AP)—The Japanese cabinet today reached a decision on a series of second steps to be taken if the undeclared war with China over domination of the rich north China territories.

Immediately after the meeting, Premier Fumimaro Konoye went to the Imperial Palace to lay the decision before Emperor Hirohito.

The Premier had been meeting with the budget committee during the afternoon when reports were received here of heavy fighting in a widespread area of north China. At once he adjourned the finance session and summoned the Japanese cabinet to a meeting of Ministers of War, Navy, Foreign Affairs and Finance in a conference.

War between Japan and China was regarded by observers as closer than at any time since fighting began between Chinese and Japanese troops July 7.

ligarent rights shall not be granted until the withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain is well under way. Belligerent rights would give both parties the right to visit, and search, foreign shipping on the high seas).

In Event of Failure

"We should regret the collapse of non-intervention," the Foreign Secretary added, "if it happens it would create an entirely new situation, one in which all frontiers would be open and all check on supplies of men and materials would be withdrawn."

In the case of an emergency, he concluded, the House would be called, but beyond that he could not go "into circumstances which at present are purely hypothetical."

"Our object," he declared, "will be to do everything that lies in the power of one single government to promote peace and concord among nations."

Warning Premier Speaks

David Lloyd George joined the Labor Party in urging that Parliament be summoned should the Government decide to grant belligerency status to General Franco. On the other hand, Opposition, the wartime Prime Minister declared:

"The recognition of belligerent rights is a matter of such importance to us, our trade and our shipping, and the possibility of what might happen to our seamen that it should not be conceded without summoning Parliament and obtaining its sanction."

Spanish Gov't a Minority

Lloyd George said he did not believe war was an immediate probability, but added: "My prophet would still less a believer in it if the Government was prepared to make a stand at any price against these military dictators."

He countered the argument that the Spanish Government was a minority Government by saying Abraham Lincoln was President of the United States, although he was elected by a minority.

"We recognized him and we should have done the same in Spain," the Welshman declared.

Von Ribbentrop Places Blame

London, July 30 (AP)—Joachim Von Ribbentrop, German Ambassador, accused Soviet Russia today of wrecking Great Britain's newest plans for non-intervention in the Spanish Civil War.

He declared Germany could not enter into discussion on the plan because Russia had flatly rejected greatest part of belligerent rights to the Spanish insurgent cause.

"We Germans have known for a long time that but for Russia there would be no Spanish Civil War today," the Reich envoy said.

The Italian-German (pro-insurgent) fractions touched off a non-intervention subcommittee storm in a brisk attack on Russia's stand.

THE HYDRO IS YOURS

Belleville, July 30.

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

The Hydro is ours. On Hydro truck are the words, "The Hydro is Yours To Use It." We are not worrying about it, the reason being I suppose, that our Hydro is making good, and we have no cause for worry, but our criticism would be heard if there was a deficit.

The O.N.R. is ours and if it goes behind we shall have to make good any loss. Would it not be a good idea to print on every bus car, "The O.N.R. Is Yours. Use It"?

ALGONQUIN PARK AN IDEAL SPOT

Easily Reached Through Bancroft, Maynooth and Whitney

Increasing popularity of unspoiled Algonquin Park as a summer playground is evident by the number of requests for information received at the local Chamber of Commerce for information regarding the best route by which to enter this ideal vacation spot.

To all enquirers secretary J. C. Hardy who returned recently from a tour through the park, advises the highway from Belleville to Bancroft, to Maynooth, Whitney and thence to Highland Park Inn, situated on Oxbo Lake. The newly constructed road into the park skirts the southern border and is forty miles of scenic grandeur, its borders of virgin timber unmarred and wild life undisturbed. A fee of $3 for permit to fish in the park is asked, but no firearms are permitted. Those intending to use this route are advised to take enough gasoline for lengthy stretches. On his trip Mr. Hardy and party sighted six deer calmly browsing along the highway.

POLICE COURT

Robert Johnson, 81 year old Trenton resident, who was arrested one week ago today on a charge of begging for alms, today pleaded guilty before Magistrate F. J. Butler, K.C. in local police court.

It would suggest a ten day sentence, dating from the time of his arrest, would meet the ends of justice, Tour Worship, You may recall this man is still facing a charge of drunkenness in the Trenton court to be heard this afternoon," stated Crown Attorney R. O. Donnan, K.C. The suggested term was applied.

A Bedecraft painter appeared charged with the non-payment of wages, a charge laid under the Masters' and Servants' Act. The accused admitted his obligation and was ordered to pay his employee forthwith, despite the fact he pleaded not guilty when first told the decision on the evidence of the three officers. The latter six paid additional costs.

"I do not believe I have the jurisdiction to deal with this matter in this court" counselled His Worship, when a charge laid under the Parents' and Maintenance Act, was read against J. Vincent McMahon, Frankford, McMahon, it is his mother the plaintiff in the case was both represented by counsel, Charles A. Payne, K.C. represented the accused and A. S. Collins, K.C. appeared for the plaintiff. "I cannot believe this is a matter for the civil courts, but I will reserve decision a notice," stated Mr. Payne.

"Through common decency I would think the man should provide for his mother. She stuck with him when he was in trouble for many years," interrupted Crown Attorney R. O. Donnan, K.C. with regard this case sine die and in the meantime perhaps the two counsel can settle the matter out of court." His Worship.

A non-support case was heard in camera, with the court endeavouring to settle the parties' grievances to the mutual satisfaction of both parties. A Prince Edward County resident who had previously entered a plea of guilty to a charge of drunkenness was given sentence of seven days in the common jail and his operator's permit was suspended permanently.

PLEASURE LINER

stricken as the fire flared skyward. Rushing to the scene of the blaze they heard the screams of the passengers who pleaded to small boats nearby to rescue them.

Vessel Ran Aground.

The pilot boats reached the side of the vessel toward shore, running it aground in 5 feet of water about 500 yards off Bodkin Point. Passengers, girded with life preservers, began jumping off.

The roaring flames and a high wind combined to spread the fire for miles. Fishing craft and pleasure boats put out to the blaze from many points along the shore.

Elizabeth Ramsey, of Baltimore, one of the first passengers dragged from the water, said:

"I was locking my door when the first alarm rang. I ran on deck and saw fire in the stateroom. In about five minutes the whole boat was on fire."

She with dozens of others pushed her way to the bow of the liner.

In Washington, President Roosevelt ordered naval planes to fly over the area with the coming of dawn to search for survivors.

The City of Baltimore was built in 1911 and had a length of 497.5 feet. It was of 2,379 gross tons and with the City of Norfolk, a sister-ship, plied between Baltimore and Norfolk carrying passengers and cargo.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Three Mesquiteers" in "Rearin' Lead"

In the first of "three mesquiteer" series, the trio of dare-devil adventurers go to the aid of World War veterans who are being cheated out of their homesteads by cattle barons. In the second there was a general roundup of cattle rustlers. In the third—"Rearin' Lead"—at the Capitol Saturday, only Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune again go into action—and how.

This time the Good Samaritans come to the rescue of an orphanage and the pretty manager who is being robbed of her father's inheritance by a mob of small town grafters.

When the lusty trio engage in a rough and tumble fight with a dozen or so phony policemen, there is revealed the greatest screen scrap since "The Spoilers." Judging by the enthusiasm and vigor of the combatants—most of Hollywood's best stunt men must have been employed as the "police."

This fast-moving drama also brings romance in the beautiful blonde Christine Maple, formerly of the Ziegfeld Follies, who makes her screen debut as a leading lady in "Rearin' Lead."

And last but not least, the program of entertainment supplied for the benefit of the orphans, is more than worth the price of admission. The Mesquiteers' singing, the Frye children dance an adagio and apache number, while hundreds of Meglin Kiddies furnish real musical and entertainment talent seldom seen in children.

AT THE BELLE

Mary Brea Have Side-Splitting Roles in "A day at the Races"

"A Day at the Races" brings the Marx Brothers ... Groucho, Harpo, and Chico ... to the Belle screen for four days, starting tomorrow (Saturday) in what is described as the maddest, merriest, most amusing piece of Marxmania that these inimitable comedians have ever delivered to an expectant public.

Directed by Sam Wood, who filmed the last Marx Brothers triumph, "A Night at the Opera," the new picture boasts a stellar cast of supporting names, including Maureen O'Sullivan as the feminine lead, and Allan Jones, who sings several new song hits, including "On Blue Venetian Waters," "Tomorrow is Another Day" and "A Message from the Man in the Moon."

Also prominent in the cast are Margaret Dumont who has taken a lot of "punishment" from the Marx lunatics in previous pictures, Leonard Ceeley, Douglas Dumbrille, Charles Trowbridge, Esther Muir, Siegfried Rumann and Robert Middlemass.

The plot of "A Day at the Races," which shifts from a sanitarium to a race track, introduces Groucho Marx as Dr. Hugo Z. Hackenbush, a horse doctor who takes charge of a sanitarium. Harpo Marx is seen as a jockey, and Chico as a race track frequenter who sells good tips cream and buns during the races. Miss O'Sullivan plays the girl who is trying to keep the deep-dyed villain, Douglas Dumbrille, from foreclosing on her sanitarium. Jones plays the singing singer who owns a race horse, Miss Dumont, enacting the type who likes to talk about her operations, is all for Groucho because he has told her that she has trouble blood pressure. Esther Muir is the slinky vampire who tries to "frame" Groucho and who gets drunk in the wall by Harpo and Chico, posing as paperhangers.

The Marx Brothers, with Sam Wood, who directed "A Night at the Opera," and a group of writers worked for a year preparing "A Day at the Races" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Laughs were plentiful in the fifteenth-comb test.

The comedians were firmly convinced that no comedian who depends on new, original and special material can make more than one picture a year and be sure that picture is a bull's-eye. Every situation, every laugh line in "A Day at Races" is new.

It took five months of daily work to design the idea and basic situations. Then this was put into a 75-minute stage show.

This show was taken to five cities ...Duluth, Minneapolis, Chicago, Cleveland and San Francisco ... where the comedians gave five shows a day for seven days in each place. If a joke brought only a titter, it was revamped or tossed out. Only material was constantly being tried out.

After doing their script one hundred and forty times, they returned to Hollywood with pick-and-shovel comedy and more than 200 minutes of laughs. Then they spent three months perfecting all of this, adding new ideas and getting it into letter-perfect shape.

It is a mistake to think, "A Day at the Races" has no plot. Sam Wood is bubbling in the matter of demanding plot motivation for every laugh. Briefly, the idea behind "A Day at the Races" is that a girl is about to have her sanitarium stolen from her by "dirty crooks" and the Marxes and Allan Jones prevent this through humdicking situations.

The picture has a novel and glamorous production sequence. This takes place at a water carnival with the audience seated on floating rafts. There are scantily clad girls around a fountain stage, the curtain for which is a natural water spray. Allan Jones sings from a barge and the Marx Brothers do Marxmanta throughout.

And, of course, Chico plays the piano and Harpo does a harp number with a bit of piano playing of his own thrown in.

On top of comedy and production comes thrills and excitement as the picture ends in a steeple-chase race in which Allan Jones's horse must win. And even a race victory is achieved in a novel and typical Marxian manner

GREATER INTEREST IN MUSIC

Those who see in the radio and who saw in the phonograph the end of music instruction were unnecessarily alarmed and pessimistic. They looked through dark glasses, neglecting all the while the thought that the radio itself drew thousands and perhaps millions to the serious study of music they would not otherwise have had the opportunity of engaging in and that the radio and the phonograph were in themselves powerful appeals to the young to the study of music as perhaps to win a place in the leading ranks of musicians.

But not in spite of radio but rather no doubt because of it there are millions across the world playing in school bands. Even in Belleville today there are, no doubt as many seriously minded in their attitude to the study of music as there ever were. The other day in New York an instrument maker said that boys in the schools preferred music to the football team and that the youths' performance indicated that Europe has no monopoly of musical appreciation as two million in the United States alone are playing in school bands. So said President Fred A. Holtz of the National Association of Band Instrument Manufacturers. It was at the annual meeting that he said that the boys preferred a place on the school band to the place on the football team.

Among these are those who do not plan to become professional musicians but study and love music for its cultural value. The place of music in the schools is not vocational but is cultural in aim and many who play will become chemists and enter other professions. But they are all boosters for music and add to the cultural wealth of the nation.

If anything further were required to show that the radio has been an agency for the development of interest in music it is the statement the other day that the study of the piano is attracting a larger following than usual. More pianos are being sold. Those who might not like to practise scales look askance at the news that the piano is coming back but all others will be pleased for the piano is one of the greatest of instruments. It is expected that this year there will be sold in the United States as many as 130,000 pianos as against the 100,000 sales last year. It is said that the radio has held a very great influence in maintaining the popularity of the piano, for the radio is a very living thing. Listeners know that every program requires living human beings at the point of broadcast and so the thought is not allowed to drop that there is need for a general interest in the piano and other musical instruments. Radio surely never discouraged the interest in music and the desire to attain the acme of perfection in production. Millions it must have spurred on to intense study.

And this all comes down to the place given the musicians after all—in the home, in the park, in the theatre. Such musical efforts ought to be encouraged for music is a means of adding to the richness of living, great as it is. Music itself is a living element.

A METHOD OFFERED

King Leopold of Belgium, son of the great King Albert who made a name for Belgian honor twenty-three years ago, lives in a different age from that of his father but he is keenly alert to the signs of the times. The world is out of joint and many persons feel like Hamlet of old, who said, "The world is out of joint; O cursed spite, that ever I was born to set it right!" But somebody has to set it right, even if the "cursed spite" which seems to be at work appears to be aided and abetted by national spites of everything that is offered in way of remedy for the malady of today.

King Leopold asks that an international body be set up, composed of experts without national mandate, sitting as academic authorities. Whether this could work out is to be shown as experts are not always willing to agree, and their decisions might, some contend, have little relation to actual conditions.

But all agree that something ought to be done though there is so much opposition to everything that is brought up for the betterment of the race. It seems as in the case of a sick patient, very sick, perhaps even to death, or loss of mind, while attendants disagree and offer and oppose proposed remedies. Bad as things are they may grow worse if neglected, much worse, that is the reason that diplomats of the world are throwing their energy to-wards a solution which will be favorable to all.

What part national fears and national desires for expansion beyond present racial boundaries play is difficult to say though they evidently do play a part.

Meanwhile it is the hope of the world that something will be done to ease the tension of the present day.

A TRUMPET VINE—something we never knew till now, that there was such a thing as a trumpet vine—our horticultural experience being very limited. However, we saw our first trumpet vine, and believe you me it was something to see. Climbing luxuriantly on the rear of the piazza of a Bridge street east residence, in full bloom, the trumpet vine was a glorious spectacle. The flowers resembled a small trumpet, three or four inches long and grew in a cluster, several flowers in each cluster. Then the winds came and the rain fell and although that house was founded upon a rock the trumpet vine wasn't and it was stripped from its moorings and destroyed—at least as far as this season is concerned.

ALASKA, TYPIFYING WHAT WAS KNOWN AS "THE FROZEN NORTH", a place to be avoided except by whalers and sealers, the land of the midnight sun and months long winter, electrified the world some years ago with discoveries of bonanza gold—gold in the creeks and grass roots and beneath the frozen tundra. All the world answered the challenge and gold was recovered in millions. Now Alaska sends out another challenge—this time it is platinum in quantities and the first camp has been called PLATINUM, quite appropriately. Nature certainly picks out-of-the-way places to hide her treasures. Cobalt and the Porcupine country were unlikely looking spots, bare and barren and bushy, but look what they turned out to be, as the result of pioneer railroading into an unknown country where critics said railroad business available would not pay for the grease on the car axle wheels (a la Sir Richard Cartwright and the C.P.R.) British Columbia held hidden in its mountain fastness for a long time many fortunes in precious metals. Australia behind its almost impassable barrier of waterless desert held gold in millions and despite deserts and hostile natives the world made a pathway to the rich deposits. South Africa kept hidden its gold and diamonds for a long time until the outlanders came and restless adventurer prospectors kept picking at the rocks until discoveries were made. New Guinea, a most inhospital land, was selected by nature to hide vast gold deposits, protected by impenetrable jungles, and cannibal Indians who trusted not the stranger and preferred a dead stranger to a live one, rivers filled with rapids and man-eating alligators, added to the barriers against white man invasion, but the airplane solved all that, even to bringing in mining machinery. Now Alaska comes to the front again with platinum. Platinum fis worth $50 an ounce. In 1934 Alaska produced $54,600 in platinum, last year $312,000, and the prospects of a very large production this year is very promising. E. A. Rasmunson, president of the Bank of Alaska at Anchorage, predicts a tremendous production of platinum by 1939, and said it might upset the world market for the precious metal before them. Considerable glacier gold is also being taken out by platinum miners. Several large dredge outfits are preparing to go into actions in the area of the platinum bonanza find. The town of Platinum is on the seacoast where it blows hard and free and almost continuously, and almost always cold. Prospectors say that last year there were only three rainless days. It is a town of tents and log shacks as yet but growing and ambitious. It began with a trading post established four years ago by Capt. Peter Wold, one of those adventurers who are as much at home on the frozen rim of the world as they would be in Manhattan, only more so. The town is the centre of platinum mining activity in an area of one hundred square miles. Keep your eyes on Platinum City.

Prof. V. P. Hunt was recently presented with a handsome gold headed cane by the members of the M.C.O.A. Glee Club, in appreciation of his services as director.

There was a large crowd at Victoria Park to watch the sailing races. In the yacht race there were four starters, namely, Little Nell, owned by Hoopy and Diver of Trenton; Paloris, owned by Sandy Bigrwer, Valkyrie 2nd, of Trenton, and a nameless one owned by Matthew of Trenton. The latter retired upon the second round. At the start Little Nell took a decided lead and held it to the finish, winning by upwards of seven minutes. The Valkyrie finished second and the Paloris third. In the Knockabouts class, there were three entries, namely, the White Wings and Lily owned by A. Peters and Point Anne, and a nameless one owned by J. Hicks of Trenton. This was an interesting race. The Lily finished first the Hicks boat second and the White Wings third. Four boats entered in the Dinghy class, namely, Y-No, owned by J. Jones; Gengs owned by Reid; Jack The First, owned by Arthur Wallbridge, and a nameless one owned by Fred Wallbridge. Very shortly after the start Y-No took the lead with was by a considerable margin. Fred Wallbridge came second and Y-No third. The punt race was looked upon by many as the event of the day, and it certainly caused considerable interest, owing to the fact that there has been considerable rivalry during the past two or three years. A new punt was entered in this race and she is certainly a sailer. It was her first trip and she did well. She is named "After You", and is owned by N. Wemley. The other entries were as follows: The Lipton owned by W. Smith; King of the Waters, owned by J. Reeves; Imp, owned by R. Dunberry; King of the Plain owned by E. Kelloway; Blue Bird, owned by A. Dumesnil, and Tornado owned by D. Gleen. At the start "After You" took the lead and was never in danger of being overtaken. She won by a large margin. The Imp finished second and King of the Plain, third. The committee of management was composed of Messrs. W. Rogers, Thos. Ritchie, D. R. Lawren, T. Thomson and R. S. Hall. The I.O.O.F. Band rendered excellent music.

THESE'S NO SAFETY IN NUMBERS

Not Where Cities Are Concerned Anyway

The number of files that can trace their origin to one single female house-fly during the season runs into the millions.

When you consider that each single one of this host is an individual carrier of the worst sort of filth, it must be obvious how important it is to combat this menace. Flies delight in feeding on unsovereign germs, refuse, rotting animal and vegetable matter, horse manure, in fact, everything that is particularly obnoxious to us humans.

Think what may happen if one of the loathsome pests gets into a house and is left unmolested. The baby's bottle, even the sleeping baby's lips, and any food or drink left, are choice spots on which he will settle, leaving disease and even death in his wake.

What are we to do to fight this menace? Remove or protect all the breeding grounds we have mentioned and any others that may present themselves. Screen doors and keep doors and windows protected with wire-cloth screens. Cover all food and drink at all times. And, to make assurance doubly sure, place some Wilson's Fly Pads around the house in every room. Read and study the files and kill them all very quickly.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows was having fun around in the back street pretending we was kites of old fencing with some old sticks we found, and Shorty Judge got a splinter in his finger and in fetching it to pull it out for him but our finger nails wasn't long enough, and I said, Ol, let's pretend he's mortally wounded in combat and we have to help him home to his family.

With we started to do, Shorty pulling one arm around my should- ers and the other arm around Glasses Magee's shoulders and leaving his feet drag behind as he didn't have the strength to do anything else with them, and we started to take him around to the street where Shorty lives, and fellows following us saying, G, is he unconscious, do you think he'll live, maybe we better stop at some drug- ste's Lousa first, and different things, and when we was down at the corner but Platfoot the cop, saying, What's all this, what's been going on, what's a matter here?

We're taking him home, he'll be all rite, I said, and Platfoot said, All rite from what, what happened to him, speak up can't you?

And he started to push the fellows away so he could see what being more of them to push by that time on account of some strangers kids having joined the crowd, and Glasses Magee said, Aw, he'll be all rite.

What bit him, what was it I'm asking you, are you all reel' sold dum? Platfoot said, and Fods Simkins said, O, here comes his father.

Meaning Mr. Judge about a half a block away, and Shorty gave a jump as if he was suddenly struck by an electric shock and ran to beat the band as far as the dickins but no faster than the rest of us fellows.

"DISTANCE PHOBIA" ENDS ENCHANTMENT

Although the enchantment continued by the Leclair's country seat, a potent enough to overcome the disparity in their ages the "distance phobia" of which, 61-year-old William Kiery Leonard, professor at the University of Wisconsin, is a prey, was too, too much for his 20-year-old wife, Alice, to stand for, here. Mrs. Leonard has fled the "phobic prison," Mr. Sime, she says, in 1906 Mrs. Leonard discovered the professor, but later her attitude decree set aside and returned to him. The professor describes his phobia as a mental terror of being left alone, even though only a block from his home. Mrs. Leonard has now been granted her second decree.

Treat a Child As Human Being

Assuming Patronizing Attitude in Speech Has Harmful Effect

(By Lisl Crenelle)

"Well," one grandmother said to Roscoe "how you have grown!" And to Sister Susan he said, "Well, if you aren't getting to look just like your Mummy!"

Roscoe scowled and Susan smirked.

Other guests arrived and greeted them in the following manner: "How old are you, Roscoe? Guess how you've grown! And what a big girl Susie is getting to be, too!"

The children were not responsive. Roscoe looked sullen. Susan squirmed and simpered in a manner most unworthy of the intelligent six year old that she was.

"Poor little things! They're so shy, aren't they?" one of the guests was overheard commenting.

But the children were neither shy nor affected when Cousin Helen put in an appearance.

"Hello, fellahs," Cousin Helen said carelessly, in the same casual friendly but unsweetened tone that she used toward any woman and child alike.

Different Approach

"How's your swimming Roscoe?" Cousin Helen asked.

Roscoe grinned. "Swell!"

"Don't think it would be too cold for a little dip now?"

"It wasn't too cold for me, I know that," said Roscoe with eight-year-old pride.

Cousin Helen turned to Susan.

"How dress, Susan. Where did you get it? Been looking for a dress like that everywhere."

Susan stopped squirming and simpering and put on a businesslike expression. "Mother got it for me," she said, "but (she measured Cousin Helen with her eyes) I didn't see any big enough for you."

"Too bad." Cousin Helen said. "It's a good cut; nice color, too."

Susan looked down with pride at her dress. Cousin Helen joined her observation.

"She's nice," Susan said to Roscoe.

Can't Blame Them

The children are all right," Roscoe said scornfully.

It's true, the grownups have our nerves "talking down" to children. Who do we think we are anyhow? It's a mark of stupidity to be conceit, and nothing else; a conceit that might have a good awakening, too, if we could read the children's minds, or hear the way they talk about us when our backs are turned.

There is often more scorn than envy in their hearts. Who can you blame them?

How many problem children are created simply by manner of address! A child not only resents us for patronizing him but it puts him on the defensive, makes him afraid, sends the real child into hiding. A child can't be expected to be himself unless he's treated like a human being. And certainly you can't ever expect to know or understand a child you patronize or allow to be patronized.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"During the hard times she had all the hard work and I had all the misfortunes. She kept her job, because the girls in our place of business worked for less money. With a number of other men, I was fired. My boss was so good to me then that I hate to go back on her now, but the truth I don't love her any more. With better times I got a better job, and met another girl who is younger and better looking, and yet I feel like a sneak to go back on this girl who was so fine to me during my troubles.

"Not only did she lend me money, but she kept up my courage. She would cook me up the nicest little meals in her apartment, and tell me over and over again that I hadn't failed—I was only a victim of circumstances' Naturally, I remember all this with gratitude, but I don't love her any more.

"I have tried over and over again to make her aware of this change in my feeling, but being absolutely loyal herself, she can't understand that I am less loyal than she is. I have stayed away as much as a week at a time, and have been so touched by her lack of suspicion and her joy in seeing me when I've made up some silly lying excuse, which she has accepted unquestioningly.

"I hate my cowardice in not being able to come out and tell her, in a straightforward manner, that my feelings have changed. And I hate to take refuge in a letter and write her the truth. I just don't know what to do, and am writing in the hope you may have some helpful suggestion..

"The other girl is not a siren or a gold-digger or anything like that. She is young and radiant. We were thrown together in the new job, and promptly did the customary work.

"Coward".

Have you considered that a girl as fine as your fiancee would not want any man, no matter how much she loved him, to marry her as an act of charity.

A couple of generations ago, public sentiment would have been against you, if you did not lead to the altar any girl to whom you were engaged. And the word "coward," which means a pleas of sacrifice, certainly fulfilled the meaning of the word. So many a male martyr of those days.

The challenging 16-year old miss, who seemed the embodiment of feminine grace and loveliness to a young contemporary of your grandfather's —say about the Civil War period—had to be taken for better or for worse, if there had been an engagement, no matter how many times he had pulled out her.

Otherwise, the young person was apt to go into a decline and take to swooning, and her father and big brothers lost no time in assuring the unwilling suitor he had broken sweet sixteen's heart.

But to an independent, modern woman, such an arrangement would be intolerable. At whatever cost to herself, a fine woman, such as you describe your fiancee as being would never stand on her "rights", if she has any.

If there is a question of money a gold-digger might hold to the ancient tradition and murmur something about where her money could be seen. And there are definite grounds for such action on owes to a girl "in trouble"; if he is responsible.

But to a sensitive woman of delicate perceptions, the idea of marrying a man who no longer cares for her would be repulsive. There isn't any remedy but to tell the girl your feelings have changed.

Mid-Summer is Good Time To Correct Beauty Faults

By HELEN FOLLETT

THIS IS the season for a "wild binge" at the beauty shop. A whirlwind renovation should take place before one goes shopping for a wardrobe to replace early spring purchases that are looking a bit shabby.

If the budget is a bit low, you can have a spree at home.

Get after your arms. All arms look terrible in midsummer. Scrub them, lubricate them with cream, put almond meal on top of the emollient and wrap them in turkish towels that have been rung out of hot water. That is a grand treatment. While you're at it, work coconut oil into your scalp and into the cuticle around your finger nails.

Do some face and throat bleaching. Cut a lemon and rub the pulp over a clean skin surface. Use the leavings on your knees. They have been improved by exposure to sunlight on the beach.

Wash your hair and rub the flesh until it glows. Two hours later give yourself a rousing shampoo with neutral soap and do up your tress ends on curlers. You can dress yourself a hair cut if you like. Snip off half an inch of each strand before you wind it.

There is nothing like a general overhauling to make one feel refreshed. And it is such a bargain, too! It costs nothing but time and labor.

Red heads and blondes are seldom blessed with dark eyelashes. It is a tantalizing deficiency, but to darken them. It's all right if discretion is used. Mascara applied with a tiny brush will give more character to the upper lashes, but would only make the lower ones are treated. They'll accept only the slightest bit of coloring. Never let your sheer make it on the flesh below is disgrace.

The cream is suitable only for the eyebrows because it crumbles. As the whitens flutter, they cast tiny particles of carbon. Go slowly, those of you whose eye "furniture" need improving.

If you would be extra fastidious, take along a sample of your new frock when you buy your nail polish. All of my relatives are in a foreign country. How should they be advised of my intentions? Should the young lady write to them, though she does not know them?

Fred.

1. I like best the idea of your writing to the girl's parents at the time when she writes to them. You will, of course, in the important letter tell them all the things that they will want to know about the man who is fancy their daughter. Your family background, your age, about your position, your "prospects," your friendship with their daughter, now your plans for your marriage, and your plans for the new home. Try to put yourself in their place, and think of all the things that they will yearn to hear from you. And your fiancee should write the same general kind of letter to your parents. Her letter too should be newsy and friendly and informal, telling them all about herself and the plans for the future.

2. I like too your plan to be married in church, even if you do not have guests. You might have a best man, and your bride might have an attendant. You would go to the church, make the Arrangements as to time, the opening of the church and so forth. Then such a wedding you would both probably wear the traveling clothes in which you would start on your wedding trip.

3. It's the perfect idea to send marriage announcements to the list of your and your fiancee's relatives and friends. These will get ready to mail, engraved, addressed, stamped—directly after the ceremony has been performed. These marriage announcements should also be sent to your fiancee's relatives in Europe. If you are, at the time the announcements are ordered, definite about the new home address, the announcements may be enclosed with the announcement. It is not necessary to send At Home cards but it is thoroughly proper to do so, if you wish, and in your case, as many relatives abroad will want to know your future address, this would be an exceptionally convenient thing to do. The form is to have the At Home information on a separate card to go with the marriage announcements. And when the At Home cards are sent with the announcements, the bride and Mrs. names is used. Like this:

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Francis Hall

At Home

After the first of November Two Home place

4. It is you who would write to tell your relatives of your approaching marriage, or the young lady would write to her relatives.

5. I suggest that you consult with her as to her wishes about what initials she would prefer to have engraved on this set. The traditional form is to have the initials of the maiden names engraved on gifts before marriage but it is proper for her to have her married initials if she prefers.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Quiet Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been going with a young man and we have finally decided to announce our engagement, and be married in about two months. Neither of us has our parents living in this country, nor have we met each other's parents. Should I wait until the young man has written to her mother and told her of our engagement, or should I write at the same time?

As neither of us has any relatives in this country, and knowing that my fiancee would like to have a very quiet church wedding, what suggestions have you to offer. We do not wish any guests to be present so I am not asking any of our friends to any trouble.

2. How soon after the wedding should announcements be sent? As we will have to furnish our apartment when we return from our honeymoon, is it correct to show on the bottom of the announcement "At Home after?"

Bride.

1. Your fiancee is suitable only for the eyebrows because it crumbles. As the whitens flutter, they cast tiny particles of carbon. Go slowly, those of you whose eye furniture need improving.

2. If you would be extra fastidious, take along a sample of your new frock when you buy your nail polish. All of my relatives are in a foreign country. How should they be advised of my intentions? Should the young lady write to them, though she does not know them?

3. What initial should I have engraved on a silver set I intend to give her for a wedding present?

Fred.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

TYPICAL of the rich effects that will obtain next season is a coat of black woollen cut to simulate a loose, high, double-breasted jacket over a skirt. The bodice has huge black buttons with rhinestone centres and enormous double turnup stoles of silver fox add a note of luxury.

A PEEK at the advance millinery discloses a handsome tricorne beret of American Beauty felt with a huge matching rose placed across the front. A veil to match is draped over the back.

A SOFT BREEZE is a nice excuse for carrying over your evening frock a charming little cape of pale pink marabou with a border of pink ostrich.

THE ANSWER to the commuter's desire for a smart ensemble is a dress of navy pastel sheer, belt and collar of flowered chiffon match the long, flowing chiffon coat, done in a mountain-flower design of delicate green and blue.

TOO NICE to give up is the ligger coat, and so it appears with the new suits. A charming model is in light brown woollen with tailor-sewn color suede for scarf and the single button. The collar, stitched in front, disappears into a narrow line. There is shirring at the shoulder line.

3RD SIDNEY

3rd Sidney, July 30—Allen's ice cream social on Wednesday evening was well attended. Mrs. Wm. Wheeler acted as chairman for the program put on by the Austen family of Wooler. Miss Lena Smithland was the accordionist for the evening, and her humorous numbers were well received. The proceeds will add to the Sunday school treasury and were very gratifying to those in charge. Regrets were expressed that the pastor, Rev. H. R. Johnson was unable to be present on account of illness in his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Ray and family attended the North Hastings community picnic held at Oak Lake on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Leonard of Detroit, were guests last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Hubble.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Morton, Mrs. Ernest Morton, Mrs. Wm. Jackman of Stirling called on Mrs. Harley Hubble on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Pound, Canniffton, Miss Grace Pound, Trenton and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Greenley of Toronto spent Sunday at the home of Mr. T. H. Hubblife.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Westover, Miss May Hubble, Mr. David Hubble and Mr. Fred MacMullen of Belleville were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley May.

Miss M. Hazard of Trenton is this week with her niece Miss F. Hinchliffe and attended the picnic on Tuesday spending the supper hour with Mr. and Mrs. Harper Rollins, Oak Lake.

EXPERT "RIFLEMAN"

Jean Kunkel, 16-year-old Los Angeles girl, shown with her rifle, received notice from Washington, D.C., that she has been honored with the rating of "expert rifleman" in the junior division of the U.S. National Rifle Association. There's only one grade higher in the association ranks, that of "distinguished rifleman." Now she's gunning for that!

Giants and Cubs Open Series Which May Have Real Bearing On Winner of National Pennant

Cubs Enjoy a Present Time Three Game Lead Over Giants

BOTH LOSE YESTERDAY

Dickey Defeats Tigers With Home Run in Last Half of Ninth

(By Ed Fuller)
Associated Press Sports Writer)

Either the Cubs or the Giants are all built up for another awful let down this week-end.

Beginning today in Chicago they open the second act of their private battle for the National League lead. And the three-game series, straight week-end series should come a fairly definite line on which of the two outfits will finish with the flag.

The Cubs at the moment, have a three-game lead on the Giants, and the rest of the loop, strung out seven games and more behind seems to be little interested in any such tempo to overtake the two leaders.

Last week, the Cubs took two out of three from the Giants in New York. Since then neither outfit has looked like champions as they set their stage for the current series.

Yesterday each made ready for the other by dropping their starts. The Cubs were given a thorough going-over by Fred Frankhouse and Brooklyn Dodgers and wound up on the short end of a 10-3 count. The Giants were handcuffed by Lefty Bob Weiland and lost a 4-2 decision to the Cardinals, all of which left the Cubs still with a three-game lead.

Gumbert Nominated

Harry Gumbert, who blanked the Cubs in last Friday's game, came to the surprise of the Giants in general and Harry Gumbert in particular, when Bill Terry's nomination to start the pitching for today. He runs up against Bill Lee, the Cubs' No. 1 pitcher.

The Yankees wound up their series with the Detroit Tigers yesterday by taking a 7-6 close one on Bill Dickey's homer with two on and two strikes on him in the ninth inning.

The defeat dropped the Tigers back into third place in the American League, and made room for Jim White 6ix to climb back into second by slipping Washington Senators 2-0.

Cincinnati Reds were muffled with four hits by Jim Turner and nosed out by Boston Bees 2-1 to fall back into a tie for fifth place with Brooklyn. Dolph Camilli's homer with the bases clear gave the Phillies an 11-7 win over the Pirates.

Jimmy Foxx hammered home No. 26 and the Red Sox socked the Browns 5-3. The Athletics' fielding fell apart in the ninth inning, and handed the Indians a 8-4 victory.

THUNDER IN MITTENS BUT BOMBER LOUIS EXPECTED TO WIN

(By Alan Randel, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Long Branch, N.J., July 30 (CP)—There's thunder in Tommy Farr's mittens and he is a right nice fellow but the feeling grew today that only a combination of Joe Louis and Aug. 30 is needed to turn tough Tommy back forward the ponderous coal caverns from whence he came.

Newspapermen who watched the British Empire heavyweight champion at his training camp came away feeling Farr needs a miracle or two to be the master of the thing ahead of him to do proper battle against Louis for the world title.

They were impressed with the Welshman's left hook and straight ones but had little to say for his battling beyond the fact a Farr punch, when it connects, seems to carry something.

Thin Punishment

He took punishment for every blow he landed in his workout and the features of Joe Wagner, a Newark light-heavyweight, and most of Joe's jolts were straight lefts to the defenceless face of the swivelling coal miner.

As the Empire champ fidied about for his opening he carried his own left at his level and made his chin a target Joe Louis would shoot at only when he's ready. Ringsiders agreed, the willing Welshman would make some spot where behind Yankee stadium's third baseline, quite probably without a chin when one considers Joe's right hand weapon is his darting left-handed cyanamide.

Against Steve Kotucol, lumbering Jersey heavy, Farr looked better though Steve didn't have Wagner's left hand. It was here Youngstown Tommy uncorked his "Welsh wonder" punch, the bloodletter three with this left which, as he himself puts it, "starts between my hips and ends between my head and my left half-uppercut."

Farr Explains Blow

In his dressing room Farr explained the punch and how he got rid of his best bets in spite of suggestions he held his left hand too low for good defense when he was ready to toss the wallop.

"That's my best punch, Tommy. "You haven't seen me really hook it. You get a left hook on me from Tom, they're good boys, Steve and Joe, and if I did they wouldn't come on.

"I start down here," he said, crouching with his left hand not far from the floor, "and I come up with a hook and uppercut that's very troublesome. Let me say when a fighter gets nine or 10 of them in the face he begins to wonder if it's all worth while."

New York, July 30—(AP)—Western operatives say the Yankees struck pay dirt through the gate when they got the Kansas City Club.... All Colonel Ruppert has to do is put a good team out there and the gold will flow.....He red hot baseball territory.....

The Dodgers, almost to a man, pick the Cubs.....Gladdest of all to see the Tigers leave town was Mike Jacobs, for Joe Louis has been doing most of his training at the Stadium.....Minneapolis and St. Paul, last of the big Minor League outfits to yield to the night baseball fever, are packing 'em in.....You don't hear old Cobby Street horsing do you?.....He's on double pay.....When he quit as manager of the St. Paul Saints the directors voted him full salary for the rest of the season.....Then Cobby caught on as coach for the Bronos.

A record delegation of British scribes is coming over for the Farr-Louis bout.....Trevor Wignall of the Express, already on the job, says every London paper and News Agency will have a man at the ringside, about 20 in all.....Previous high for the British was 41 Miami when six of them saw Phil Scott fight Jack Sharkey.....

Tommy Farr and his manager, Ted Broadribb, still are feuding.....Why don't the New York Boxing Commission hold Farr post a $25,000 guarantee to defend the title here (if he beats Louis) as it did in the Max Schmeling case?.....One reason why Hank Greenberg is pasting the ball apple is that every day the Tigers play at home he goes to Navin field at 11 a.m. for batting practice.

Although the attendance was not as large as expected, some worth while suggestions were forthcoming and as they are undeveloped at the present time no comment will be made until they mature. The meeting was in accord with the recent ruling of the O.R.F.U. with respect to the new series inaugurated which allows the teams in intermediate and junior series, which finish second in the regular schedule to carry on as "p" entrants in the Provincial playdowns. There will be no playoffs in this district as the other years which may in a measure detract from the attendance but the team finishing second can make their mark in the other playdowns. If a team is entered, it will have to be the best that can be obtained in the district for Peterboro and Cobourg are loaded. A drive for membership will be one of the chief objectives of the club from now till the opening of the season and if this is successful it is almost assured there will be a team from Belleville in the league. The meeting was more of a round table conference with the object from which news could be gathered.

Tonight is community night at the two playgrounds and the public is invited to join with the children in enjoying the games that are being staged. This is a new idea in supervision work and is proving popular with the grand idea. There will be games for young and old at the two playgrounds every night again and play with their children and other neighborhood children in the recreations and get an insight as to what the club is endeavoring to do in a community. The Kiwanis Club and the Board of Education have made the playgrounds possible and it is to be hoped a large number of the parents of teams will be out to assist the children in supervised play.

Although the local fair is nearly four weeks away, Jack Lafferty, member of the Parks Board and chairman of the race track, is a busy man, and the horses that will compete here on the speeding events will have a fast pace of dirt to move over. Each of the Belleville meet comes between the meet at Ottawa and the big week at Toronto and there is never a dearth of horses as the owners can pick up a good card by splitting the jump. This is the idea of several owners with the result that two or three bearcats in their division give the racing fans of the district a real thrill. Incidentally a race meet at Napanee on Monday will attract the horse lovers of the district. Lester Boyce has three classes open for decision and it is stated there will be a large number of entrants in every class.

After Endeavour I, unsuccessful challenger for the American Cup in 1934 defeated Rangwe, Vanderbilt's luxury craft and defender of the trophy this Saturday against Sopwith's Endeavour II, the betting boy took to cover and the odds dropped from two to one to 15 to 7. The Endeavour I clearly outsailed the Ranger over a forty-three mile course with Samuel Hoyt, who will be on Endeavour II on Saturday, at the wheel. Hoyt was in the afterguard of the Rainbow in 1934 when Endeavour I was defeated by Sopwith has two strings to his bow this year. He has a faster boat in Endeavour II than the 1934 challenger, and he has the skipper that knows the water off Newport and also knows some of the methods of Vanderbilt. Crowds are flocking to Newport and a thrilling struggle is expected for a cup that is valued at a little over $500 but for which millions have been spent. Endeavour II was given a final tuning up on Thursday and is ready for her supreme test. Both Mrs. Sopwith, and Mrs. Vanderbilt will be on the respective boats, when they go to the line.

Last night the Corbin Locks assured themselves of finishing second in the local softball world by virtue of a 5-4 victory over the Percivals. This evening the major two battles of the season are on as the Aajmaas and Percivals are battling for the remaining play-off berth in the league. As things stand now the Aajmaa kids and the Percival Stores are tied for fourth position. The former are playing at Point Anne, while the Percivals take on the Belleville Sargents locally. If either team wins and the other loses, the victor will finish in fourth position, but if both win or both lose, doubleheader a play-off for fourth place will be necessary. Con Harris was on the Corbin slab last evening and scattered seven hits well to coast in to a 6-0 victory. The softball moguls have had a splendid season, tonight seeing the wind-up of the regular league schedule. Incidentally have you tendered your all star selection for Monday's benefit game as yet? FOOTBALL CLUB TO STAGE DRIVE FOR MEMBERSHIP

Campaign Will be Inaugurated Next Week By Club Members

CITY IS ZONED

Each Group Given a List of Names on Which to Call

A membership drive will be inaugurated next week and on the success of that drive will depend the future of football in this city. A meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. on Thursday evening with many interested parties present and with P. C. MacLaurin, president of the club in the chair, the situation was discussed from all possible angles and a decision to hold the membership drive was made. The city will be divided into zones and more than 1000 persons will be contacted by teams working in each zone.

There were two rates set, one of $6 and one of $3. These rates will give those of moderate and more than moderate means a chance to assist in this cause. The club has a deficit but one that can be taken care of by a little help on the part of the citizens. The drive is not only inaugurated to clear up the deficit but to provide a sum, whereby the Football Club can expand and become a worthwhile sporting organization in this city. The equipment on hand needs replenishing throughout, new jerseys and the like. The team will be one that the City Club is the best, that money can be raised for, while fools, that with a little co-operation one of the strongest teams in Eastern Ontario city can be fielded in the intermediate ranks this season. That the drive is completely enthusiastic with respect to the drive has been shown by the fact that in a working condition. As soon as the drive is completed there will be a complete meeting of the club and strong set of officers will be put into charge. The drive is now in prominent citizens offering their services.

SALUTE TO Love

The old gentleman decided to substitute a key for the drink affair for compromising being both the blessing and the curse of his character. (Indeed, it was.) He sat back in a chair, spread a clean handkerchief over his face, and fell to dreaming of the times when the Meads were somebody. As he breathed, the handkerchief rose and fell, rose and fell..... He dreamed that somebody was pouring tea from a handsome silver pot that stood on a great silver tray. The gentleman beside him who had just been served was General LaFayette, an amiable person, to be sure.... "Thank you, General LaFayette," he was saying to him, "for admiring our silver service. It came from England, no, not Sheffield, Sterling, sir.....Yes, General, when the Civil War comes on we'll take you to bury it. The Yankees would melt it down in a hurry.... And then General Lafayette changed into a blue-coated Uncle captain, and 40 years had passed like the flit of a bird's wing. The Union captain was about to drop the silver service, tray, pot and all, into a glowing cauldron.

The dreamer cried out in loud protest, and suddenly Zeke was shaking his shoulder and saying urgently, "Wake up, Major Sam! You've been 'ole de nightmarest! Wake up an' eat yoah supper!"

Sam Mead came awake then and looked at the old colored man. "Zeke," he said, "I've been dreaming about the Mead silver. I must stuff my mother had buried during the Civil War. I wonder what ever happened to it?"

Zeke answered in a puzzled voice, "Lawd a-mercy, Major Sam! You ain't thought o' dat stuff since I was a boy. Ole Miss used to tell diggin' fer it. It's done rot in de ground, I reckon."

"Silver doesn't rot," Major Mead said. "Well, it's gone now. So's everything. Sure you won't come to the gria, Zeke. They'd take it right hard if it didn't come into their minds. Especially Mike Kale. She's high-strung. She'll be sure to get hard to lose a silver service that's poured tea for General LaFayette."

"Yassah, Ma'sr. Major. What's buried's buried. Ain't no use stirrin' up de mess. I'm gwine to de kitchen an' eat my supper."

"Zeke, Mike Kale's coming over and looked at the old colored man. "Zeke," he said, "I've been dreaming about the Mead silver. I must stuff my mother had buried during the Civil War. I wonder what ever happened to it?"

Zeke answered in a puzzled voice, "Lawd a-mercy, Major Sam! You ain't thought o' dat stuff since I was a boy. Ole Miss used to tell diggin' fer it. It's done rot in de ground, I reckon."

"Silver doesn't rot," Major Mead said. "Well, it's gone now. So's everything. Sure you won't come to the gria, Zeke. They'd take it right hard if it didn't come into their minds. Especially Mike Kale. She's high-strung. She'll be sure to get hard to lose a silver service that's poured tea for General LaFayette."

"Yassah, Ma'sr. What's buried's buried. Ain't no use stirrin' up de mess. I'm gwine to de kitchen an' eat my supper."

The "young critters" meanwhile, were parting their car in the rear of the Chenault place and dutifully in at the back entrance. They knew the layout of the premises so they were permitted to go up the back stairs to the room reserved for them. Somehow the extraordinarily festive about the place had made them shed their dignities.

Kale opened the bags and hung up their evening dresses while Caroline arranged their toilet articles on the dressing table. Kale combed her hair to Caroline's "Charlotta, the self-assured lilt of his head. Kale thought, "He's smooth, isn't he?" Yet the realization did not disgust her. It stimulated her, rather, and excited her. She told herself proudly, "He's more outstanding than these easterly boys. He has everything...."

She caught his eye. She lifted the hand that rested on the unsuspecting Dartmouth shoulder and touched her fingers childishly. Morgan smiled tenderly in return, but he did not come to her....Mike Kale broke their rendezvous with hers and turned toward the stairs.

Eve Elwell was coming down. She was wearing pale yellow satin, cut on clinging lines, and rhinestones sparkled in her hair.Somehow hair crowned her head in small contrived ringlets which climaxed in curly bangs across her forehead. The effect was a theatrical sophistication. She seemed not to be a pretty girl at an informal dance but a light opera queen starting for the ball.

The stag line was drawn toward her as surely as steel filings are drawn to a magnet. Through the crowd of men at the foot of the stairs Morgan Prentiss moved deliberately until he had reached the golden creature who stood there.

"Let's dance, Eve!" he said. And, to the boys who surrounded her, "Back, fellas! Father!"

Kale heard and saw. She caught her breath so audibly that she thought Morgan must have left it in length and looked at her. "What's the matter, Wonder? Scared?" he asked slowly.

"Not at all. "Oh no! Let's dance fast. Let's rio!!"

Turning and dipping madly through the crowd with the boy Dartmouth chap, she felt the hot tears of his pride burn her eyelids. She blinked them back and smiled up at him intimately and said, "Bill, I'm going to save the sugar cones and intermission for Morgan if you want me to."

"Want you to!" he repeated, and held her intimately close. Kale was miserable and bored. She wished she were dead.

Eventually Morgan came to dance with Kale. He found her artificially animated. She found him courteously evasive. Kale said, unthinking, too brightly for his eye, "However did you and Eve happen to get together? I thought she was coming with that Lexington man."

Morgan replied, "She was. But he got himself in a drunken mix-up bag. Wrecked his car and couldn't get here. Eve brought me."

Just the barest outlines. No details. He softly hummed the tune that the orchestra was playing. His thoughts seemed remote.

They danced on and on. Through two entire numbers. Kale felt that he wanted to be rid of her. She flicked hurrying, "Lord, there's somebody cut in. so he'll think I'm popular! Kale somebody cut in—

x x x

Nobody cut in. Kale had burned her bridges a year ago. She was Morgan Prentiss' girl, and she hadn't taken care to hide it....She saw Johnnie Baird coming the floor.-She smiled at him, remembering that he used to drive four miles to see her when she was 15. Johnnie smiled back, but kept to his course. He cut in on Eve Elwell and had time to dance a dozen exciting steps with her before Morgan claimed her.

Kale said to Morgan, "Eve's getting a rush tonight."

"Always does," Morgan answered, which made Kale's cheeks a little sound critical rather than complimentary. Kale's cheeks burned. Her heart was heavy. She thought, "So this is the way you feel when your lover's slipping away!" Suddenly she couldn't bear it. She couldn't bear the feeling that Morgan was a thousand miles away while his arm was around her. She couldn't bear the way he kept moving in close to Eve, calling bits of nothing to her as they danced. She couldn't bear the way Eve was encouraging him, flirting with him....

"Let's stop dancing, Morgan!" she cried. "I'm going outside."

"Try and find a place," Morgan replied. "The porch is full. So's the lawn."

Kale said boldly, "Our old car's parked beside the garage."

She walked out of the room and down the hall, Morgan silent to follow. He came. She led the way to the back yard, past the back kitchen door, to the old car. She opened the rear door and got in. He followed....."Now kiss me!" she said with a small shaky laugh that was not as gay as its actions.

Morgan complied. The role of aggressor was not unfamiliar to him. Kale quivered happily as he crushed her to him and pressed her cheek against his own. Music and laughter came drifting out to her. Fragrance of flowers and fragrances filled the air with fragrance. It was a moment that was inspired by such a setting, but this night did not count to Kale. She felt that she had miraculously found Morgan again and that her own stupid pride was lost.

Presently the screen of the back door banged shut and Eve Elwell man picked up a freezer of ice cream and carried it into the kitchen.

"Sssssst!" Kale said. "Sssssst already!" she added. "Eve's coming to go back, Morgan—I've promised her the car—Sssssst! You'll be late in going to look after Eve, too—"

Yet she stayed a moment longer in his arms and laughed happily when he said, "Damn Cynthia's man! And Eve, too! This is more important—"

She took him into the house again, as he knew she would. He had finessed and won.

Much later, just before dawn, when Kale and Caroline were getting ready into bed, Kale said contritely, "Did you have a good time, Carol? I completely lost track of you."

"Wonderful," Caroline answered. "Not a rush like Cyn and Eve had, of course, but a good steady pace. Stuff last longer."

"I'm so glad, honey," Kale said happily. "Any party?"

Caroline told her, "But I'm too sleepy to go into it now. Remind me tomorrow to tell you something old Mrs. Dodd Chenault told me. It's about a silver tea service."

CHAPTER XIII.

The day after the Chenault dance found Kale in quite a subdued and strangely restless. She said to the old servant in the middle of the afternoon, "Go rest yourself, Althy, and let me do the ironing."

"No, m'am," came the reply. "It's perticuler 'bout my ironin'. You go take a nap."

But Kale was not sleepy, in spite of the fact that she and her sister had risen quietly at 9 and driven home before the rest of the household party was awake. She said to Althy, "I'm anything but sleepy. I'm not hungry today either. Just let me iron."

"I reckon somethin' went wrong at de party dance," Althy commented shrewdly. "Was Mr. Morgan Prentiss up an' pesterin' her?"

Kale laughed. "He was for a while, Althy, but afterward things went all right. That is, I think she hesitated, "things were almost all right. Althy, that reminds me, some woman tried to take Zeke away from you."

The old woman's strong brown face took on a menacing look. "I reckon a little was figure of 'er an' throw it in de fire and melt it down fer a hair pin. Or else I'd slash her with a sharp- razor blade. I'd tend to 'er!"

"Not that sort of stuff's not civilized," Kale said reprovingly. "Besides, she was not interested as Caroline would have been. Kale then recalled Althy's love of the glimpses the primitive Africa that lay just under the surface. Something childish and reckless in her own nature responded, even while she laughed.

At this moment a commotion among the fowls in the yard sent Althy hurrying outdoors, and Kale took up the iron to finish a half-dried shirt.

Kale, as she worked, thought of the electric iron and sweeper and refrigerator that had been theirs in Mead Meadows. Those things that had lightened their mother's work. The mountaineer's property now, she remembered resentfully. Jeff Howard's. The Major had sold them to him, along with the lamps, because "Hillbilly Bonnie" was not modern.-Had he set up housekeeping decently, she wondered. Or was he merely living there with dogs, like a camper in a shack? She recalled his big, loose-knit frame, his narrowed eyes and disdainful smile, his crawling mountain voice that seemed to say more than it uttered, less than it meant. Now she hated him! For years the hatred would lie dormant; then it would come scathing up to leave her wild and shaken with its force. She whispered, "I hate him more than I love Morgan. How can that be?" The mountaineer had become a giant in her path. At times she could not see around him.

Caroline came into the kitchen in kimono and bedroom slippers. The smooth ash-colored hair that she usually wore in a knot was now plaited in two children braids. Kale was struck anew by the calmness and reverence of this little sister who was two years her senior, yet seemed infinitely younger.

Caroline's face was flushed from her nap. "Hello, Kale, honey! Can me help you? Where's Althy?"

Kale said, "No help. Just all-thing Althy's killing a snake. The chickens were making an awful racket. I'm glad you waked. I heard a lot of pounding and mutilating. What's it going to remind you of today? Something about old Mrs. Dodd Chenault and a teapot—"

"Oh, yes!" Caroline said. "The old lady's coming down to see you, you know. She came from Lexington last week. Some of the downstairs last night just before supper to look the party over. Didn't you see her, by the way?"

"No," Kale answered, not looking up. She had been dressing then again. Wasn't it sort of late for her to be up?"

"It was, of course, but everybody thought it was awfully cute of her, coming at 90, and coming down in a lace collar and false curls to look things over in the evening. I saw her and she used a cane, but it was a risk on account of the slippery floors. We were all introduced to her, and when she heard my name began to talk about Mead Meadows. It seems she used to visit there when she was a girl. Before the Civil War—can you imagine that? Well, she wanted to know if the family's ever recovered the tea service and when I asked her what tea service she meant she said the big sterling silver one they used for General LaFayette, of course!"

x x x

"Bosh!" Kale snorted, nursing a burn on her palm. "She's dreaming. If there'd been anything like that in the family, we'd have known about it."

"Maybe not," Caroline said. "Old Mrs. Chenault seemed to be clear about it in her mind. She said the Meads buried it during the Civil War and when they went to look for it afterward, they couldn't find it. She said it was Jefferson Mead—that's Grandad's mother—was so sensitive over losing it that he never would let anybody hear about it afterward."

"You mean," Kale asked slowly, "that it's supposed to be still buried? They never found it at all?" "It seems that way," Caroline answered.

Kale began to pace the floor. "It's prob'ly true," she said bitterly. "It's just as well. It'd be hard to be true. To hear about it too late."

Caroline nodded. "If we'd known sooner, we'd have had the whole yard dug up looking for it. We might have yet."

Kale paused in her pacing and pounded the table with her hands. "Yes," she said violently. "It's still there! It's on Jeff Howard's land! Our silver—"

Caroline realized her excitement. "Don't take it that way, Kale! I only told you because I thought it was a good story. I'd never have repeated it if I'd known you'd go to pieces like this—"

"I'm not going to pieces!" Kale stormed, which proved to Caroline that she was. "Where's Grandad? Where's Zeke? I'll find out if this thing's true or not!"

Althy entered the kitchen with an air of importance. "Done kill a mighty fine snake, Miss Kale!" she announced. "Rung 'im up head downwards fer luck, fetchin' things. He was in de chicken house doah. I fix 'im!"

"Are you sure the thing's dead?" Caroline asked with a shudder. "I hate having even a snake die by halves."

"He's daid all right," Althy assured her. "I'm sho' he was. I'm goin' into gruesome details when Kale interrupted her impatiently. "Never mind, Althy. Where's Zeke and Major Mead?"

Althy was resentful. It was not every day that she killed a snake. "Major Sam's gone t' weed de front door," she said sullenly. "I reckon he want to get hisself a nap in de parlor. Zeke, he—"

"He'll have to talk to me first," Kale replied. Caroline followed her, genuinely alarmed over the shiny excitement her story had aroused in Kale. She felt that her grandfather would be upset, too.

They found the old gentleman seated in a chair, gently swishing at a fly with his ancient panama hat. Kale exclaimed, "Did you ever hear anything about any buried silver over at the old place, Grandad?"

Major Mead stopped swishing and looked at her. "I thought I told Zeke to keep his mouth shut about that dream. I'd like to whack his black hide for it, too! That silver's gone forever."

"Oh," replied Kale thoughtfully. "So there really is some lost silver. And you've had a dream about it, too. That makes it an omen."

"Omen, my foot!" exclaimed the Major, unlatching his black string of tie and loosening his collar. "Omens ain't civilized. I told Zeke not to get you stirred up about that old silver—"

Caroline interrupted hastily, "Zeke didn't do it, Grand'dad. It was I. It's just a coincidence. I've been telling Kale the story old Mrs. Dodd Chenault told me last night at the party. She's Cynthia's great-great aunt, you know, from Lexington. Well, it seems she used to visit at Mead Meadows when she was young, and she was recalling big silver tea service that was used for LaFayette. She said it was buried for safe-keeping during the Civil War and never found again. Kale and I would like to know if it's buried!"

"It's true," Major Mead replied, "but I'm right sorry it's come up. Things like that just prey on the mind and do no good. Perhaps it was intended for that silver to stay under ground. My mother had buried it deep, I reckon. I've dug around the garden and orchard dug around,-but never a sign of it."

"Why didn't she know where it was buried?" Kale demanded.

"Well," said Major Mead, "it was this way. Ma had a sick child and died. My father was off at a war and most of the slaves had left. One day—one August morning, it happened—she heard a raiding party was coming through, so she scrapped the silver in some old velvety curtains and told Pompey, the butler,-to bury it-quick. She pointed out a spade to him in the flower bed-and told him to bury it—quick! I guess he either in the back yard or orchard. 'Dig deep,' she said, 'and put it and back carefully!' She went upstairs then to see the sick child, and that's

If you are driving

This Week-end

Try Courtesy

every inch of the way

ANOTHER week-end is here and for the residents of many municipalities it includes a Civic Holiday. Traffic will be unusually heavy with the comings and goings of gay holiday-makers. Will the price of this week-end be measured by pleasant memories or by the tragedy of accidents and death on the streets and highways?

The answer is "up to" every motorist. If you will "Try Courtesy" every inch of the way in your driving this week-end you will have done your part to make this an accident-free week-end.

Wait when it seems courteous to do so, and give your fellow-motorist a chance to pull-out, turn or park. Always hand-signal your intention to slow down, change direction or stop. Sound your horn (briefly) when you are about to overtake another motorist. Drive in your own traffic lane on both streets and highways. Where there are children or cyclists always drive with extra caution. Drive at the speed of the traffic you are in and do not compel others to go or cause others to do so. Do not jockey with your fellow motorists. It is dangerous to do so and may result in a serious accident.

Be guided by these suggestions in your driving this week-end and thereby do your part to avoid accidents that may injure or kill you or some other equally happy holiday-maker.

the last she thought of it for a month, for little John died of typhoid, and Mrs. Mead died of up to her grief. Pompey himself left the day the soldiers came through. He just laid down some pans he was scouring, and went off. I took off his apron and walked off with the troops. But they don't think he ever ran away. He's fond about the silver. He was honest and loyal. Pompey's only fault was being lazy."

The girls listened to their grandfather absent-mindedly. Caroline it was merely a sweet old romance, colored with sadness. To Kale it was a tale "to be continued." Already she was plotting.

CHAPTER XIV.

Kale told herself, "I'll go about this lost silver business like a detective." And she did.

She asked her grandfather to repeat the story of the buried tea service in detail until he was impatient with her persistence. She probed Zeke's memory for all that it would yield. Both of them lived of the silver's burial only from hear-say, yet what they did know was exact and valuable for Kale's purpose. She carried a notebook around with her, and when she got hot weather. Stranger yet, she seemed not to notice Morgan's neglect of her. She had written in her notebook all that could be recalled about Pompey, the butler. He was said to be genial, pleasant with pets. Honest, except about liquor. Loyal. Proud of family traditions. Wavy.....

a clew she wrote it down.

Caroline said to the Major, "It's as if she's obsessed, Grand'dad. What on earth does she hope to get out of it?"

"I've no idea," replied the puzzled old man.

Kale became so engrossed that she failed to notice the uneasy

Board Room Gossip

MARKET COMMENT.

The rejection of the ticket would indicate that it is not expected that the "Ripley" plan of reorganization for Abitibi will go through as promulgated. However, it will take several proceedings on the part of those opposed in order to prevent it from coming into force under the Ontario Judicature Act.

During a visit to Montreal this week, K. J. P. Ripley cited several of the many objections the Bondholders' Protective Committee has certain against the plan brought out by the Liquidator. These include the proposition that not enough money is provided under the McPherson proposal and the fact that present bondholders find slightly objectionable the $1,000,000 annual seral payments suggested. Other points on which the McPherson plan is considered objectionable by the bondholders include the question of preemptory rights, the selection of the board by the Liquidator, the fact that dividends are provided no open end for future financing, the fact that the proposed new first mortgage bonds are not convertible and the lack of provision for dilution protection.

Mr. Ripley emphasizes that under the bondholders' plan, when contracted with that advanced by the Liquidator, there is raised $3,000,000 of new money added at the same time results in $2,000,000 less of bonded debt and 200,000 fewer new common shares.

Aircraft Engages Attention of Canada Car

From the point of view of the equipment manufacturers and those producing materials in the business into which make rolling stock for the railways, much disappointment is presently evident at the cancellation of the wheel yield indicated in the Canadian West this year. After the first real satisfactory year in about five or six, the equipment manufacturers were looking forward to a continuance of this betterment to be reflected in orders for freight cars and other heavy materials. All this would now appear to be out of the question for the time being.

Despite this unsatisfactory turn of events which must dampen enthusiasm somewhat for the immediate future of the heavy equipment makers, the public should not lose sight of the many other branches of the machinery and equipment business which are still facing a very sanguine period. This needs of the mining industry—precious metal, base metal and non-metallic—are far from satisfied. Traffic on urban transportation systems has been growing moderately in the recent past, and this development, should it continue, dictates a certain amount of profitable business for the equipment companies. Obsolescence of buses and street cars has taken its toll during the depression period and depreciation was even noticeable in some localities before 1929.

Perhaps the most interesting factor in the equipment business, at least with respect to transportation, is the promising outlook for commercial aircraft, a vision of the future which dwarfs the new transportation era of the past. Few far-sighted and practical visionaries deny that flying on a commercial and economical basis will be quite as general and successful as motor car and truck highway transportation became after the turn of the century.

To this end, such companies as Canada Car and Foundry Company while not anticipating results prematurely, are none the less leaving no stone unturned to stimulate, by every legitimate means, the interest in commercial aircraft, and are preparing themselves for the day when orders for planes will make. Financial Service understands that the new plant facilities which was reported many months ago to have several patents for use in connection with manufacture of planes, has recently acquired manufacturing and export rights in all Canada for the Stinson plane. As far as can be learned, efforts will be made to popularize this type of passenger carrier in the Dominion, and it is believed that the company's shops have the facilities for making this machine in sizable quantities. A sales agency has been set up under the aegis of the Canadian Car and Foundry Co. and demonstrations are being given to prospective business men or others who are susceptible to the new mode of travel. Machines of this type usually sell from $11,000 to have a cruising speed of approximately 150 miles an hour and consume in the neighborhood of one gallon of gasoline every 10 miles. The particular type of flying machine under discussion has met with commendable success in the United States during the past few years.

Cockshutt Plow

About one third of the capital stock of the Cockshutt Plow Company Limited is held in England. Among the principal stockholders is Lord Baldwin, a former Prime Minister of Great Britain. He became a shareholder when as Stanley, investment house purchased the Cockshutt concern in 1911. In September, 1922, the management of the Cockshutt Plow made an arrangement on a barter basis with the N. A. Lister Company of Dursley, Gloucestershire, whereby the latter undertook to distribute Cockshutt products in England and the Cockshutt Company sold Lister products in Canada. This barter transaction has worked out satisfactorily. Sales of ploys this year through this source have been over $100,000. Export of farm implements from Canada in 1936 totalled $1,051,892 as against $676,105 same month in 1935. The management of the Cockshutt Plow report that they have participated in these gains in a satisfactory manner. This company's export market was chiefly the Argentine, the United Kingdom and South Africa.

The drought damage to Western wheat crops this year will effect the company adversely and collections will be slow in that section. Notwithstanding this condition however, it looks as though Cockshutt Plow will make progress during its fiscal year.

"We're getting on," Howe said. Then he stepped into the plane, which will be used for aerial photographers. The ship moved off the field.

Ranger Defeated By Endeavour I In Lengthy Race

By TOM HORGAN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Newport, R.I., July 30.—(AP)—Although lumbering she will meet Endeavour II, Tom Sopwith's challenger Britain, champion for the America's Cup, Harold S. Vanderbilt's 12-metre sloop Ranger today in a race with three previously unscheduled contenders for a thorough examination of yachting supremacy in United States waters.

Only weather conditions so inclement as to endanger lives are going to keep hef at her mooring, Vanderbilt stated.

First Defeat

Ranger yesterday, after thirteen straight victories, suffered her first defeat. Endeavour I, the sloop with which Sopwith won the first America's trophy three years ago, left Ranger in third place, after a 37 mile race from Newport Light, by a margin of more than three minutes. Gerard W. Lambert's Yankee captured second position, finishing nearly seven minutes ahead of Ranger. Edward V. and Chandler Hoyey's Rainbow, a poor fourth, trailed the leaders by more than 20 minutes. These are the entries for today's sailing duel.

American at Wheel

In becoming Ranger's first competitor, one of all English challenges had an American at her wheel. Charles Ernest Hoyt, who was master of Vanderbilt's Alfergurd when he sailed to victory over Sopwith's endeavour I in 1934, and previously in 1930, when Enterprise vanquished Sir Thomas Lipton's last green challenger, Shamrock V.

Now Rainbow is owned and skippered by Chandler Hovey, Commodore of the Eastern Yacht Club, which conducted a series of races ending today, and Frederick Sopwith owns Endeavour I.

The difference in the temperaments of the two men, challenger and defender, has been sharply illustrated as the last test drew near.

Sopwith Confident

Sopwith acknowledged criticism for failing to place the two Endeavours in stiff competition before the International contest by asserting inferiority of Endeavour II was the faster boat.

Vanderbilt, on the other hand, charged with subjecting the defender to competition "almost as heavy as in competition virtually up to the last moment, has offered no comment. He has purposely kept his manner of interest asking outwardly calm and unbrushed, although almost from the start Ranger has shown to be a speedier candidate. Ranger is much faster than Yankee and Rainbow, the unofficial sagittals for defence nomination.

You Can't Eat Flags

A sinister, menacing crowd, they huddled together on the water front long after the fourth of July celebrants had gone home. After a day of yacht racing, the boats had been docked and moored, but still no sheer the vanished gaiety but the blackened stubs of exploded firecrackers. Still the group pressed together shoulders bent, striving to keep out the cold as they listened to their spokesman raising his voice above the roar of the wind.

Ben Farnham shuffled down Front street in the direction of the cheap, dirty room which he rented. His grocery was gone; after tomorrow he would be hunting a place on a park bench. His hands were thrust deep into worn trousers pockets, the collar of his thread-bare sweater turned up about his neck. It was a tough July, as cold as the middle of January. Ben was angry; he walked slowly past a small restaurant, breathing deeply in the good smell of frying meat. His right hand gripped the little automatic; his fingers on the trigger; later, he would have thick, hot steak, not three—the street would be deserted.

Did they think they could give him charity? Send it out to you as you'd toss a crust to a sea gull? The worse, of as some of the damned did—smirk and look superior as they doled out baker's bread to hungry men? No. He'd steal before he'd accept their alms again. He'd rather be a criminal than a pauper.

It was then that he noticed the group standing near one of the piers, and with an inquiring air sauntered over. The man who was speaker was tall, needing no box for a platform. He was broad shouldered, like a prize fighter, and wore a dark turtle neck sweater that made him look even huskier. His voice was a hoarse growl, vibrant as the snarl of a lion. In his hand was a small soiled flag, dropped from someone's buttonhole. Dirty stars and faded stripes.

"The flag!" he scoffed. "The flag they wave in our faces! We want jobs. We want decent clothes for food, we don't all thank no one for. And they wave the flag at us! We can't eat flags, can we? But we'll show those richegaut! We'll sink their stinkin' yachts! We'll feed those swells our bullets! We'll grind their bloody faces in the dirt!"

Ben grasped his gun; the words gave him a boldness. Another day before the big fellow could continue his speech, he jumped forward the group, swinging his club. "Move along, you fellows. No room for you like that."

Ben followed the sullen men as they crossed into the business street and smiled by Tony's grill. Several of the men glanced toward the lighted window and made bitter, sneering remarks. Ben looked up and down the street. It was vacant except for the scattering crowd moving on and, with his cap pulled low over his forehead, he shouldered his way through the door of the restaurant.

The little Italian in white apron and cap was sitting on a tall stool behind the lunch counter, reading the paper. He stood up, grinning, when he saw the customer.

"You, Ben—you steak?"

"You're damned right," frowned immediately, and sat down behind the counter, facing across the counter. "Make it snappy."

Tony nodded. "You very hungry," he stated matter-of-factly.

As he greased the hot grill he went on talking in a friendly tone. "Those fellas that passed by," he said, "they don't know when they are lucky, no? In some countries they starve. But here they have jobs, they have families, their bambinos they eat, and you—you are out naked in the gutters."

Ben threw the steak onto the sizzling grill. "I see a great country. I come here broke, but I work hard. And now I own the little—becomes."

"You started at the right time," Ben snapped. "Work's scarce now."

Tony shrugged his fat shoulders. "Some of them could find jobs. But that kind don't want them. They want cheap! Beog cens, and no work!"

"What do you know about it?" demanded Ben angrily.

Tony pestered with one hand "Say sign in the window: Dishwashers Wanted. She has been there three days! But they just laugh and go by. I started as a dishwasher. And look at me now." He swelled up his chest. "Beog bottness man." he bellowed.

"What do you pay?" Ben asked.

"Three good meals a day, a clean warm bed. And three dollars week . . . oh, hello!" The little Italian was grinning his sunsong over Ben's shoulder. The young man turned swiftly, his hand clutching his pistol more tightly.

The policeman eyed Ben in the doorway suspiciously. "What's going on here?"

Tony laughed showing both rows of gleaming white teeth. "Thees man, he wants cake for beog his death."

The policeman eyed Ben in disgust. "Don't you know the Fourth's over?" He passed on, swinging his club.

Ben, shamefaced, stuck the gun in his pocket as Tony put before him a steaming platter of T-bone steak and french fries. "I haven't any money," Ben hesitated, his knife and fork hanging hungrily over the food. "Could I pay you in dishwashing?"

Tony grinned. "Sure," he said. "I'll be good business having a smart young man say about the gun before you eat the steak!"

TARZAN THE MAGNIFICENT (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

The Queen commanded van Ryk to step forward, and she assigned him as husband-slave to one of his captors. Then Spiks and Troll, according to procedure, Wood's eyes were fixed on the Queen. Though her cruelty repelled him, he was bewitched by her beauty.

Now, for the first time her eyes rested on him appraisingly. Her lips quivered, and for a moment she seemed to emerge from the trance that enveloped her. Then she said slowly: "Though a husband is denied to me, that one shall become my slave."

Now a courtier brought her a long whip, made from the skin of a great serpent. Four times the proud Queen swung it over her head and four times stepped the lash against the skin of the captives, as a sign of their base enslavement. Then the evil Mafka spoke:

"You shall never again leave the land of his Kaji. Cruel, diamond, and cunning are the many mystic powers. When I command, all men obey. Should you seek to escape, my mighty powers will reach out over vast distances and drag you down, and kill you."

CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES LIMITED

COMPANY OFFERS NEW PROPOSALS

Brockville, Ont., July 30.—(CP)—The John B. Stetson (Canada) Limited, Hat manufacturers, has consented to a proposal as a basis for settlement of the strike of its 300 employees, it was announced last night. The walkout, called June 28, entered its 33rd day today.

The agreement was made following a conference between the company and a citizen's committee formed in an effort to open negotiations, Donald E. Lewis, K.C., a member of the committee, said.

Following is the proposal which will be submitted to the strikers for their consideration:

"Invitation to our employees who are on strike."

(1)—We would like to discuss, with any representative committee you elect, wages, hours and working conditions. We ask only that the committee be made up of our employees and that they meet us as a committee representing the employees on strike, and not in any other capacity.

(2)—As long as this committee is representative of the most important departments of both front and back shops, their individual membership or official status in any union will be no bar to negotiations.

" (3)—We are willing to have a conciliation officer from either the Dominion or Ontario Governments sit in at such a meeting.

" (4)— When negotiations with such a committee result in a settlement the company will be willing to have that settlement incorporated in a written agreement for one year, signed, for the company by the general manager and, for the employees, by the employees' representatives who participate in the negotiations.

" (5)—The company is not trying to prevent the existence of any union which our employees may become members, that is a personal matter of each individual employee. Signed M. L. Douglas, vice president and general manager."

8 TRANSIENTS LOSE LIVES IN DERAILMENT

Freight Lurches Down Deep Incline and Kills Men Sitting in Box - Cars

Eight Cars Loaded With Lumber Plunge Down Ravine

8 MEN INJURED

Wreckage Strewn For Quarter Mile as Box Cars Are Broken up

Sudbury, Ont., July 31 (CP) — Eight transients were killed and eight others seriously injured early today when a transcontinental freight train was derailed on the Canadian National Railway main line 97 miles northwest of Sudbury. Names of the victims were not known.

As they sat in box-cars, surrounded by lumber from British Columbia, the fast freight suddenly lurched from the tracks. Eight cars tumbled to the bottom of a deep incline beside the right-of-way.

Victims Found Near Cars.

Wreckage was strewn along the tracks for a quarter-mile, but the broken bodies of the killed and injured were nearly all found in or near the box cars which rolled down into the ravine. It is estimated the fast, eastbound freight was travelling at 90 miles an hour when the derailment occurred.

Conductor Alexander Stewart of Capreol, was in charge of the train. The engineer was James McGee, also of Capreol. All train movement west of Capreol was suspended while auxiliary cranes were rushed by the C.N.R. from Capreol, 75 miles east of the wreck scene.

Some In Wooded Section.

The crews started work before daybreak clearing the debris from the scene of wreckage. Rails, torn out-of-way or twisted, were pulled and bent for hundreds of yards. Cars were reduced. Rail and wrecked passenger trains will be delayed for many hours.

The section where the derailment occurred is heavily wooded. Nearest flag station is Kawa. Railway officials said the company's telegraph wire service from Cochrane was disrupted. It was expected to be resumed shortly.

Official Statement.

At Toronto the railway issued the following statement:

"At 12:30 a.m. E.D.T., Train No. 404 en route from Winnipeg to Toronto with 55 cars in charge of Conductor Stewart and Engineer McGee, while running at a speed of 25 miles an hour, had seven cars derailed ten miles east of Capreol.

"Latest reports indicate that eight transients were killed and eight others injured. Railway officers are now attempting to establish the identity of the dead and injured.

"The auxiliary with doctors was at once despatched from Capreol to the injured are being taken to Sudbury for further attention. The bodies of the deceased trappers were being placed in charge of the provincial police.

"The track was damaged for about 300 feet. The official track is expected to be clear for traffic about 1:30 p.m. The cause of the accident is under investigation."

No Uneasy Moments as Survey Flight Concludes

Party Flies From Montreal to Vancouver in 17 Hrs., 11 Mins.

PARTY WELCOMED

Vancouver, July 31 (CP)—Hon. C. D. Howe and the other air mail trailblazers rested here today from the flight they started early yesterday morning in Montreal. In 17 hours and 11 minutes later at Vancouver's sea island airport.

From dawn to dusk the Dominion Transport Minister and his party flew westward over the surveyed route of Canada's projected coast-to-coast airway.

"I don't think any of us had an uneasy moment all the way," Mr. Howe said as he stepped from the big six-motored plane. "But I'm mighty glad I don't have to turn around and go right back again."

Enroute he had been welcomed by Mayor G. C. Miller of Vancouver and Mayor Hawe, assembled in a circle of old friends.

Behind Mr. Howe in his compartment of the flight—Commander C. P. Edwards of Ottawa; H. J. Symington, Director of Trans-Canada Air Lines; Squadron Leader J. H. Tudhope, pilot; John Hunter, Vancouver, co-pilot; and Engineer Lou Parmenter of Ottawa.

Minister Spokesman.

Mr. Howe was spokesman during the first few press calls. He declined down slowly, hand extended to Mayor Miller.

"Thank you, sir," he replied to the mayor's congratulations. "Glad to be here."

Speaking later from the office of William Templeton, airport manager, Mr. Howe said ground facilities for the Trans-Canada Air line would be ready by the autumn. He did not say what actual service will be started by that time.

But after reviewing briefly the work already accomplished by his department in preparing for regular passenger flights on the coast-to-coast route, he said:

"I was interested in reproducing conditions under which the Trans-Canada Air Lines will function when it comes into operation at, we hope, a not too distant date."

Aids to Knowledge.

Mr. Howe said the flight was opportunity to study conditions of actual operation that was his principal objective. It had been achieved.

His foremost impression, he said, was the "tremendous amount of work involved in building an aviation route across Canada."

The flight aspect had been built between Halifax and Vancouver, spaced less than fifty miles apart.

"Such a trip adds wonderfully to the knowledge of Canada possessed by anyone who may take it," he said, tracing his trip over Ontario with its industries and mining fields, Manitoba and its fine crops, Saskatchewan's southern drought-devastated farmlands, Alberta and the mountainous terrain of British Columbia.

A police station, at which Captain Flanagan is stationed, is across the street from the mill. The International Ladies Garment Workers Union has protested the arrests as illegal and an invasion of civil rights.

Bomb Central Station in Heart of City to Gain Control

12 MILES APART

Spearhead of Japanese Army Now on Vital Railway

Tientsin, July 31 (AP)—Fighting broke out at the central railway station in the heart of Tientsin, today as Japanese troops attempted to clamp complete control on the important railway to North China.

New hostilities started when Japanese forces attacked a Chinese unit which still held entrenchments nearby despite two days of bombardment of the city by the Japanese batteries.

An earlier barrage of shells had brought no reply from Chinese guns. This had led to the belief Japanese domination of the city was complete.

Advance Eighteen Miles.

At the same time Japanese reinforcements and their army had advanced down the Hankow-Peiping railway line south of the station; Chinese capital to a point eighteen miles beyond the city's walls, to

UNPARALLELED SESSION CLOSES

Advantage of British System of Adjournment is Pointed Out

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

London, July 31 (AP)—Parliament rises for the summer recess after a session without parallel in the long history of Westminster. It opened with Edward VIII on the throne, with Stanley Baldwin at the helm in Downing Street. After a brief nine months, it adjourned Friday with George VI as king, the splendid pageantry of the Coronation already becoming a memory, with Neville Chamberlain as Prime Minister.

Westminsley differs from Ottawa in the nature of the summer recess. In Ottawa, it is the custom to complete business and close the session with a formal prorogation. At Westminster the House merely adjourns over the recess to meet again at a fixed date in October. The House then concludes outstanding business, parliament is prorogued and within a few days the king opens a new session.

In addition, under the terms of the adjournment motion, the speaker is authorized, should need arise, to summon the House during the summer recess.

Advantage of British System.

The advantage of the British method is that, in the event of emergency, the House can be reassembled swiftly, without the necessity of state opening and a speech from the throne.

SUGGESTS MOSCOW IS SEEKING WAR

Rome, July 31—(AP)—The only interpretation to be placed upon the Soviet Union's opposition to belligerent status for Spanish insurgency, the newspaper Il Popolo Di Roma asserted today, is that "Moscow wants war."

YACHTS ESCORTED TO STARTING LINE

Muggy Weather and Slight Breeze For First Race of Sir Thomas's Cup

Aboard coast guard cutter Argo, off Newport, R.I., July 31—(AP)—Hot, muggy weather greeted spectators today as hundreds of pleasure craft moved into strategic positions for the first race of the America's Cup series between Harold S. Vanderbilt's Ranger and T. O. M. Sopwith's British challenger, Endeavour II.

As the contenders approached the starting line for the 30-mile windward-leward test, the breeze worked around to south southeast and increased in velocity to about five miles an hour. A large spectator fleet, including two square rigged yachts which brought to the scene a touch of the past, accompanied by big sloops.

They coasted along under auxiliary power, however, instead of spreading their mountains of sails. Other craft, big and small powered, dotted Block Island Sound. They were shepherded by two destroyers and over 20 coast guard vessels ranging in size from the smart little picket boats to the big cutters.

It was estimated approximately 300 craft were gathered close to the start.

Friendship Letter Sent By Chamberlain to Mussolini

British Prime Minister Reported Trying to Bridge Gap Between LEAGUE AND SPAIN

London, July 31 (AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain has sent a personal letter of friendship to Premier Mussolini of Italy.

It was believed the Prime Minister was endeavoring to bridge the gap between foreign Secretary Eden and Mussolini, a coolness that has been apparent since the fight for League of Nations sanctions during the Italian campaign in Ethiopia.

A Foreign spokesman said the letter was designed to clarify differences between the countries, presumably including the impasse over non-intervention in Spain.

The letter arrived as the Italian foreign office this morning, and presumably was read by Premier Mussolini, whose Mussolini is vacationing. Virtually spokesmen declined to say if it is that the letter had been sent, but Chamberlain's office conceded it was "quite likely".

Bomb Explosions Heard Within Ancient City

FRANCO DENIES

Trouble Also Reported Among Insurgents Near Santander

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, July 31 (AP)—Spanish government sources asserted today that revolt was spreading through the insurgent rearguard.

They said discontent had mushroomed into open fighting within Generalissimo Francisco Franco's forces at Motril and Malaga, on the southern coast.

The outbreaks were said to be similar to that which the government previously reported within ancient Granada, another southern Spanish city, site of the famed Moorish Alhambra.

Report is Denied

The Fabra (Spanish) News Agency in a dispatch from Gibraltar said that bomb explosions were heard within the ancient city and insurgent authorities were struggling to localize the mutiny.

The agency said the Granada uprising came when Spanish soldiers were ordered from their barracks to make room for Italian volunteers under Franco's banner.

Radio broadcast by Gen. Queipo De Llano, one of Franco's chief lieutenants, denied reports of the Granada revolt. In the same broadcast he hinted that Franco might be preparing for a new offensive toward beleaguered Madrid.

"Tranquility is complete along the Madrid front," said the radio commentator. "We must not forget that after the calm comes the storm."

Discord In Biscayan Army

Government reports were that the revolt had extended also into Franco's Biscayan army. The defense ministry and government today had heard a battle between two insurgent groups on the Santander front, in northern Spain.

Insurgent airmen put an end to the conflict, it was said, when they roared overhead, machine gunning, bombing and dropping hand grenades.

The government reported France had pulled troops from other fronts and sent them to Malaga recently to quell Communist workers who had laid siege to the military headquarters there.

Several days later another group of Communist workers surrendered themselves in a sugar factory and held it until a superior number of troops surrounded them and forced them out, said the Madrid advices.

FOUR FROM HAMILTON HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Four Hamilton men vacationing at Eagle Lake near Coe Hill, narrowly escaped drowning on the lake yesterday when their boat was overturned by high winds and rough seas. The four, who are employees of the Clear Milk Company, were A. Jones, William Greenwell and Peter and James Farrell.

Their cries for help after the boat had overturned were heard by visitors at the camp who hastened to the rescue with Cec. and William Webb, both of Hamilton and Alex Urbach of Coe Hill, paddling in the canoe.

Fishing tackle costing about $60 was lost.

QUINTE BAY USED AS LANDING BASE

The Bay of Quinte west of the Bay Bridge has provided an ideal landing field for large seaplanes from the Air Force base at Trenton during the past few days. Frequent landings are evidently being given flying officers of the camp. Though the smaller land planes have been dismissed with casual glances by residents, the larger craft have become an object of much interest.

GRADE NEW BEACH WITH POWER GRADER

Following considerable work of levelling and filling of the civic bathing beach east of the city, work of grading the beach location will be commenced there today with the use of a heavy power grader loaned members of the beach committee by the County of Hastings. It is estimated that during the present warm weather, 2,500 residents of the city weekly take advantage of the facilities at the beach, in spite of the fact that work on the project is far from completed.

MAY USE STEEL STUDS TO MARK NEW LANES

Further study of the city's traffic and parking problems by city council may lead to the installation of permanent metal marking buttons for designating the proper spaces and for cross lines in the middle of each section. Members of council at a special meeting held this week were furnished with samples of city engineer Aird's boiling down system, a Hamilton steel mill. It is estimated that approximately 6,000 of the buttons would be required.

PRAISE CROWE LAKE AS FISHING GROUNDS

Wm. Brewster and Thomas Pail, both of Buffalo, New York, who have been holidaying at Crowe Lake during the past several days, believe they have discovered the perfect vacation land and fishing location yet encountered. Bass fishing has been good, and the gentlemen report with specimens weighing five and six pounds frequently included in the heavy catches. "In fifteen years of fishing in Canada and elsewhere, I've never encountered a lake, which provided such good sport, where bass were more plentiful," declared Mr. Brewster.

TOURIST HOMES NOT USED AS MUCH

"Not one half the business we did last year or the year before," commented the owner of one of the city's many tourist homes today.

Tourists are either using their own trailers, or using hotels. Many of them are also buying tents. Now only a few seek out our places. What used to be a good business, catering to tourists is fast becoming discouraged. We used to count on about 150 business a week in the good season, now we're lucky if we get 40."

BUMPER HOOKS INTO TOURIST'S MACHINE

A Vermont motorist returned from an early morning breakfast at a down town lunchroom today in time to see his empty and pitiless car hobbing along lower Front Street in the rear of another machine. A spirited sprint on the part of the visitor enabled him to catch up with the driver of the first car, unconscious of the fact that when he pulled out of the parking space the bumper of his car had hooked on the second machine.

CUSTOMS RETURNS STILL INCREASING

Continuing general betterment of business in the district is held responsible by local authorities for the increase in collection returns for the month of July this year as contrasted with the same period one year ago. Total collections for the month ending today were $100,270.30 while for July, 1936, collections were $81,839.59, an increase of $18,531.17.

POST GRADE AT SHIPPING POINT

Arrangements Made to Use System in This District

With the object in view to improve the hog grading service in the Belleville district, that the farmers will be assured of their correct settlements, the Dominion Live Stock branch has completed arrangements so that official carlot grading will be done on shipping points. Grades will be posted at the shipping point and the farmer will be able to collect premiums from the packing plant to which he is according to a communication just received from the Live Stock Branch of the Department of Agriculture.

Much effort has been spent in working out the mechanical difficulties of the present system. The tattoo system of identification is giving excellent results. The problem of weighing each carcass was overcome by the introduction of the Electric Printomatic Scales. These scales are tested before and during every lift. An electric light burns in the scales continually, to drive out moisture and to keep the mechanism of the scales as constant as possible.

Grading becomes a very simply and mechanical procedure if the official grade is not the final basis of settlement. It allows the farmers privilege to sell his hogs as he sees fit, but it is not reasonable to assume that he is in as good a position as the grower to judge the actual value of his hogs. The commissions paid by Packing Houses to drivers is very small in comparison to the amount of work involved and rarely reports may have gone astray. The following are common causes:

1. Error or mistake on the manifests.
2. Incorrect addresses, which drive the drivers guessing at post offices and rural routes.
3. Hogs not delivered to the stations by truckers and failed to ask the farmers their correct addresses.

These difficulties are overcome by the drivers calling the manifest in the shipping station where the farmers may ask the official grade allotted to their own hogs. These report forms will be available for several months so that farmers may collect the grade at their own convenience.

This system is being put into effect through the co-operation of the shippers, and the Dominion Live Stock Branch trusts the pig producers will find it of value to them.

DELECTABLE MENU ON CIVIC HOLIDAY

Fishing, Celebrations, Picnics And Reunions on Bill of Fare

With a delectable menu of holiday fare being prepared by neighboring villages and towns to stimulate the appetite of city and district residents many people crowded the downtown section of the city this morning making preparations for the "long week-end". While Civic Holiday celebrations of more or less large dimensions are being held respectively in Wellington, Napanee, and Deseronto a number of people will forsake the festive holiday attire and retire to the seclusion of cottages and camp in the surrounding and distant lake and streams.

Many local Isaak Walltons were noted this morning in the various shops where tackle is sold, replenishing their supplies and making ready, some for creeks to the streams in the north country, and others for the lakes of the more immediate district. Owners of tourist camps and camps were noted also preparing for a quiet week-end along the shores of quiet waters.

While the youth of the districts will in all likelihood flock to Wellington, where a gala Civic Holiday celebration is planned, many of the older set, especially lovers of horseracing will journey to Napanee where a splendid card is to be presented. Local and district baseball veterans will find enjoyment at Deseronto where special events are being held for the ex-service men.

Garages and service stations were busy getting the many family cars into condition for those who take to the broad highways for their holiday fun. A number of family reunions are being planned for Sunday and Monday while picnics beyond number will feature the quiet glades of rural woodlands, and the noisier summer resorts along the many sand beaches of the district.

Hastings County's northern beauties and Prince Edward's summer beach resorts will be the meccas for thousands of holidayseekers over the week-end, while many incoming visitors to the city will brighten the homes of the many who will be unable to get away.

All-in-all it looks like a gala holiday for the residents of Belleville and district.

SALMON POINT BARN IS BURNED

Bert Rankins Loses Entire Crop and Implements in Blaze

Striking swiftly from thunder clouds, lightning destroyed the large barn on the property of Bert Rankins, Salmon Point farmer on Thursday night.

The storm, which swept down the northern shore of Lake Ontario during the night reared northward at this point catching the farming district South of Napanee and Kingston.

Rankins' barn which was filled with his entire 1937 crop and farming implements was a total loss. A wind approaching gale velocity fanned the flames into a roaring mass and within a few seconds from the time the bolt struck the building was a blazing inferno. It was not learned whether the building was insured.

EGGS INCREASE TO 30 CTS. DOZEN ON BUSY MARKET

Fruit Display Heavier Than Usual With Prices Unchanged

CORN TAKES DROP

Broilers Plentiful And Unchanged From Last Week's Close

Further evidence that Belleville's market ranks second to none to any in Eastern Ontario centres in quality of produce grown in this district was provided this morning when any grown in Ontario was given Big morning. When another large and veritable display of fruit and dairy produce was exhibited for sale by a large number of farmers and vendors.

A slight fluctuation was noticeable in the prices of some of the staple lines of fruit and vegetables although in the main prices held to some acceptable produce. Yellow Globe corn, which made down considerable scale with a good quality being offered at twenty cents the dozen and, while the supply was stalled at fifteen cents. No white corn was in evidence. Eggs, however, also marked a slight decrease from the Thursday quotations, with fresh ones selling at fifteen and twenty cents, and baskets offered at from seventy-five to one dollar.

Increase in Flowers

A decided increase in the display of cut flowers added a colorful touch to the market, which was enhanced by the yellows, greens and reds of the many fruits and vegetables on display. A brilliant display set sun added to the general attractiveness of the morning and was responsible for a large number of Saturday morning buyers putting in an appearance to take advantages of the many fine lines offered.

Vegetable prices generally held fairly firm and while the price of onions, beets, carrots and string beans selling at five cent prices, with potatoes offered at ten cents, until but held firm with hour loss during a short period. Both cooking and eleven quart baskets going at from eighty-five cents to dollar each. Cauliflower and cabbage in good quality was quoted at from five cents per head upwards. Cucumbers were exceptionally plentiful and reached a new low level, when one farmer offered his stock at twenty-four for twenty-five cents. The majority however offered their wares at three for five cents. Shelled peas found ready buyers at twenty and twenty-five cents per quart for the Little Gem variety, while tomatoes were quoted at three bunches for ten cents.

Fine Display Fruit

A splendid display of fruits featured the market today with red raspberries marking a slight increase in price over the Thursday quotations. This popular fruit sold from ten cents per box for twenty-five cents with the "blues" being generally at ten cents per box, with cases 24 quarts selling at dollar.

Montmorency cherries were fairly plentiful and sold on the fruit market at from sixty to sixty-five cents per six quart basket. Blacks were offered at twenty-five with the same quantity. Ruckle-Early peaches, packed basket with quart lots offered at twenty-five cents and eleven quart baskets at prices ranging from two dollars to $2.25. Blackberries were quoted at twenty-five cents per quart.

A feature of the fruit market today was the large quantities of an ever-bearing variety, grown by Herbert Taylor, Wellington farmer. These sold readily at twenty-five cents the box. Imported peaches and Shiro plums were offered at seventy-five and sixty cents per six quart basket respectively. Missouri currants were quoted at from twenty-five to twenty-eight cents.

New Apples Plentiful

New apples were plentiful with the popular Yellow Transparent quoted at twenty cents per half-peck; the Duchess variety at thirty-five cents per six quarts and the Duchess variety at one dollar per hamper.

While not as heavy a display of dairy produce at usual was evident in the inside market, the quality was easily up to the standard of preceding weeks. Eggs took a further upward climb with top prices for "A" selected eggs at thirty cents generally. Some were available at twenty-eight cents generally selling generally at twenty-six and twenty-eight cents. Young broiler chickens were the only line to show any disparity and sold at prices ranging from sixty cents to one dollar per pair. Chickens and fowl were quoted at from fifty cents to one dollar each. Farmers' butter held firm at thirty cents per pound, although some was quoted at fifty-five cents 'for two-pound rolls. Fresh honey was offered at one dollar per ten pound pail with lesser quantities selling at the same scale. Strained honey was offered at twenty-five cents the pint.

Whitefish and trout were quoted at twenty and twenty-two cents per pound respectively.

LIKE BAD PENNY SERPENT RETURNS!

Ogopogo and sea-serpent stories, like bad pennies insist upon turning up from time to time. The latest one comes from near home, at least as close as Omemee and is vouched for by Mr. Lou Hill of Trenton and his family.

Following is the Hill story as it appears in the latest edition of the Picton Gazette.

"When I saw the serpent it was so close to the bank (Lake Ontario near Omemee) that I could have snapped a photograph of it had I had a camera. Apparently a boat swimming in the path of the serpent was devoured for it was not seen again after the serpent had passed."

I've read about sea-serpents and considered the tales fictitious but since my experience I am thoroughly convinced that such reptiles inhabit the waters of Lake Ontario."

POLICE BLOTTER

Clothesline thieves were reported active in Belleville last night, a new white shirt being stolen from the line on the premises of Jas. Alexander, 20 Bolton St. Police investigated and were of the opinion the robbery was doubtless the work of transients.

Edward Tickell, Church Street, complained to police today regarding the mysterious disappearance of twelve fantail pigeons. Mr. Tickell has been a keen fancier and lander of pigeons, always being the proud possessor of a fine large flock of these birds. Mr. Tickell is of the opinion the birds were stolen.

While negotiating from the curb on Front street yesterday afternoon an automobile, driven by Mrs. Leona Tisdell, Rochester, N.Y., collided with a hydrant. The nipple of the hydrant pierced the right front fender of the vehicle, badly damaging the same. Numerous reports of a similar nature relative to crumpled fenders as the result of striking fire hydrants on Front street are daily received by police from irritated motorists.

Two inebriates and four transients shared the cell block at the police station last night. Owing to Monday being Civic holiday there will be no semi-weekly session of police court in Belleville.

Even for these crowded days it is hard to realize that the present session of parliament was opened by Edward VIII, that it will continue in being till October when George VI opens a new session in state.

One recalls how, with firm voice, Edward read the speech from the throne and announced his own intention to visit India. The possibility of abdication then seemed little more than an idle rumor. Yet within a few weeks the country was plunged into a constitutional crisis such as it had not known before. Edward had renounced the throne alike for himself and his descendants.

"Le Roy Le Veult"

The parliament he had opened was considering a bill to give effect to his abdication. "Le roy le veult" (the king wills it), quietly announced a clerk in the House of Levis in old Norman French. And with the Royal assent thus expressed Edward VIII ceased his own reign. The reign of George VI began.

Baldwin emerged from the constitutional crisis with enhanced reputation but it was clear that advancing years would not permit him to retain the mantle long. After the Coronation he retired from politics and took with him Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Baldwin government, became prime minister. Ramsay MacDonald, who had formed the first National Government, retired from the ministry.

Transient Program.

It has been a session of important measures. Hardest was the Abdication Bill well out of the way when parliament was brought face to face with the largest peacetime scheme of rearmament known to British history. Its contemplates an expenditure of $1,500,000,000 ($7,465,312,500) spread over a period of four years. Of this total, £400000,000 will be borrowed money.

With each heavy demands on the taxpayer, the budget was awaited with unusual interest. It contained a scheme for taxing growth in profits which aroused bitter opposition among financial interest in the City of London.

HE STEPPED ON LION'S PAW, KILLED

So often had the Rev. Harold Davidson, former rector of Stiffkey, unflinched in 1932 on charges, performed the stunt with impunity that he grew careless. Recently he stepped on the lion's paw during a show at Skegness, Eng., and was badly mauled by the indignant animal, later died from the wounds. A 16-year-old girl assistant, Renee Summers, courageously entered the cage, beat back the lion and rescued the ex-clergyman, badly clawed on the neck, back and shoulders.

At the Movies

AT THE CAPITOL

The most beautiful and powerful love story to ever reach the screen "Clive of India", starring Ronald Colman and Loretta Young is brought back to the Capitol and will smash return Hit No. 1 starting with a midnite show on Sunday at 12.05.

The true story of Robert Clive, who conquered an empire for a king who rose, by his own faith and genius and daring, from a clerk's desk in the East India Company to become England's greatest hero, Sir Colman like the proverbial clive, and he takes full advantage of every opportunity to do so in many more spirited and more effective ways than ever, —in a word, to give the greatest performance of his career.

Loretta Young, too, evidences new powers and gives an unforgettable portrayal of the lovely English girl to whom Clive wrote proposing marriage after seeing her picture in her brother's locket,—the girl who arrived in India to accept him, only to find her poor clerk magically risen to heroic heights through daring and boldly taken charge of the army and quelled a rebellion.

Beautiful Love Story.

The love story of this heroic pair is one of the most beautiful and moving the screen has ever shown—a romance in true proportion to the magnificent production 20th Century has given this colorful epic and epic biography for release through United Artists. The women's loyalty to the man she loves and her sacrifices to his career—until, in a desperate attempt to check Clive's craving for power, she refuses to live with him, only to return to him as last in his hour of bitterest need—are as great and stirring as the bravest deeds of the man.

Richard Boleslawski's masterly direction makes every scene memorable. The reproductions of the Battle of Plassey, Clive's and England's most brilliant victory—Clive's trial in the House of Commons—the horror of the Black Hole of Calcutta,—are stunning in their realism and impressiveness, and too much credit cannot be given to Richard Day who designed the sets.

"This Is the Life"

A performance that traces a course from heart-rending pathos to the gayest comedy, punctuated with lilting songs and dancing feet, is given by Jane Withers, "This Is the Life", shown as revival hit No. 2 at the Capitol starting Saturday midnite at 12.05.

In "This is the Life", which is set in the glamour of the theatre, little Jane Withers plays her most dramatic role as a child performer—she yearns to be just a "regular kid" and travels the road trying in vain to get to achieve that desire.

Believed to be one of the luckiest girls in the world because of the riches and public applause heaped upon her Jane is actually a "prison ticket" for her unscrupulous guardians, Clerk, Roy and Gordon Westcott. Instead of being permitted to live the life of a normal child, Jane is forced by her guardians to perform and rehearse incessantly while her heart aches for someone to love and someone to love her.

In John McGuire, in the supporting role, who is falsely accused of robbery and is waited by the police, Jane finds the achievement of her desires, when she runs away with him to live the life of a hobo.

The height of dramatic tension is reached at the climax, when the guardians are confronted with their misdeeds and Jane pleads for her new friend and for the right to live as an ordinary child.

Saturday Only

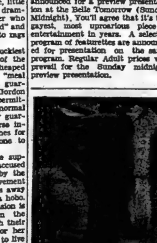
Shown at the Capitol Saturday only a rip-roaring action picture of the West "Rootin' Tootin' Kid" starring the three Mesquiteers. In addition to this feature a News, Cartoon, Sissy Song, Andy Clyde comedy and a Joe Cook comedy complete this splendid bill.

AT THE REGENT

Marx Brothers Score Another Laugh Bellevue in "A Day at the Races"

The uproarious antics of the absurd zex Brothers...Groucho, Harpo and Chico....together with the admirable supporting work of Maureen O'Sullivan, Allan Jones, Margaret Dumont, Esther Muir and others, and the scenic direction of Sam Wood, combine to make "A Day at the Races," latest Marx extravaganza, now on the Belle screen until Wednesday, matinee daily, one of the deliciously amusing photoplays of this or any other year.

It would be difficult to imagine any picture being funnier than the last Marxian epic, "A Night at the Opera," but their current vehicle with its hilarious plot stirring between a sanitarium and a race track with Groucho in the role of a horse doctor, Chico as a jockey and Harpo as a race track tout, undoubtedly tops even the former picture for side-splitting flatulence, rib-tickling dialogue and howling characterizations.



When you add to this the excellent singing of Allan Jones in such captivating song numbers as "On Blue Venetian Waters," "Tomorrow is Another Day" and "A Message from the Man in the Moon," and a spectacularly beautiful water ballet ritual sequence, you have a picture which blends hearty humor with romance and music to make entertainment plus.

Comedy melodramatics, however, as it cannot help with the Marxes in the stellar roles, and such scenes as the trio literally pulling Esther Muir to the wall behind wall paper, or giving what must be the most preposterous medical examination ever conceived of to Margaret Dumont, add up to what may be termed a laugh masterpiece.

The Bell World News Events, with its gist of important happenings gathered the world over, and "Wacky Pups," a cute, cunning and highly amusing cartoon precede the feature attraction.

tighten Japan's grip on the central region of the northern provinces.

The spearhead of the Japanese advance thus reached Langfang, three miles south of Changhaintien, on the vital railway line linking Peiping with Tientsin and southern China.

Aircraft and artillery were said to have opened fire against Chinese forces entrenched in the hills west of Peiping.

Peiping dispatches told of guerilla warfare raging west and northwest of the city as gendarmes retreated before Japanese machine-gunners. Fighting between 2,000 Japanese troops and the 37th Chinese division was also reported northwest of Peiping.

Reliable reports from Nanking, seat of China's government, declared that the massing of crack Chinese troops moving north toward the Peiping front had reached Linhsien, only 30 miles south of Peiping.

Armies 12 Miles Apart.

If Chinese reports were accurate, the Chinese movement northward would threaten the vanguard only 12 miles from the Japanese army penetrating southward and might presage a serious clash between Chinese "Blue" and the Japanese.

The Nanking regime thus far has remained aloof apparently from the Hopeh-Chahar trouble and its future policy has been veiled in secrecy.

Chinese sources asserted Japanese planes flew out of Tientsin to Paotingfu, 80 miles southwest of Peiping, yesterday and bombed troop concentrations there. It previously was reported, some 50,000 Chinese were massed near Paotingfu to reinforce the forces engaged in the northern fighting.

INDIAN NAMES

Those persons of years ago who knew contact with the Indians and were closer to the pioneering days in the New World when places were named, gave Indian names or adopted Indian names for places conferred a real blessing on this continent. Today the Smithsonian Institution has been inquiring into the names of the States and finds that many of them have names of Indian origin, with the descriptive power which many modern names lack particularly those formed of a series of capital letters or part words joined together—which mean little to the people.

A sprinkling of Indian names for new places which attain the dignity of possessing an individual name would not be amiss. The only trouble is that we are getting farther away from the days when we were brought in contact with the Indian population in the formative days of this country.

If Indians would give some of these names or suggest them for places and spots, they would help to maintain the Indian traditions and those beautiful expressive words which make the Indian language so rich in the modern man and woman. Cities like Ottawa, Oshawa, Iroquois, Toronto, will not willingly yield these old names even if the meaning is not known to many in these days.

SHOCKING THE INSANE SANE

Insulin has been used to create shock in the insane and to lead to results which are believed to mean the cure of insanity of that variety know as dementia praecox.

There have just been discharged from the Ontario Hospital for the Insane in Toronto six patients who had been so treated. Whether they are fully cured is not certain and it is believed that a year or two will have to pass in order that there may be assurance that cures have been definitely effected.

Insanity is so tragic an event in the lives of many thousands that there must be a certitude as to cures. For that reason time has to pass.

The insane person is given such doses of insulin as to produce convulsions. After this he is brought back to consciousness by doses of sugar. It is said that after this treatment hallucinations disappear.

The growth of insanity in these days of speed and nervous sensibility to everything rivets attention upon the mystery of insanity. The mental hospitals of the province are full.

The poor brain in the final analysis has to pass on everything in the nature of human experience, every thought has its effect upon this wondrous organ of the human mind. The brain often cannot stand the strain of this age and breaks down. What happens when the brain becomes clouded and subject to hallucinations? Who knows? The insane dont' know, the man who is cured does not know. Science tries to explain but it remains after all something of a mystery.

Then what happens when the brain is finally righted and functions along lines in accordance with fact and the reason is again supreme? What happens when the insulin shock creates anew the brain?

There is no more pitiful sight than the demented person, his powers quite overthrown and the wondrous instrument which controls man's outlook on the world in which he is placed, tangled. It is as if a telephone company system was all mixed up, signals misunderstood and wrongly interpreted, sounds which go to make words confused and so on.

It is to be hoped that there is ground for belief that these six persons have been recovered to the normal use of their mentality. If they are they will be the heralds of treating the insane in the hospitals.

Wonderful cures are in fact being made all the time, about a quarter of the cases treated responding under the usual means of heating the insane.

The more and more this knowledge expands, more and more will it be possible for the regulation of the individual and social life so that men and women may so live with the harmony which is essential to the well-balanced life that their minds will not be hazarded and their bodies and souls will also have a better chance.

It is very pleasant to follow one's inclinations: but unfortunately, we cannot follow them all; they are like the teeth sown by Cadmus—they spring up, get in each other's way, and fight—L. E. Landon.

THE HOME FORUM

Discussing the Events of the Day: Home Gossip and General News Topics as revealed from the Home Meeting Centre of that ever busy—and busier—Grace and Clay.

Supervised by The Editor.

THE BAHAMAS ARE ATTRACTING MANY RICH MEN from the United States and Canada, and the reason given is that the fearful cost of taxes and super taxes cease from troubling in that haven of rest and of the wicked tax collectors cease from vexing. United States government is seriously concerned about the facilities offered in the West Indies for multimillionaires to evade income taxes through holding companies and shift of nationality. Financial Post says that that eminent Canadian mining man, Harry Oakes, has found a cheap place to live in the Bahamas and with an income of five and a half million dollars yearly can save three million dollars in taxes by living there. Steadily mounting taxes in Canada is the price we pay for overmuch government. Too much government at Ottawa, too much provincial government and too much municipal government. The result is committees of politicians, members of the Provincial Government, denied Belleville the privilege of inaugurating a new and improved system of management of municipal business under a smaller and more workable council. Politicians fight against reforms in their domain as long as possible for modern business methods are not the methods of politicians by a long way. However, returning to the Bahamas and the Financial Post story:

Colonists in the Bahamas have discovered a paradise where the cry of "beak the rich" has never been heard. Their budget is always out. The government maintains a balanced budget on an annual income of $1,250,000. There are no unemployment social services to be provided for the population of 60,000. As a result, the Bahamas have been able to keep down the cost of the nation's bounty.

Assuming Mr. Oakes' annual income to be $6,500,000, Canadian levies on this would be $2,946,986 for the federal government, $393,695 for the provincial authorities. In addition, there is a non-resident tax of five per cent. a total of $275,000, representing taxes of more than $3,000,000.

Property taxes are calculated on a maximum appraisal of $200 ($2,000) so that Mr. Oakes pays $1825.50. Compare this also with the assessment on a $10,000 home in Toronto, where the owner would pay twice that sum. The Oakes estate, the article states, will be worth several millions of dollars and there will be no death duties to pay, nothing to satisfy the need of brokers. They are based on a straight 20 per cent., with an exempt reserve of $15 per year. Similarly, succession taxes are simpler. On a $10,000,000 estate the levy in the Bahamas would be $200,000, compared to $3,395,000 in Ontario.

With these advantages, as well as a delightful climate, Mr. Oakes has become the leading citizen of wealthy citizens. Among the Canadians who are wintering residents, besides tax-payers, are Sir Herbert Holt, C. H. Carlisle, president of Dominion Bank; Mrs. Ethel Small, Toronto fire, marine and casualty man; Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, former president of the Bank of Montreal; Allan Bogert, Montreal; Percy Pratt, I. W. Killam, president of Royal Securities; Fred Beardmore, of Toronto, and J. P. Smallman.

Besides Mr. Oakes the most prominent and is rapidly becoming Nassau's leading citizen. He has inaugurated a daily air service from Newport to Miami and Palm Beach and has been made a director of the board of trade which controls the government property and building activities on the islands.

TRY COURTESY, the Ontario Government's slogan in it's newspaper campaign to try and instill with more courtesy into motoring, seems to be making headway. One incident occurred on a recent week evening when a long string of cars were returning to Toronto through Richmond Hill down Yonge street pike. The line was moving slowly, just creeping along, on account of congestion of traffic. A Belleville car in the line turned out at a filling station for gas. Trying to get back into line was another matter. The line was packed solid with slowly moving cars and the Belleville car waited for the gap. For an hour before getting a break. Then a large car with a smiling driver drew abreast and noticing the predicament of the Belleville motorists stopped his car and incidentally the whole line behind and motioned the Belleville car to the opening thus made. Needless to say the action was appreciated and if the feelings of gratitude could be transmitted telepathically that motorists who believed in Try Courtesy must have had a wonderful glow about his heart for dayys. Good deeds like that don't hurt—in fact they help the doer as much as those immediately benefitted. TRY COURTESY and enjoy your motoring much more.

"KILL THE UMP" gets more play than most people think, especially in the United States where baiting the umpire is one of the most popular outdoor sports. Here's a humorous story of Umpire Sidelight Fan. If you have heard it before don't read it here: "When the umpire was leaving the grounds, after a game, he was approached by an irate fan. Where is you dog? demanded the fan. Dog? ejaculated the umpire, I haven't any dog. The Helya haven't bawled the fan. You're the only blind man I ever saw who didn't have a dog."

The special train consisted of seven coaches. The Sunday Schools of St. Andrew's and John Street Presbyterian Churches had their annual excursion today to Twelve O'clock Point and there was a large attendance. The Salvation Army with many friends went to the True Blue Orphanage at Picton per the steamer Varuna this morning.

Chewed Wheat into Gum And Stretched It to Discover Best of Crosses, —Marquis

Charles Saunders, Later Knighted, Used Simple Tests

FAME SOON COMES

The death of Sir Charles Saunders in the city of Toronto the other day calls to mind the genius of Marquis wheat and the contribution made to grain growing, particularly in Western Canada, by this eminent agricultural experimentalist. Sir Charles Saunders had lived quietly in the city of Toronto for some fifteen years as he was connected to retire from active work in connection with the Dominion Experimental Farms system at the age of 65 and so for some time has not appeared actively in connection with agricultural matters.

The Honourable Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, was acquainted with Dr. Saunders and particularly with the work of the development of Marquis wheat on the western farms. Mr. Marshall went west in 1906 and it was there and later in 1907 that twenty-three pounds of the newly discovered Marquis wheat was sent to the Dominion Experimental Farm at Indian Head so that it might be multiplied on the Prairies.

His Only Interview.

In 1928, when Mr. Marshall was preparing an agricultural publication, he visited Dr. Saunders at his home in Toronto and succeeded in getting from him the only interview which the Doctor has ever given with regard to Marquis wheat and the part he played in it, nor has Dr. Saunders written anything, at least that has yet been published, in regard to his work in this matter. Mr. Marshall afrranged with Dr. Saunders to have Mr. Percy A. Smith, the well-known agricultural journalist in Toronto, visit him at his home and write the story.

Dr. Saunders always claimed that he had a good start in connection with Marquis wheat because not only had his father, Dr. William Saunders, then director of the Dominion Experimental Farms, created seven or eight new varieties of wheat by crossing and selection, but Charles Saunders had the advantage of having the son of William Saunders and Mrs. Saunders had studied under her father the problem of producing an earlier hard wheat.

Another plan needs to be mentioned in connection with Marquis wheat. Dr. Angus MacKay—superintendent of the Experimental Farm at Indian Head, Dr. MacKay had been extremely anxious to secure a new variety of wheat with as good milling qualities as Red Fyfe but which would ripen a week or ten days earlier and so escape some of the damaging frosts which seemed to arrive a short time before Red Fyfe ripened on the Prairies.

Soil-Driving Problem.

In his farming struggle on the Saskatchewan Prairie it is interesting to note that Dr. Angus MacKay was finding soil drifting problems back as far as 1904 and he was doing a lot of tree planting in order to stem the tide of the dust storms only to find that they were blown off the roots of the trees and so today on this same farm they have exposed like so many winding snakes above the ground.

To secure a new variety of wheat by crossing is a reasonably simple process and it is also comparatively easy to make rough selections from the crossings. One of the difficulties, however, is to get a new variety that will not revert to type but will breed true and will also be up to quality. In was in 1887 that Dr. William Saunders became the head of the Experimental Farms and sixteen years later his son, Dr. Charles E. Saunders became interested the service at Ottawa, but before that time he had been doing a lot of work with his father.

Chewing Wheat As Gum.

As Red Fyfe was the best hard spring wheat then grown upon the Prairies it naturally formed part of the parentage of practically all the crosses they were making. Laboratory tests were somewhat difficult to make in those days and Dr. Charles Saunders said he had to use very ordinary methods in making them. "I got a little mill in my father's office and I would put the results of the crosses of wheat that had been handed over to him by his father. He decided that the best way to test the elasticity of the gluten was to chew the wheat was to chew it into gum and then see how far it would stretch. He declared that in the winter of 1903-4 he chewed more wheat into gum than all the boys in a dozen rural school sections who, in those days, thought it cheap and easy and what satisfactory method of producing gum. In all the wheat that he thus chewed he found a variety, which he and his father named "Marquis", to be the best of the lot and so they began to multiply the grains of Marquis in a small way as only a few were available. He had been able to determine in this way the baking qualities of the new wheat.

Baking Ovens Built.

Miniature milling and baking outfits were built and the greatest possible care was taken to make the baking tests absolutely accurate. In all these tests Marquis led the list and in some cases the volume of bread produced from Marquis wheat was from fifty to seventy-five per cent over the poorer kinds. Having thus decided that Marquis would have good bread, that it had high milling qualities, that it was an early ripener, and that it stood the gum chewing tests better than all the others, they began the multiplication of this wheat, and as before remarked, 23 pounds of it was sent to the farm at Indian Head in 1907, and the following year another lot was sent to the Brandon Experimental Farm.

The story of Marquis wheat from then on has been one continued series of successes. At first fears were expressed that it would not ripen early enough that a few years might change it back to some of the poorer types which it had produced, but perhaps there has been no wheat produced anywhere in the world that his remained as firmly to its type as has Marquis Wheat.

Prests Help Marquis.

"There were early frosts in the west in 1907, 1908 and 1909 and these heavy losses through freezing made everybody anxious for an Marquis wheat which would mature from a week to ten days earlier than Red Fyfe or other varieties which were being used. Mr. Marshall says he harvested his first crop of this wheat in 1909. It was fall wheat and it was not until 1911 that no experience made it easy to understand how everybody wanted to get the wheat that was earlier.

Marquis was not the only wheat which came from Dr. Saunders' hands as he has also given to the farmers Prosbte, Garnet, Huron, Preston, Prelude and Garnet prodyce a somewhat dark flour and, for that reason, is not popular, Renown is popular. Reward is a cross between Prelude and Marquis and is a little earlier than Marquis and has very good milling qualities as well. Dr. Saunders expressed the opinion in 1928 that Reward would be a very dangerous rival to Marquis.

Greatest Wheat Contributor.

In any event this practical agricultural scientist has made the greatest contribution to wheat production of any man who has lived within our time.

Dr. Saunders has retired with a substantial pension, which was but little compensation for the greatness of his work, yet it was all that he desired. He will continue to be conferred on Canadians at all, that granted Sir Charles Saunders would be a source of pride to Canadians. He has to be kept in mind that Dr. Saunders worked during a time when much less was known about the science of agriculture than is claimed at the present day, but he usually find that man who work out achievements which can be did have operated under more or less adverse circumstances. It is interesting that Dr. Saunders, though never in very robust health, lived long enough to see the great benefits of his work in producing the best variety of wheat ever grown anywhere in the world.

OTTAWA PARADE

Back Stage in the Dominion Capital with

WILFRID EGGLESTON

The Conservative party has had eight leaders since Confederation. Every one of them has been prime minister for a period, or periods. The odds are, therefore, that when the party chooses its next leader it is selecting a future prime minister of Canada.

Mr. Bennett may be telling his conferees on August 7th that he is staying; or that he is going to be succeeded by somebody; or compelling party stalwarts to consider their leadership material. Or he may, then-ill-have to choose a leader.

Scribes are busily at work on the race to take Mr. Bennett's place. The fact is that if he retires a leader will have to be chosen. Somewhere in Canada, presumably among the 245 members, there are six of Conservative contenders, the future leader—and perhaps the present leader—in spite of waiting the call.

One school of historians contends that men make events, and that the accident of personality plays a considerable part in determining the course of Canadian history might tremendous force on affairs. The have been quite different in recent years if Mr. Meighen rather than Mr. Bennett had been party leader; or Mr. Lapointe rather than Mr. Mackenzie King.

Let us list possible Conservative leaders offers a varied choice, in regard to birth, training, religion, profession and political experience. The ages range from 41 to 55, so if you include Senator Meighen, to 63.

x x x

Eight names are mentioned in connection with the leadership. They must be regarded as long-shots.

Robert James Manion, Doctor to his friends, is comic of Irish Canadian parents, is a Roman Catholic, and was born in the Archdiocese when the Orange Lodge considers Irishmen. He is a doctor, surgeon and an author. He has published two books. His first was "Life Line" and his last, begun as a Liberal. One of the most fluent talkers in the House. Makes friends easily, has loads of character. Interested in sport—has a yacht on Pembroke, educated at Toronto, practiced at the Head of the Lakes, married into political connections. Fine war record.

Hugh Dunlop Herridge is another ex-Liberal, a son of the manse. Has been member for Kootenay since and might get his blessing if the party asked for advice. He is 46 years old. Was born in Ottawa, where, also, his father was, Methodist minister. Secretary to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, entered public service as Minister of Washington. Fine war record. A pacifist nowadays. Married a Montrealer.

Gordon Sidney Harrington is 54. He was born at Halifax. His mother was a De Wolf. He was educated at Dalhousie and is a lawyer. A war veteran, an Anglican. He was minister in Rhodes' cabinet in 1926. Socially, Mr. Harrington picked him out to be chairman of the Unemployment Investigation which the courts ruled invalid. Would have been a stronger politician if he had been more successful a few weeks ago in the provincial election in Nova Scotia.

Murdock Alexander MacPherson is 46. He is another Haligonian, hailing from Grand Anse, N.S. Educated at Dalhousie and Cambridge universities. He, too, is a lawyer. He is married and has four children. Fine war record. Three overseas record. Held office in Andrew's government in Saskatchewan. Later administered the Farmers' Creditors' Arrangement Act. Good speaker.

William Earl Rowe, the leader of the Conservative party in Ontario, was born at Hull, Iowa, of Canadian parents. He lived in Canada several years before, and when moved back to Canada a couple of years later. He is only 45. He received his education at High School and Business College. Is a professional man, he is a farmer and stock breeder. Owns a fine thoroughbreds on the track. Came into public life via municipal office. Is married and a member of the United Church.

Earl Lawson, like the majority of the contenders, is a lawyer. He is a native of the United States. He graduated from Canadian Mill. Is an Orangeman and a member of the United Church. Earl was briefly Minister of National Revenue, and directed the publicity organization of the Conservative party before the last election. He is only 41 and has two children.

Arza Clair Casselman is 46 and is the chief whip of the party. He comes of United Empire Loyalist stock on both sides, and lives in Prescott, Ontario. He, too, is of the legal profession. He was once a long distance runner and knew what it was to race from Longboat to Shrubb. He is a lawyer. He is a Lutheran.

Erick French Willis was born at Boissevain, Manitoba, 41 years ago. Comes of a family established in Belleville. He is a barrister and a farmer, an Anglican and unmarried.

There is some talk in political circles of the possibility that a man completely outside present political activity might be chosen leader.

James M. Macdonnell of the board of trustees of Queen's National Trust Company, chairman University, who was, I believe, once approached in connection with the post of Minister of Finance in Mr. Meighen's day, has recently been suggested in this connection. There are several hurdles, however. His health is not robust, he might not be prepared to make the financial sacrifice he might not be well enough known to capture a constituency. Those who know him say he would make an ideal Conservative leader.

Of those actively in the ring, Dr. Manion looks like the best bet. Religion is not permitted to cut a figure. Failing that, it might be a toss-up between Hugh Dunlop Herridge and M. A. MacPherson. Either, as the years go by, would be regarded as a most promising figure. His lack of professional training would be against him, but he is an effective stump speaker and party strategist. Harrington is reported to be a "strong man" who would be a good party leader of support for MacPherson on personal grounds. Herridge is not the best possible choice by the wise guys. The others could only figure if the long-ranking ones dropped out or were eliminated.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, July 31.—(AP)—Slow but persistent buying in motors and steels provided the stock market with lifting power in today's final July session.

While its ticker tape jogged along indifferently most of the time, gains of fractions to more than two points were pinned on the favorites. Transfers were around 300,000 shares.

Among prominent stock gainers were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Bethleg Steel, National Steel, U.S. Rubber Goodyear, and J. I. Case. Resistant were Santa Fe, N.Y., Central, Consolidated Edison, Southern Railway, Northern Pacific Yellow Truck Fears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward.

In the Canadian category Distillers Seagrams, Canadian Pacific and International Nickel advanced fractionally while Dome Mines and McIntyre Porcupine lost a little ground.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July-31.—(CP)—The Toronto market closed the week with a slightly stronger tone in the mines than marked the trading in the last few sessions. Among the medium-price golds to tighten up on fair volume were Powell-Rouyn Jellicoe, Lava Cap, East Malartic McKenzie, Sylvanite and Perron.

Brazilian C.P.R. and Imperial Oil showed some action and each was up 1-8 to 1-4 while other Utilities were sleazy except for a point loss for Bell Telephone. Burlington-Dominion Foundries and Steel of Canada registered fractions.

Strong spots in the Base Metals included International Nickel, Pend Oreille, Waite-Amulet and Aldermac and in the Silvers Eldorado recorded a small gain. Sudbury Basin, Smelters and Falconbridge registered minor loses. British American Oil, of 1-4.

Board Room Gossip

Market Comment

Recent strength in the "power" stocks would appear to be belated recognition of improving revenue and earnings being reported by practically all of the utility group. Expansion expenditures have recently been announced by several of our larger power companies, such as Shawinigan and Saguenay.

Probably no organization in Canada is benefiting more generously in the actual betterment and the prevailing prosperity of the pulp and paper industry than Dominion Engineering Company, controlled through majority stockownership by Dominion Bridge Co. Long regarded as an outstanding manufacturer of newsprint-making machinery, the company has maintained its part in good order during the lean years, and now has also pursued a course of steady research into more efficient design of machinery even when the outlook looked blackest. Consequently, today when the demand is real and outlook brightest, the company is in a position to reap a harvest

Leading Economist Stresses Continued Rise in Prices as Cheap Money Policies And Devaluation of Currencies Produce Boom

For Inflation

We have already pointed out in these Bulletins that the prospects are for a continued rise in prices for some time to come, a rise which will be reflected in security prices as well as in those of commodities. Apart from the fact that demand from consumers is nearly all current production or by inventories built up in anticipation of a continuance of the demand, there are a number of political and financial factors making for price rises which are equally important.

This latter side of the price picture was well portrayed by Dr. Edwin W. Kemmerer, a leading economist and professor of international finance at Princeton, in a recent address, which has come to hand, before the Graduate School of Banking conducted by the American Bankers' Association. Dr. Kemmerer stated that the forces making for inflation appear much more powerful than counteracting influences and hence the logical conclusion is that we are in for a period of rising commodity prices and a higher cost of living.

Among the powerful inflationary forces now pushing prices upward, taking up the cheap money slack already created and in some cases creating more slack to be taken up, are numerous factors which Dr. Kemmerer enumerates as follows:

"The devalued gold dollar and resulting inflow of gold from abroad, accompanied by an increase of gold production, which low commodity prices have stimulated; the government's low interest rates and cheap money policy which encourages credit expansion; our heavy governmental deficits and their financing through borrowing from the banks; the flow of "hot money" from abroad into the United States from war-scared Europe seeking security and profit in this country; our very heavy excess bank reserves, both in commercial banks and Federal Banks; and the prospect of the velocities of bank deposit circulation as business recovers from the depression."

Brazilian Traction

This column has continually pointed out that business conditions in Brazil were showing a vast improvement over last year. A reflection of this condition can be found in the monthly statement of Brazilian Traction Light, Heat & Power Company. Net earnings of this great public utility increased $514,359 in June and a gain of $1,322,484 was shown for the first six months of the year over the same period of 1936. The improvement in the milreis naturally helped the situation and the outlook is that the second half of 1937 will even be ahead of the one described above. There are some of the reasons why Brazilian has been very active and strong in all markets of late.

NO ACTION BY U.S. SEEN IN ORIENT

Japanese Foreign Minister Says U.S. Not to Apply Neutrality Law

Tokyo, July 31 (AP) — Foreign Minister Koki Hirota today told the Japanese Parliament the United States did not intend to apply the American neutrality law, which bans sales of military supplies to warring nations, to the Sino-Japanese military situation.

The State Department in Washington, Hirota said in a government announcement of latest war developments on the Asiatic mainland, is attempting to keep out of the Far Eastern controversy.

(In Washington Secretary of State Cordell Hull said late Thursday he saw no cause for American action in the Chinese crisis.

(The United States neutrality law, last invoked against the belligerents in the Spanish civil war, empowers the President to halt sales of war supplies to all combatants).

General Gen Sugiyama, Minister of War, assured Japan today he was prepared to settle the difficulties by direct military action in view of the Nanking government's rejection of all local settlements, and of the continued sporadic clashes.

PHIL FARLEY IS ONE UP AT END OF FIRST NINE

Ottawa Hunt Club, Ottawa, July 31 (CP)—The 36-hole final round struggle between C. Ross Somerville, of London, and Phil Farley, Montreal, for the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship got away today under the best weather conditions that have greeted starters all week.

"The air was fresh and there was practically not even a whisper of a breeze.

The short, hole-by-hole:

First Hole: 477 yards par 5—Somerville drove a 30-y hook on the fairway. Farley announced his drive and was about 100 yards from the hole. Somerville's second carried him within 150 yards from the pin. Sandy's tee hooked and ran up the right side of the green, 15 feet away. Farley's third, an iron, was 25 feet below the pin. He putted and ran about four feet over the cup and sliced above. Sandy was three feet over. Farley then rimmed the hole for a six and conceded Sandy a four.

Second Hole: 312 yards par 4—Both made good drives and were on in two. Each took two to get down from well out on the green and the hole was halved, leaving Somerville one up.

Third Hole: 407 yards par 4—Both were straight down the fairway and both were on in two, Phil's 16 feet to the right and Sandy's 20 feet to the left. Phil holed out after Sandy's long try was short. Farley won with a birdie three and squared the match.

Fourth Hole: 322 yards par 4—Both drives on the semi-dog leg left each with short approach shots. Sandy dropped his 12 feet from the pin and Phil was 35 feet away. He lipped up his putt and sank it for a birdie three. Sandy needed a four, and Phil went one up.

Fifth Hole: 302 yards par 3—Farley's drive caught the far side of the green. Sandy was short and in the trap. He plopped a foot from the hole. Farley's 30-foot try stopped a foot and a foot away. They conceded a halve in threes.

SAYS LETTERING FADED ON BOXES

Members of the Belleville Cheese Board were informed through Secretary Fred Mallory that a communication had been received by him from Mr. J. F. Singleton, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner of the Dominion, now in Manchester, England, that many of the cheese being received in export trade bear lettering that is faded and illegible. Some attention to the matter of marking boxes is requested by Commissioner Singleton.

MEDWICK IS BASEBALL'S NEW "JOLTER"

Another "Rogers Hornsby" has arisen in the National league, to plague pitchers with his accurate, right hand batting. He is Joe Medwick, outfielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, who has developed into the greatest hitter in the big league with a current batting aver-age of .417. "Ducky Wucky" Medwick's perfect batting style is dissected by the magic eye camera in this series of pictures. Should Joe finish this season with .400 or better, he would become the first major leaguer to finish in that magic circle since "Rajah" Hornsby turnpies with a current batting aver-ed the trick in 1925.

GALLACHER—TRUMAN

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday in Christ Church with Rev. C. G. G. Wright officiating when Miss Edith Byrl Truman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Truman became the bride of Mr. John McBride Gallacher, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Gallacher, Glasgow, Scotland. HEALTHY FEET REQUIRE CARE
Proper Footwear is Big Factor
SHIRLEY ROSS

Ill-fitting shoes, she knows, bring on aches and beauty blemishes.

By Helen Follett

THE BARE feminine foot does not inspire admiration. Observe them on bathing beaches, and you will come to the conclusion that a lot of beautifying could be done along that line.

Be wise when selecting footwear. Go to a reliable shoe store and follow the advice that is offered. Few women know what style of shoe they should wear. The extremely high heel is only for the festive evening party, so stock up on practical walking shoes that provide width, free ankle and space for wiggling toes. Shoes should conform to the outline of the foot.

Ninety women out of 100 have corns, callouses, ingrowing toenails, strained tendons or bunions. That's a bad record.

No woman whose feet hurt can display a tranquil face. Nor can she maintain a sweet disposition. Body balance is destroyed and the spinal column may become affected.

Take time off from the business of putting on make-up and buying pretty clothes and devote some time to the care of the feet.

Don't test perfume by putting it on a fabric. Rub it on the back of your hands wait until the alcohol evaporates and you'll get the real fragrance.

Fine alcohol is worth the investment. Spray the chest and upper arms after the bath. The odor will last for a long, long time if the flesh is warm when the application is made.

Perfumes are weakened by light and heat. Keep yours in a cool, dark place.

When selecting a perfume, don't sniff many samples. Your nose gets confused, and you may make an unhappy choice. When you find one that delights you, stick to it. Putting different scents on cloths and handkerchiefs is a bad plan.

Skin-dryness is another little black frock for goings-on in town. A beauty is of black marquisette, gathered all over with narrow ruching round the neck. There is a narrow band for the belt, and just below the neck is a triangular cut-out.

Don't Force An Infant To Walk

Pushing His Ahead Before He is Ready is Apt to Harm Him

By LIDA QUINELLO

Until the five Emily and Doris had been friends and in a sense, rivals, as all girls of an approximate age must be. They had been brought up together, had gone to the same school and the same dances and had fought over the same beaux. They hadn't had a double wedding because Doris had been married six months later than Emily. But double babies had been born less than a month apart—both boys.

Settled in the same neighborhood, there was, of course, a great deal of running to and fro, comparing notes reporting progress. Doris' Gerwald began crawling before Harold did, although he was the younger. Emily's Harold still just sat haughtily smiling. Gerwald could feed himself with a spoon, distributing only half the contents on his bib but Harold preferred to be fed.

It was humiliating for Emily, not only because Doris knew and could glory in her superiority, but because she herself, in all honesty, had to admit that Gerwald was unquestionably more advanced than her Harold in just about every way.

So Emily started educating Harold. She sat out to teach him all of Gerwald's tricks—so feed himself, to stand, to take a step alone. But Harold was not ambitious and did not want to learn tricks.

Not it was accomplished! Harold could stand! He could even totter a step or so forward. He could feed himself, although only half the time threw the food around and went without any dinner.

At this stage, Emily called Doris in to look—and was satisfied. She failed to notice that Harold's straight legs were already becoming bowed. So was Doris herself. The child than Gerwald, and his legs were not yet strong enough to bear his weight.

In the triumph of seeing Harold clutch the spoon in his tiny fist and occasionally find his mouth with it, Emily forgot to notice that the effort, the nervous strain of trying to do something he was not yet ready to do was making Harold cross and fussy about his food.

Backwardness, nervous strain, tiredness, mean nothing. Some children get very far advanced very quickly; others with naturally high intelligence develop slowly. In fact often the baby with the greatest potentiality, the most promising intelligence, organizes himself slowly. He is complex. There is more to organize.

And certainly, no baby should be forced.

Quits North After 15 Years Amazed at Depression Talk

Edmonton, Alta., July 31. — A muddy-faced Robinson Crusoe from the north, J. L. Sharples of Hay River, N.W.T., who hasn't left the bleak solitude of his distant trapping post once in the past fifteen years, was amazed to complain the other day and decided he didn't like the city.

He was emphatic about it too. As far as he was concerned Edmonton was as unlikeable as straw-berry shortcake without strawberries and the sooner he got out of here the better he would like it.

"Ah, I don't like crowds. They make me dizzy and I'm sick and tired of the noises of Edmonton. The worst is the place I'm in now. I haven't even bothered looking over Jasper Avenue. I haven't been in since 1919. Do you think I came all the way from the north, 55 miles from Fort Resolution, to start crossing streets and dodging cars? he protested, indignantly.

Starts Each Fall.

Every year, he said, he leaves Hay River by canoe in the first days of August or the first days of September for his trapping post on the north shore of Great Slave Lake, between Jones Point and Dardisky Island.

He comes back to Hay River for a few days in February and then goes back again. He has to return until the end of June. All in all, he spends nearly 11 months of every year paddling, during which time the only other human being in the territory he sees is the trader on the other side of the lake.

Sharples has been living like that for 15 years—and he loves it.

"The north has no crowds, no city-cueils, no fuss, bustle and selling or anything else. It's a peaceful place for me. If you take sick while trapping, that's your tough luck. You've got to take your changes. Although Sharples said he always takes a bunch of newspapers and magazines with him in his long canoe trip to his trapping post, he admitted that the only time he really catches up with the news is when he gets into Hay River or Resolution, two or three times a year.

Conversation revealed that he did not know there had been a depression or the intimate details of King Edward VIII's abdication.

"Depression? I didn't know of any. I bought, traded and selling my furs and making money. That's what I like about the north. It's a good place to make money. All I knew was that my furs kept going up and down in price, and I read about a depression in the papers, but it didn't mean very much to me.

"All I know is that when I get back to civilization, England I am going right back to my trapping and then I will be really happy again. Sharples said he has accepted best wishes for a happy trip to Europe by relatives and his he has not seen for nearly 30 years.

Husband Goes on Ski-Doo Strike; Wants to Send Gift to Girl's Mother

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Just because I am out of work, I am being treated like the housemaid, cook, chauffeur and mechanic, and that's not all. I have a child and that I am unemployed, and that my wife has a good job. She, however, blames me for unemployment, depression, all political blunders, and even my own shortcomings. I'm fed up.

When I work I make a good salary, don't drink, smoke, bet or buy my own meals and here, too. Up at 5:00 a.m., I cook, wash and act as chauffeur-valet. I seem to be forgotten. When she comes home she eats the dinner I get. She has the car, she goes, and drive here wherever she wants to go. I meet her with the car at all hours at her request business, and am otherwise a slave.

She has been injured three times in auto accidents (I was not driving at the time). She has been laid up for six months on account of accidents, and I paid nurses' and doctors' bills. Now I am on a skid-down strike.

If women demand equality, they should grant equality, instead of asking for per cent consideration for their so-called "feminine helplessness."

Friends Honor Bride and Groom

On Thursday evening, neighbors and friends met at the home of Mrs. J. Boldrick to honour her son Arthur, and his bride Irene (Reynolds), who were recently married. Rev. Iverson called the gathering to order. A short program of readings by Miss M. Treverton and Mr. C. Elliott, and music by Mr. Mervin Robinson was given. Mr. Chas. Elliott read the address and the gifts were presented. Mr. and Mrs. Boldrick expressed their appreciation for the many kind wishes and presents. A bountiful lunch was served after which dancing was enjoyed. Following is the address:

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Boldrick

Dear Arthur and Irene,—

Some wise person once said, "Some men are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them." But matrimony is very different from greatness. One is ever born married, few have marriage thrust upon them, the majority of the male members of the "genus homo" achieve the married state only after weeks, months and sometimes years of patient, painstaking endeavor. We congratulate you, heartily, Arthur, upon having attained the highest goal with the fine a lady as Irene to walk the road of life's journey with you.

We use that word "walk" advisedly, Marriage is not a race to be run in which each is trying to get ahead of the other, but rather a walk, side by side, in which each may help the other over steep hillsides and fords and a helping hand in those difficulties which will inevitably arise.

It used to be a common said, "When you get married your troubles begin." While we do not believe that neither do we believe that married is a panacea, for all the ills that flesh is heir to; but that if both parties enter into it unselfishly and whole-heartedly, they may multiply their joys, divide their sorrows and add to the sum total of human happiness.

We welcome you, Irene, to our neighborhood. As we get to know each other better and mingle together in social intercourse, we hope you will not be disappointed in the neighbors among whom you have come to live. We know our community life will be enriched by your presence among us. We anticipate very much pleasure from having you with us in our social gatherings and we know you will nobly feel it your duty as homemaker and neighbor.

We pray that God's blessing may rest upon your lives that you may acknowledge Him in all your ways and that He may ever direct your paths.

We have brought some tokens of our goodwill and friendliness for you, some useful, some ornamental, and we hope they will serve re-minders of this happy occasion.

We pray that you may have a long, happy and prosperous life, that your home may be a centre of influence for good in the community and that as you walk life's pathway together you may realize that the Author of the feast is the beginning of wisdom" and "that the house of the righteous shall stand."

Signed on behalf of your neighbors and friends,

Charlie Treverton

Kenneth Hicks.

On the following Tuesday evening the charivari party gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Reynolds to present their gift to Mr. and Mrs. Boldrick. Miss Elfleda Haynes read an address and Mr. Jack Simmons presented a beautiful electric waffle iron and end table. The bride and groom made suitable replies, thanking them for their generosity. A lunch was served at the close of the social evening.

Following is the address:

Tuesday, July 20th, 1937.

Dear Irene and Arthur,—

It is with pleasure the charivari party gathered here this night to spend one more social evening with you.

We appreciate your generosity so much that we felt we could not spend it in treats for ourselves.

We would ask you to accept this table, remembering as you use it, your charivari friends.

Wishing you every success in your new home.

Signed on behalf of your friends,
Elfleda Haynes
Jack Simmons.

"GOOD MANNERS"

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Wedding Dinner

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

The bride and groom, with the bridesmaid and best man, are to go to the minister's house to be married. After the ceremony, they plan to have dinner at the bride's home. Should the wedding party of four sit at a separate table for dinner, or should they sit with the bride's family consisting of four adults?

O.

This is a question of the bride's choice. There may be a bridal table in the dining room for the bride's family, or there may be only one table. Since there are only a few guests to be seated, it would seem to me far more appropriate for the bride to be considered the hostess and groom sit next to each other, the bride at the groom's right. The bridesmaid sits at the groom's left and the best man sits at the bride's right.

Former In-Laws

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

I am divorced and have remarried and am very happy. Sometime ago I met my ex-sister-in-law and her husband. They both expressed their desire to visit me, and without thinking, I invited them to dinner in the very near future. I told my husband of the' meeting, but not the dinner date, and now I am wondering if it is all right to have them or if I should make some excuse. Or should I keep my friendly terms with them? I certainly do not want disharmony in my happy home, neither do I want to be disloyal to my husband. That is why I am wondering what is the right thing to do.

M.

The person to ask about this problem is your husband, for it is he who is most concerned. Apparently there is no reason, if he approves, why you should not keep up this friendly relationship with your ex-husband's sister and her husband. So do not worry about beginning this relationship with them in your new life; talk it over with your husband; and of course abide by what he prefers to have you do.

Wedding Present Check

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My niece is about to be married and we received an invitation to the wedding and also to the reception. Our sex died just about two months ago. We still feel very much grieved as he was about to be married before he passed away. Will you please let me know whether it would be all right just to send a check as a gift to send congratulations, and not to attend? We would not like to offend. How should such a letter be worded?

T.

I can deeply understand, and I am sure that your niece will deeply understand, that you would find it impossible to attend this wedding. Please don't force yourself to go through the ordeal . . . no one would wish you to be so cruel to yourself.

Then you would have to acknowledge the invitation. I judge that you are a friend of theirs, and so your answer would read:

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hill regret that they are unable to accept Mr. and Mrs. (bride's parents:)s kind invitation for

Tuesday, the first of August to be present at the reception to acknowledged, in the same form in which it was worded. Then, having made this necessary acknowledgment you might write your note to your niece, enclosing the check. Your note might be worded something like this:

Dearest Dorothy:

I know that you and Tom and your family will understand why your uncle and I cannot come to your wedding . . . our hearts are still too heavy with sorrow. Please know, dear girl, that we would be with you if we could, and that we want for you and Tom every happiness in the world.

We are also going to ask for your understanding . . . instead of sending you a cheque, to buy for your new home something that you wish. Will you do that for us, and remember that whatever you decide to buy will be surrounded with our love and devotion to you both?

We hope to see you very soon . . . please come to see us whenever you have a chance. Will you?

Dearest love and every blessing.

Affectionately,

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

The weary hours his days of pain,
His troubled nights are past,
His ever patient worn-out frame,
Has found sweet rest at last.
Long gays, long nights he bore his pain,
To wait for sure, but all in vain,

FOXBORO WINS OVER CANNIFTON TWICE IN WEEK

Score 10-2 Win Last Night as Ernie Smith Loses Control

PLAYOFFS TO START
Foxboro, July 31 (Special)—Foxboro proved their superiority over the Canniffon entrants in the S. H. League, for the second time this week when in playing the last scheduled game of the season here, they jumped on the league-leaders for a score of 10-2 victory.
Foxboro has three postponed games yet to play but in all probability they will remain unplayed as they cannot possibly have any bearing on the final standing of the league. Undoubtedly the playoffs will be started next week with Foxboro being the second of the four-team Ontario Juniors.
Canniffon fielded their strongest possible team for the final game and Foxboro but two players showed an aggressiveness which surprised even themselves and after spotting the locals a two run lead in the third, came back at them in the fourth to score four, and in the fifth it was just a case of how many.
Smith Loses Control
The game started off like an exciting ball game with Foxboro's two ex-National hurlers, Wilkins for Foxboro and Ernie Smith for Canniffon and for three innings both went well. Wilkins pitched himself out of a nasty hole in the first when with the bases loaded and none away, he bore down to retire the side without a run. In the second Foxboro nipped a rally when Walt took Means' line drive to double Simpson off first. Canniffon took the lead in the third as S. Jarrell singled, Cole walked and both scored on Simpson's timely single. Foxboro, batting all the way around in the fourth, scoring four runs and in the fifth repeated the dose as E. Smith's control went lacking, he walking in a run after the bases were loaded. Coupled with Wilkins' effectiveness, the Canniffon defence broke wide open, committing three errors afield which together with three hits, two walks and a hit batsman saw six runs cross the plate for the locals.
Wilkins limited the Canniffon boys to four hits in all, while he struck out six. He mitigated his performance however, by issuing four walks, one of which entered the scoring. E. Smith was nicked for seven hits, struck out five, walked three and hit one.
Lineups:—Foxboro—L. Jarrell, 3b; Sinfield, lf; E. Jarrell, c; Cole, 1b; Simpson, ss; Hartrige and Bush, 3b; Simpson, rf; Means, cf and Smith, p. Foxboro—Seeley, 2b; Wilkins, p; C. Wilkins, 1b; E. Wilkins, p; Murray, c; Guay, ss; Williams, lf; Walt, 3b; Peacock, cf.
Score by innings: R.H.E
Canniffon ..... 0 0 0 2 0 0 0— 2 4 4
Foxboro ..... 0 0 0 4 4 2 x—10 7 3

SOMERVILLE AND FARLEY IN FINAL

Meet Today For Title of Best Canadian Amateur in Golf

Toronto, July 31 (CP)—The mad pace set by Phil Farley in a dazzling rush to his first Canadian amateur golf championship final round neared its end today as the sensational 20-year-old Montrealer, who has had to fight his way through the last four rounds, Somerville came to the final for the sixth time with a 5 and 3 victory over Jimmy Todd of Victoria, B.C., who packed his bags last night and left for St. Paul, Minn., to enter the St. Paul open.

Against Somerville Todd shot a medal 72 in the morning, one under par, but was two down at the lunch interval. Sandy's remarkable 69 spelled the difference.

The London golfer, once United States amateur champion, never relinquished that lead in the afternoon. It was built up by one hole and whittled down as Todd tried gamely to overcome the deficit, but Sandy put the finishing touch to the match on the 33rd green with a birdie two.

C. P. R. HANDED 13-9 TROUNCING

Grahams Win First Contest in Semi-Final Round

Trenton, July 31—(Special)—An unexpected upset was registered last night when a spunky Grahams softball club handed C.P.R. a big trouncing in the first town league semi-final contest at Raynboro diamond last night. The trainmen used two pitchers against the aggressive Grahamites, Ayers started for the railway squad and after receiving a steady bombardment was replaced by the veteran Rusk Fowler in the second inning of a pinch hitter. Gordon Derry handled the mound assignment for the winners and although giving up 18 hits was a tower of strength in the tight spots. Graham's murderers' row clubbed the pair of C.P.R. flingers for 25 hits over the nine round route.

The loosing aggregation threatened their rivals only once in the third session knotting the count with a two run outburst. Batting honors of the evening went to tiny Tommy Emerson, who collected three safeties in four times at the plate and figured in his teams six run rally in the fourth inning with a hard double to the middle section of the lot that scored two mates.

A spectacular nine inning catch was made by Victor Burtt on Derry's drive to centre, retiring the side in the sixth canto. Burtt had to run from deep centre field to pull off the circus catch and the lengthy applause from the crowd was deafening. Incidently the O.P.R. centre fielder is the prize rookie of the town league and has been in the spotlight throughout the regular schedule with a fine display of fielding and club swinging.

Teams: Grahams—Miller, c; Gray, 3b; Anderson, ss; Long, lb; Brownson, cf; Derry, rf; Forster, 2b; A. Anderson, lf; Gervis, p; Rusk, p.

C. P. R.—Ferguson, 2b; Burtt, cf; Waltron, lf; F. Kennedy, c; Lott, lb; M. Kennedy, 3b; Hafley, rf; Reid, 1b; Sager, p; alternates, Millson, Ellis, Bowler.

Umpires—O. Ward and J. Baker.

KIWANIS CINCH PLAY-OFF BERTH

Belleville Kiwanis juniors strengthened their fourth place position in Meetings League berth by virtue of a 4 to 2 victory over the Latta nine, at the latter village last evening, and thereby assured themselves of a play-off position in the final league playdown. It marked the only defeat of the season the Kiwanis kids had over Latta, but the game marked the Juniors' fourth consecutive victory.

Tied two-all in the fourth Pal Blaker, junior catcher, caught one of Young's fast balls for the circuit blow, a home run, scoring two runs and resulting in victory. The Latta nine filled the bases in the last inning, of a five inning affair and needed a run, but Young batted out of order and the number scoring was ordered back to third and subsequently did not cross the plate as the kids tightened their play.

Joe Kelleher hurled for the Kiwanis limiting the home team to four singles, no player getting more than one hit. Aside from Blaker's circuit blow Keith Weeks led the kids with a brace of hits, to score a run and drive one in in the initial frame. The Juniors scored two runs in the initial frame and added two more in the fourth while Latta scored a single run in the first and a pair each of two errors and a walk. Their final run, in the fourth, was the result of a hit and two infield outs. Collins, Kelleher and Plummer counted single hits for the Juniors while Latta used two pitchers, Young for four and Gervais for the remainder inning. The line-ups:

Kiwanis Juniors: Bonsky 2b, Collins 3b, Whalen lb, Kelleher p, Weeks c, Plummer rf, Baker s, McQuaid ss and McDonald lf.

Latta: Marsh, cf, Thompson, 2b, Gervais, c, Young, p, Fargey, lf, Hall, Young and Callaghan.

Score by innings:

Kiwanis ..... 2 0 0 2 0 0— 4 5 1

Percivals and Aajmaas Tie For Fourth Place in Loop Race; Play Deciding Game Monday

Percivals Beaten by Sergents And Aajmaas by Pointers

PLAYOFF DATES

Playoffs Open on Tuesday In First Round And Continue Week

When both the Percival Store and Aajmaas juniors lost to the Belleville Sargents and the Point Anne teams respectively in the final games of the regular schedule of the Belleville Senior Softball League last evening the result created a tie for fourth position in the league standing and necessitated a sudden death play-off game to determine which of these two clubs, Percivals or Aajmaas, shall gain a play-off berth in the league.

Behind the steady pitching of Stan Laffman the Point Anne "Greenmen" terminated the regular schedule with an 8 to 0 victory over the Aajmaas lads at Point Anne. The Aajmaasters knocked Mont the juniors' starting pitcher from the slab in the initial frame, while Laffman went on to limit the juniors to four hits in the Point Anne. Over at Coleman Flats the Belleville Sargents rallied in the fifth to score five runs and ultimately beat the Percival Store nine 8-7. The Percivals staged a belated last inning rally to score two, but Eddie Kirkpatrick, the Sargents' pitcher-manager, stemmed the tide and won. Kizer wielded a potent bat for the Percival Store and was the big hitter of the night.

Standings Announced

Following the result of the games and with the league schedule terminated and the league plays scheduled to start next week, President Wm. Todd announced the official league standing today. The Point Anne club won the league and finished first; Corbin Locks, second; Belleville Sargents, third; while the Aajmaas juniors and the Percival Store juniors tied for fourth position. According to the league by-laws the team finishing first shall meet the third place club, while the team finishing second meets the fourth place club. President Todd ordered the Aajmaas and Percivals to meet in a sudden death game at Colemans Flats on Monday afternoon, the winner to be ready to meet the Corbin Locks in the play-offs on Tuesday night.

Umpires Named

The umpires named to officiate in the league play-offs, that open on Tuesday night with Corbin Locks meeting the Belleville Sargents on the Point Anne field diamond, are Albert Ebbler, Don Thomas, George Clapper, Chuck Bowen, Ted Townsend and Harold Bowden. The umpires will be appointed for each respective game as play-offs proceed.

The schedule for the first round of the Belleville Senior Softball League playoffs is as follows:

Tuesday, at Point Anne at Belleville Sargents.

Wednesday, Winner of Percival-Aajmaas versus Corbin Locks.

Thursday: Belleville Sargents vs. Point Anne.

Friday: Corbin Locks vs. winner Percival-Aajmaas.

The Percival-Aajmaas play-off game will be played Monday afternoon prior to the league all-star benefit game under the lights. All possible thing games in the first round play-off series will be played on Monday and Tuesday of the week commencing Aug. 9th.

CREWS ABOARD YACHTS ENDEAVOUR, RANGER ARE ASTIR QUITE EARLY

By A. D. MERRELL

Newport, R.I., July 31 (CP) — Crews aboard T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavour II and Harold S. Vanderbilt's Ranger were astir bright and early today with last minute preparations for the opening races over the 30-mile diamond course for possession of the America's Cup.

The blue-hulled challenger, flying the white ensign of the Royal Ocean Racing Club, was getting white defender, hoisting the blue burgee of the New York Yacht Club aboard, the signal to proceed to the starting line.

The weather forecaster promised light to moderate southwesterly winds with indications of rain as the two sloops, exquisitely groomed and resplendent in the early morning light, moved out their anchor lines.

The start is scheduled for 12:45 p.m. E.D.T. but may be postponed 25 fifteen minute intervals up to 2:40 p.m. at the discretion of the race committee.

A record spectator fleet of yachts and excursion craft ranging from fishing smacks to the motor ship Philadelphia, palatial tender for the British challenger, Harry Guggenheim aboard by a fleet of United States Coast Guard cutters.

Overhead, airplanes droned, busy with the business of early rising photographers.

The boats are so evenly matched the consensus was the outcome of all the hubbub is in the lap of the gods. The return engagement of these two world-trotting sloops sportsmen — Vanderbilt and Sopwith—three years after their first struggle for the Cup, marks the sixteenth time that the historic trophy since it was captured by the schooner America 86 years ago in British waters.

HERE ARE THE BASEBALL WRITERS AT WORK

So you thought that baseball writers were just a laughing, carefree bunch of guys who sit up in their coop, munched peanuts, rooled for their team and then wrote about the game for their newspapers? Well, and got paid for it, mind you. Well, look 'em over at work. How many don't believe that reporting major league baseball is serious business. The photo at the top left is a general view of the interior of the press coop, at the New York polo grounds. Left, a B. B. writer going over his story, chopping out dead wood. As it is to be filled for telegraphing to his paper, superfluous adjectives must be cut out. Right, this man has an urgent assignment—so urgent that he can't take time to write the story. He is "phoning it in" direct from the press coop. Lower right, guesswork has no place in the press coop. This man is using binoculars to observe the events at second base so that he can write the facts.

The second selected all-star team will play the Corbin Locks at Coleman Flats, Monady evening, with the proceeds to the Softball League, President Bill Todd, Harry Bateman and Harry Jackson in charge of the all-stars. Mealticket Hubbell is Slated To Pull Giants Out of Slump And Reduce Lead of the Cubs

Chicago Went Four Games up, When They Win Over Giants

FOUR GAME LEAD

Wilson Hurls Hitless Ball For Two Frames And Drives In Winner

By SID FEDER

It's up to the mealticket again. Carl Hubbell has to be right for today's game with the Cubs. If those Chicago ciontors punch Mealticket Hubbell full of holes again, as they did last week, the Giants are going to have as much chance of climbing elephants around by the tails as they will of catching the Cubs at their current pace.

When the Cubs clouted their jinx, Harry Gumbert, for a 7-3 win in the series opener yesterday, largely through the help of Giant fielding errors, it knocked the ball around, the Terry Terriers were dropped four games back in the league. If Hubbell can't do it today, the Giants are going to need a ton of horseshoes to overcome the resultant five game lead down the stretch.

Given their first effective pitching in a week, and aided by Lou Gehrig's homer No. 28, Yankees walloped the Browns 8-2 yesterday behind Kemp Wicker. Wicker, a fellow who looks like, like the Athletics, were ide, the win boosted the Yankees' edge half a game.

The classic of the day came in Pittsburgh, where Waite Hoyt pulls a story-book finish to one of the season's tightest pitching duels by scoring the only run in the ninth inning to top the Boston Bees 1-0. Hoyt's seventh inning double drove in a two hit victory and bested old Guy Bush in the decision.

Another tight flinging engagement found Lefty Lamaster, one of the year's better pitching rookies, hurling a five-hit shutout to give the Phillies a 1-0 win over Cincinnati Reds in a night game. The Dodgers and Cardinals were idle.

Jack Wilson pitched hitless relief ball for two innings and then doubled in the tenth to drive in the run that gave the Red Sox a 6-5 victory over Detroit Tigers. Washington's Senators, continuing their record heavy hitting, pounded a couple of pitchers for 18 hits and a 13-2 conquest of the hapless Cleveland Indians.

JERSEY CITY BEATEN TWICE

The baseball adage still holds good. You've got to win the close ones if you want to go places.

Manager Travis Jackson will vouch for that. His Jersey City Giants would be battling for a playoff berth instead of languishing in the International League cellar, if they could come through when the chips are down.

The Giants have played an unusually large number of tight ball games, with, 46 of them being decided by one run. Of these, the Giants have been able to take but nineteen decisions.

The Jerseys followed from yesterday and dropped a pair of close ones to Buffalo Bisons. They lost the opener 6-4 after 12 innings and were nosed out in the nightcap 3-1.

Veteran Bill Harris stopped the Giants with three hits in the second contest.

The double win gave Buffalo sole possession of third place as Toronto Leafs split 4-4 in a double and fell back to fifth place behind Syracuse Chiefs, who swept a doubleheader from Baltimore Monday. Royals 9-7 and 7-1. The Bears overcame a four-run first inning deficit to beat the Leafs.

Rochester Red Wings improved their chances of cracking into the first division with a 15-3 win over Baltimore.

TORONTO AGAIN IN FRONT

Port Dalhousie, Ont., July 31—(CP)—Toronto Argonauts held a 23-point lead over their historic rivals, Buffalo West Sides, as the Canadian Senior Regatta entered its third and final day today. The Argos piled up an aggregate of 63 points over West Sides' 40 in the first two days' events, but the Bisons had a chance to pull even on account of their lost prestige.

Yesterday's two victories oarsmen make virtually a clean sweep of events with the big Toronto Dons, coached by "Pop-eye" Donnelly, scoring over Buffalo West Sides in the Junior Eights. It was a day of surprises, especially that in the second heat of the eights when Hamilton Leanders, on a winning streak in this feature event was bumped by the Argos crew under Mike Broderick.

Jim Kennedy of Argos won the Association Singles final by two lengths over C. Goldsbury of Princeton University and learned himself of a place in the championships to-day with Johnny Ahearn and Chuck Campbell, Gordon Eglsbaw took the Junior Single Sculls and then teamed with B. Scallerpeil to win the Junior Double.

The Canoe event shuffled to St. Catharines' victory in the 140-pound Junior Eights, beating Argos in easy fashion.

In the early days of the race there was a vast difference between the Yankee and British boats, with the former being of a light structure, which gave them a marked advantage over the heavier British boats that had to traverse the ocean. In more recent years, however, the contesting craft have become more alike, making the races more evenly matched. This was brought about because the development of the art of boat building, with speed as an objective, naturally forced them together, and because the rules were amended to require the building of fairly substantial boats which, theoretically at least, could be used for cruising. British subjects are of the opinion the Endeavour had will at last lift the cup, as it has been on this side of the water for these many years past. The races are held every other day and will be broadcast as well as reported vividly in the newspapers of the world.

Did you know that no ball player has hit a home run in any of the Yankee Stadium, in New York—not even Babe Ruth?

Today Peterboro is playing its home C. O. R. L. game versus Cobourg, in connection with the Summer Town's Centennial Celebrations, and I have invited to officiate. We have not umpired in the spacious Dave Shier Park since away back in 1926, when the C.O.R.L. dished up some real baseball for the fans. Ike Weatherstad the Napanee Gibbards are transferring their Orioles' Sunday home date, versus Oshawa, to the Motor City. The Gibbons are not drawing any too well at home, their last home stand bringing in exactly $27.00 and you can't operate a senior ball club on such small patronage. In the meantime the Petes are slated to play in Kingston on Monday also.

There seems to be no stopping the Belleville Intermediates these days. Last night they replenished their record with another victory and assured themselves of a play-off berth in the South Hastings League by virtue of a 6 to 2 victory over the Latta nine in the latter village. The game wasn't played without incident as the Bannerman Park ball seriously and had Shipper Woodley and his charges on their toes throughout. Pat Blake smashed a homer with one aboard to clinch the evil doers in the fourth. While all of this was going on the Canadian "Killers" downed their second consecutive game to Foxboro by the top-ed score of 16-3 with Ernie Smith on the sh. The "Killers" seem to have found their form of late and are plenty worried, we hear. Last evening's final combats terminated the regular schedule of games, doubtless President Ed Hurst and Secretary Art Hall will announce the league play-off dates on Tuesday.

The local Senior Softball League rung down its league schedule last evening, as Point Anne beat the Aajmaa kids and the Bell-Sargents who have beaten Corbins twice, Skipper Chuck Smith of Aajmaas blanked the Percival Store nine, the result of this week's play leaves the Percival Store and Aajmaa kids tied for fourth place in the league standing. They will play a sudden death game on Monday afternoon to determine which club goes into the league play-downs versus the second placed Corbin outfit. In the meantime the league play-offs commence Tuesday with the league leading Point Anne nine meeting the Bell-Sargents in the opening game at Coleman Flats.

The Peterboro Auburns won over the Oshawa 222's by the score of 17 to 9 last evening. It was the Auburns' eleventh consecutive victory in the league. The Rowers will play two games next week with Oshawa in the Motor City on Wednesday and in the Wellington Arena next Friday night.

Billie Hughes has been induced to come out of retirement, as a senior softball star, to umpire Monday night's all-star softball game at Coleman Flats, President Bill Todd says.

Today the sixteenth attempt of the Canadians to lift the America's Cup, is being made with T.O.M. Sopwith's Endeavour the boat, as Harold Vanderbilt's Ranger the defender of the old mug, which has only two fine races in cup competition during the past 90 years. Twice during the history of the America's Cup the Canadians have competed with Belleville being one of the Canadian challengers with the Atlanta, but neither has been successful incidentally the late Wm. "Kingo" Mackenzie was also the Atlanta's crew, we understand.

The cup was first put up for international competition about 86 years ago by the Royal Yacht Squadron, at which time the ship was built by the late Queen Victoria witnessing the first sailing of the cup during which an American-owned boat triumphed over 14 other craft, representing the various nations for the first time in history, however, women are the principal figures in the spectacle every today with Mrs. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Sopwith being appointed to those honorary positions. Racing for the America's Cup is truly the sport of kings, as the boats are fitted for little other than the great race itself, if, after the race the boats are geared for pleasure, extensive remodelling is necessary, as the boats are built solely for that purpose, all members of the crew must be above deck during the progress of each race.

Challenging boats and crews must sail across the ocean to compete for the cup, and only when favorable winds are unfavorable can towing assistance be given the challenger to help her across the ocean. During the last 81 years 15 contests have taken place, making today's the sixteenth. One race, two two and later three races had to be won before a winner of the cup was declared. In 1930, for the first time, the winner was required to win four out of a possible seven races. The race over two distinct routes and 30 miles in length. One day it is raced on two 15 mile legs, one out and the return the next race, is over a triangular course the first day, and the next day. And the races are alternated.

SALUTE TO Love

By Rachel Black
(I am not Miss Indiana)

Always, in those tales of Pompey, the butler's leanness stood out as a conspicuous trait. Lean, Lazy. No Kate asked herself finally, "Where would a very lazy person put something to get at on a hot August morning?"

She knew the answer to that but there was something else that she wanted in the refrigerator. She went on and outdoors, to the quarters of Pompey and Dinah. There was a screen door on the little brick-floored porch before their kitchen door and they opened any before they went to bed. She could just discern a tiny star in the darkness. Zeke by his pipe, Abby by her white apron. There was no moon yet, and not a great deal of starlight, for the day had been showery.

Kate said softly, "Is Rutherford asleep?"

"Yes'm, Miss Kate," answered Abby. "Why for you ask?"

Kate took the rickety chair Zeke offered her, and her own kneecaps were trembling like hey voices. Because there's something Kate—and we must talk over. Listen, you two! I've found out where the silver was hidden!"

"Whar?" they asked together.

Kate told them, after much reasons for her belief.

There was no response for a time, then Zeke said with surprising clairvoyance, "It 'pears like you don't want dat silver to be found, Miss Kate."

"Would you be afraid?" asked Kate quietly.

Zeke meditated. "Dogs would be ds worryome part——"

Kate's answer was quick. "Mr. Howard hates my grown dogs. I found that out. Only some puppies. Those dogs and bats don't fit in the planning to train himself. He keeps them locked up at night, and I've got to barking, it wouldn't mean anything."

Zeke said meditatively, "Mister Howard sleep in yer grand'ad's room. Da war ain't de day I'm goin' to a place from his windows. But, Miss Kate, I'm a-bein' frank, it seem like we oughter ask Major Sam."

"No!" said Kate hastily. "No! That would be a waste of time. I'm sure it wasn't right or decent to dig up Father's silver while he was away. I'll just instead on asking Jeff Howard's permission, or at least telling him after I've found it. And what would happen then, Zeke?"

"Time we got to diggin', silver'd be gone, maybe."

"Yes," said Kate. "He'd beat us to it." She believed Jeff Howard would also at seeming to be kind and humble her. Though he might neither need nor covet the buried silver, he would withhold it from Kate if he could.

Abby remarked unexpectedly. "Dis heyar a nice dark night." There was something portentous in her words.

"Yes'm," said Kate, "it's quiet enough. Zeke," Kate said tri-umphantly, "Abby thinks we ought to go!"

"Lawd, honey! Abby goin' too!" announced the old woman.

They drew closer together in the darkness and made their plans. A wheelbarrow, a long rope, pointed wing almost brushing Kate's shoulder, but she did not notice.

CHAPTER XV

In order not to arouse her sister's suspicions, Kate went back to her room, undressed and went to bed. When Caroline came upstairs later, apparently drowsy with sleep.

Kate mumbled faintly, "Too bad you're out, Honey. My head went into a window—" They took turns wisely sleeping in the more comfortably placed bed. Actually Kate would have been happy for Caroline (who had looked pale and tired after the damp heat) to have the place by the window, but Caroline, as usual, would not rise it. Much better, she decided, for Caroline to sleep across the room where sounds from the "the expedition" would not reach her.

Kate lay still for a long time. Caroline's regular breathing told that she slept. Then she got quietly and lightly out, dressed herself in dark clothes and tennis shoes and crept downstairs.

When she reached the quarters of Zeke and Abby she found them ready and waiting. Together they went to the barn for the wheelbarrow, see if Zeke had carried out her orders. Yes, Dobbin was pitched to the "spring wagon." On the wagon floor was the pick, two spades and some burlap sacking in which to wrap the silver, when they had found it. Kate took her seat on the sacking and motioned Zeke and Abby to the driver's seat.

No mishap accompanied the departure. They went by way of the pasture gate, Kate closing it silently behind them. They followed the Mount Rebron pike for a mile, then took the crossroad that led to the State Pike. As they were about to make this turn a motor car rushed past them, causing Kate to realize her recklessness in insisting that they carry no lighted lanterns.

This narrow escape seemed to rob Zeke of his courage, to bring him to his senses. He was all for turning around and going home while there was yet time for discussion.

"Oh here hushhhhh!" an argumentative monosyllable. "Is dat! All right sneaky, an' risky, too. Ain't no good comin' of it."

Abby, always the more adventurous of the two, gave him a resounding slap on the cheek nearer her. "You give me dem lines," she muttered. "If'n you's 'fraid of yoah shadow, Mr. Zeke, you kin stand in de shade ourselves."

Kate knew had the desired effect. Zeke put Dobbin into as brisk a walk as the darkness allowed. A growing excitement gripped them all and, as they drew near to Mood Meadows, Kate was actually aware of her heart pounding at her rim.

"Hurry!" she whispered as Zeke dallied with the tying of the horse in the woodland avenue. "Why! Let's get at it!"

Zeke responded no longer dark. The fragment of a new moon was showing itself. Their eyes could discern the outlines of things.

They kept to the shadows. Only Abby's white apron was conspicuous of moon-lit space that must be traversed. This was the stretch that led to the oak tree, the house itself.

"Now!" whispered Kate. She went to the west of the tree, while was the side farthest from the house. She looked up at the outstretched limbs and with her eyes she determined its height, calculated its shadow on the ground. She knelt at a certain spot and pointed to the ground. "Dig here!" she said.

Zeke obeyed. The digging was almost soundless. Recent rains had softened the earth. His spade met contact with the ground was only a moment later.

Kate looked at the great square stone with its fluted columns and dark windows. Its loneliness smote her. Never before had she thought of Mood Meadows as being dark for them, as they were lonely for it. Kate had herself forgotten them in the loneliness of a house that has gone dark.

Thud. Thud. Zeke's pick in the soft black earth. As he paused to wipe his face, Abby, who had now ended dirt with her spade. Presently Kate said, "Abby, you go and rest, and let me shovel dirt!" She felt that Abby's strength was not her will against the hated creature who lay sleeping behind those walls but all women are frail.

X X X

After a while a sort of security settled upon them. All three workers had become bolstered to stand guard. When they grew unbearably weary, they rested. Then they commenced again.

How long now had the dull sound of spade pick been disturbing their ears? For hours, surely. The trench was almost as deep as they could reach.

"Deep enough!" Kate whispered to Zeke. "Now, Abby, you and I will get the silver!" Kate, with her physical strength now spent, knelt at the hole and sat on the ground and mused fiercely.

It was August morning the shade would've been just where we're dug. The sun would've been closer to the trunk. But we can't go closer. Pompey would've avoided the roots. . . . Pompey knew the right place. I tell you! Why Pompey knew!

By now both Abby and Zeke took their turns in the hole, Kate knew the silver to be there. They themselves worked it lying humbled and resigned, quite forlorn on asking Jeff Howard's permission, or at least telling him after it was found to do. And what would happen then, Kate?

"Time we got to diggin', silver'd be gone, maybe."

"Yes," said Kate. "He'd beat us to it." She believed Jeff Howard would also at seeming to be kind and humble her. Though he might neither need nor covet the buried silver, he would withhold it from Kate if he could.

"Would any of you chucks like to make a bet on this race?" says Mudder McBride.

"The only one you would lay a nickel on," says Harry(the Pimhead "is the hoss."

"You are right," says Mudder, "I would bet my life that she wins this event."

"That is not enough," says Harry without cracking a smile.

"Make it a big bet," says I, "Make it ten bucks."

Mudder is perfectly willing to bet ten bucks on the blonde or ten times ten. But there are no takers because nobody knows who will win the novelty event with eight lady jocks mounted up on eight mean fillies. It is a big drawing card but as Barney McGinnis says, with all females riding the hides, who knows what will happen? Maybe they will ride backwards or as most of the lady jocks are chorus girls, maybe they will go into a dance routine in the middle of the stretch.

But though Mudder cannot find anybody to bet, he is very much excited over the event. Just the same and he is rooting for Ila Pratt, the girl blond in the octet.

"The girl what wins this race," he says, "gets $500 bonus and a residein a three-year contract to ride around the ovals here on the West coast. And as Ila has been an unemployed chorus girl for the past four years, she needs that dough and that job very much, indeed."

"So you want us to look down and cry," I say, "at this awful sad story of the poor little working girl?"

"It is impossible to wring a tear out of you stony-hearted chucks," says Mudder, knocking me down dead if looks could kill.

"Well," says Harry, as the girls lay on their parade. In the post parade, "with the faces and figures that these girls have got, I do not think they would starve to death even on a desert island."

"Not with Mudder around," I say and duck.

"It is enough!" yells Mudder, finally blowing up at our kidding. "His last get is the best entry by fair means or foul."

"Either way is okay," I explain, "but I am very wisely decided to suspend all rules for this race, because if flying tackling would only break them, anyway, So, no matter what happens, no rider will be disqualified; they do not need to give the rest of the field galloping space and they can cut in for the rail position whenever they like. And as there is a couple of rough and ready cowgirls riding, believe me, gentlemen, we are going to see some fireworks, and I only hope nobody gets hurt."

And then we cut the chatter because the hides are all in position at the barrier. The starter clangs the bell and they are off!

Ila Pratt gets off to a beautiful start, but just before the clubhouse turn, the three following hides go for her in a gang. As soon as they are up with her, they all shove Ila wide, try to run into the rail. For a second it looks like she is going to be in a nasty fall, but she waggles out of it somehow and swings around on the turn though now the rest of the field is ahead of her.

Then the two cowgirls who are in the lead start fighting for the rail position and in the mix-up they both go down in the dust and their mounts run off the riderless. I am afraid some one is hurt but when I grab my field glasses on them I see they both get up okay and sit on the rail; and as the pack goes flying by them, they both start bawling like their hearts would break.

Now the field goes around the far turn with Ila Pratt way back in fifth position and it looks like she will finish up last or thereabouts. But as they swing into the home stretch, and head down towards the grandstand and the finish line, Ila gives her mount the bat plenty and moves up alongside the hide in fourth place. They are neck and neck for a second and then the other hide drops back. Ila now goes after the third horse and when she catches up, the same thing happens. Then Ila is even with the second hide and she goes flying around only break them, anyway. So, no matter what happens, no rider will be disqualified; they do not need to give the rest of the field galloping space and they can cut in for the rail position whenever they like. And as there is a couple of rough and ready cowgirls riding, believe me, gentlemen, we are going to see some fireworks, and I only hope nobody gets hurt."

Driver, Take Care of Self And One Other Driver

This Would be a Means of Reducing Highway Calamities

(From "One Motorist to Another")

By John T. ("Try") Courtney)

I have a few suggestions which ought to cut automobile accidents in this province down about 50 per cent over night—well, anyway, by the middle of next week.

My first suggestion to all motorists is: Drive carefully enough for yourself and the other fellow too, because the chances are he isn't.

The present system is to let the other fellow take care of us—but look at the figures for last year: over 200 killed and more than 10,000 injured in Ontario. That can't be such a good idea. My suggestion is for each of us to take care of himself and one other driver, too. Don't you think it's a dandy plan?

If everybody agreed to this system, we'd have twice as much motoring carefulness and courtesy as we need in the world—instead of half enough as at present.

I've often heard it said that 11 isn't fast drivers who cause accidents, but statistics gathered by the Accident Recording Division of the Department of Highways upset this glib philosophy with figures showing that nearly 1,200 accidents last year were the result of excessive speeds. So there!

Hurry. There's the hub of this whole accident business. Probably nine-tenths of our automobile accidents are caused by people trying to save five minutes. We rush like mad to get somewhere, and it doesn't amount to much when we get there. Methods of locomotion have improved greatly in recent years, but places to go have remained about the same. If we have an appointment with somebody, the chances are, anyway, that he'll be 10 or 15 minutes late, so what's all the rush about?

If everybody in Ontario would resolve to contribute five minutes a day to the cause of automobile safety, we could cut the death and accident toll in two. Five minutes a day, Brother, can you spare five minutes a day?

A little ordinary courtesy would help, too. We are usually pretty peaceful in our attitude towards our fellow man, but the minute some of us get behind a steering wheel, we seem to regard every man as our enemy. We'll be damned if we'll let that fellow pass us or get across the street ahead of us first. I'd say, Aw, let him pass you or let him beat you to the crossing. So what? You don't have to prove to him that your car has the greatest pick-up in all creation, or that you are the master motorist of all time. A little allowance and Gasten stuff would help us keep folks out of hospitals and cemeteries.

A careful study of tables of last year's motor car death and accident causes shows that a large percentage were the result of unnecessary hurry, carelessness, and lack of courtesy or consideration of the rights and comforts of others. And nearly all of these could have been avoided if every driver had started out every morning with the resolution to drive carefully enough for himself and the other fellow too, and to tax himself five minutes a day for the greatest cause of automobile safety, and to show his fellow humans just a wee bit of ordinary, every-day courtesy.

Reasonable Speed in Driving Saves Money and Many Lives

High Speeds Costly in Oil And Gas 'And in Rubber

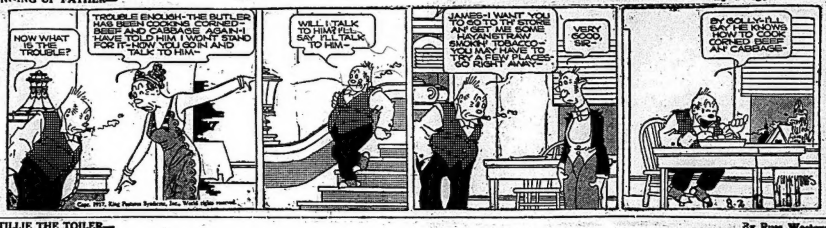
REDUCING ACCIDENTS

Highway Toll Low if Drivers go Slow Says Prevention Association

Toronto, July 31—Do you want to save money over Civic Holiday week-end? Increase yur tire mileage? Cut down your oil bills? Get more miles to the gallon of gas? Such questions may seem far removed from accident prevention programs, but in appealing to automobile operators through the pocketbooks, the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations is pointing out, in a special report just issued, that "when you keep your speed down you save lives," since lower speeds give greater control of the car and help avoid accidents.

At high speeds, oil is consumed faster than at reasonable speeds; tire wear is greater; gasoline consumption is much greater; and there is a greater wear and tear on the car itself when running at unreasonably high speeds.

Excessive speed increases the cost of operating a car, whereas the thinking motorist who drives at a reasonable rate of speed is not only reducing his costs but obeying the law in his consideration of all who are travelling on the streets and highways.



"This is something to think about;" the report concludes, "drive at a reasonable speed and save money—and save lives.

JAPANESE GUNS, TANKS AND AEROPLANES DEFEAT CHINESE TROOPS

There is no war between China and Japan but Japanese troops, like the machine-gun squad pictured above, hammered at the gates of Peiping until the poorly equipped Chinese soldiers were forced to retreat with heavy losses. The above photograph is one of the first actual warfare scenes to reach Canada.

AS ITALIAN STATESMEN PAID RESPECTS TO LATE INVENTOR

Led by Premier Benito Mussolini (centre foreground) hundreds of Italian statesmen and prominent leaders, pay their last respects to their famous friend Senator Guglielmo Marconi, the inventor of practical use of wireless. Marconi died at his home in Rome of a heart attack attributed to his unremitting and strenuous work. The body of the late genius is shown leaving the Royal Academy at Rome.

CHINESE TROOPS RETREAT FROM PEIPING AFTER SAVAGE BATTLE

After several battles outside Peiping, the Chinese 26th route army is said to have retreated leaving thousands dead and wounded on the battlefield. The ragged Chinese army had fought hopelessly with swords and homemade firearms against Japanese machine-guns, tanks and aeroplanes. Scenes like the one above are once more the rule as Japan enforces its demands that Chinese troops withdraw from the vicinity of Peiping. Here you see one of the many troops' trains used to rush reinforcements to the battle area.
